"You could a-knocked me down with a feather an' not half tried, an' pap he simply laid back in his chair as if he was goin' into a conniption then an' there. Afore I had time to say a solitary word John he took the hired girl by the arm an' said: 'This is your daughter, Mrs. John Furbay,' an' he put his arm around her an' led her up to me an' said: 'kiss your mother, darling,' an' afore I knew what I was a-doin' I had my arms around her neck an' was givin' her a good huggin'. Pap he thought it was a good joke on me an' he pretends I had made other plans, but I found out a good while ago that I couldn't tell him a secret without it's gettin' all over the country, an' I fooled him this time if ever mortal man was fooled."

"Waal I should say you did," assented Uncle Si. "You even fooled yourself."—Harry Newell Carew, in Ohio Farmer.

The Charity of Death.

"The man I marry," she said, fondly, "must possess all the graces and none of the failings of his sex."

"You are worthy of it," he rejoined, edging closer.

"He must be upright, generous, witty, bright, vivacious, keen, cutting, splendid."

"Yes."

"He must be loving, forgiving, willing, able, lively, dashing, valorous."

"Yes."

"He must be succinct, precise, determined, candid, rich, handsome, tender."

"He must."

"And blue-eyed, and white-winged, and musical, and lyrical, and poetical, and rhapsical."

"I have a plan," said the man on the sofa. "I think I can find a man for you."

"My darling!" she fluttered, looking worlds and worlds, and preparing to pucker her lips.

"You will find your man in the graveyard. Only men of extraordinary virtues die, you know," he said, edging away and reaching for his hat, "it is tolerably certain that few of the other kind survive."

WHAT GIRLS DISLIKE.

Half a Dozen Instances Where They Expressed Themselves.

I asked a bevy of bright girls to-day what they most dislike in man.

Said No 1:

"I dislike to have him make apologies for his dress. A man should never speak of his clothes to a lady."

Said No. 2:

"I dislike to have a man agree with me in everything I say and never offer an amendment."

Said No. 4:

"I dislike a man who talks on one subject until he exhausts it and me. I want him to change the topic before I am tired of it."

Said No. 5:

"I loathe a man who is afraid of drafts, and who is forever fussing about doors and windows, irrespective of other people's comfort."

Said No. 6:

"I detest a cynical man who has no faith in human nature or motives, and who is always talking pessimism."

So now, my dear boys, put this in your pipe and smoke it!—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

All Arguments Fail.

The lady was trying to persuade a very homely bachelor that he ought to marry.

"Why," she said, "don't you know that it improves a man's personal appearance more than fifty per cent. to marry a pretty woman?"

"No, I don't," he replied aggressively.

"Well, it does just the same," she persisted.

"How?"

"Simply enough; his better half is handsome. See?"

But he wouldn't.—Detroit Free Press.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—It is reported that 9 Jewish rabbis, 200 priests and 3,000 Jews have been converted, and are now members of the church of England.

—Three hundred woman-students are in attendance at the Boston university. Of this number, forty-three are in the medical department, seven in the law school and eleven in the school of theology.

—The bishop of London has raised a small tempest in a small teapot by appointing diocesan lay-readers with the right to preach in parish churches. Some of the clergy think that the innovation will lower the dignity of the cloth.

—The school of pedagogy in the university of the city of New York is a success. Its object is to give graduates of other schools and colleges preparation for teaching, and it is conducted on the same basis as the schools of law, medicine and theology.

—The chapter of St. Peter's cathedral has submitted to his holiness, the pope, the designs for the golden throne which the chapter, in co-operation with all the other Roman Catholic cathedrals of the world, will present to his holiness. The throne is designed in Gothic form, and will cost 500,000 francs.

—Twenty-seven years ago there was hardly a college-bred negro living; now there 1,000 college-bred ministers in the southern states. Then there were two newspapers edited by colored men; now there are 154. In 1865 there were two negro attorneys; now there are 250. Then there were three colored physicians; there are now 749. To-day there are 247 colored students in the universities of Europe.

—A papal encyclical has been issued directing that on October 12 the mass of the Trinity be celebrated in the Catholic churches of Spain, Italy and America in honor of Columbus. Bishops of other nations are also invited to say the same mass. The pope takes the position that Columbus was primarily inspired by the Catholic faith, being animated by the spirit of religion in a degree far different from that of others who have prosecuted voyages of discovery.

—The African Methodist Episcopal church reports a bench of 12 bishops, 9 general officers, 4,150 traveling preachers, 9,913 local preachers, 475,565 members, with 1,484,000 followers, 53 annual conferences, including the United States and territories, the Canadas, Nova Scotia, British West Indies, British Guiana, a conference in Hayti, San Domingo, and two in Africa. The amount expended annually for religious and educational purposes is $1,588,353.

—Mlle. Virginie Mauvais, who died recently, was the oldest and one of the most successful teachers in France. As a girl she was trained according t Rousseau's theories, and did not lear to read until she was eighteen. She retired from her position as teacher at the age of forty-five, having amassed a fortune of half a million francs. She left everything to charity, and desired that she should be buried with a laurel wreath upon her coffin as a token of her life-long fight against fanaticism and ignorance.

ALPHABETS OF THE WORLD.

Some Curious Facts and Funny Stories Concerning the Letters.

It isn't always a hard thing to learn the alphabet, nor, on the other hand, is it always easy. It all depends upon the country you were born in and the size of the alphabet used there whether it comes hard or easy. To those of you who know only one alphabet—the one that contains twenty-six letters from A to Z—this sounds like an absurd sort of a thing to say; but in reality it is not. The Sandwich island boy, who has only his own alphabet to learn, has a much easier time getting his lesson than most of us have, for his alphabet contains but twelve letters, while the Ethioptic and Tartarian boys—poor fellows!—have to learn 202 letters before they can truthfully say that they know their alphabet. Other alphabets have letters as follows: The Burmese, 19; the Italian, 20; the Bengalese, 21; the Hebrew, Syriac, Chaldee, Samaritan and Latin, 22 each; the French, 23; the Greek, 24; the German and Dutch, like our own, 26; the Spanish and Sclavonic, 27 each; the Arabic, 28; the Persian and Coptic, 32; the Georgian, 25; the Armenian, 38; the Russian, 41; the Muscovite, 43; the Sanscrit and Japanese, 50, and, finally, the Ethiopic and Tartarian, as we have already seen, 202.

A funny story is told which shows the curious effect of a defect in the Russian alphabet. The church of St. Alexander Nevskoi, at St. Petersburg, is named after the canonized Grand Duke Alexander, whose remains were brought there in a silver coffin. In this church lies the body also of the famous Russian Gen. Hannibal. A guide, pointing out the spot where the mortal part of the deceased general lay at rest, informed a traveler that there rested the body of a "Cannibal." This extraordinary statement led to an investigation by the traveler, who learned that the Russian alphabet has no H, using the letter K therefor, so that the guide's attempt to identify Hannibal with Kannibal was explained.

Another alphabet story is to the effect that Herodes the Greek, to overcome the dullness of his son Atticus, educated along with him twenty-four little slaves of his own age, upon whom he bestowed the names of the Greek letters, one letter for each, so that the youthful and stupid Atticus might be compeled to learn the alphabet as he played with his companions, now calling Omicron, now Psi, now Alpha, and now Omega.—Harper's Young People.

Rather Heavy.

Mrs. Peterby, who has heretofore been very poor, but just come into possession of some money, went to Mose Schaumburg's emporium for the purpose of buying a silk dress for the first time in her life.

"I dinks dot dis batern will choost suit you ven it vas not too heavy for you. Dot vas very heavy siluck," said Mose.

"As far as the weight of the silk is concerned," said Mrs. Peterby, with great dignity, "if it is too heavy for me to carry you can send it to the house in a delivery wagon."—Texas Siftings.

A Mystified Broker.

Wall Street Broker (benevolently)—Let me see. I believe you are the boy I bought a paper of yesterday, when I didn't have change. I owe you three cents. Here it is.

Newsboy (who isn't the boy)—Never mind, mister. Keep it fer y'r honesty.—Good News.

TOPOGRAPHY OF CALIFORNIA.

The Average Tourist, Slipping Through Sees Little of the State.

The geological causes which gave to California its singular surface configuration have been for nearly fifty years a subject of the deepest interest for scientists; for in no other part of the country have subterraneous and superterrene forces wrought with such stupendous energy and startling result. Nor has the first-named of these mighty energies, which in the ages past lifted up great regions and flooded vast areas with lava, yet ceased its operations; geysers in the canyons, solfataras in slumbering craters, and an occasional tumbler give evidence that the giant under the earth is tossing feebly in his deathbed. To stand thus and see him die, even though in his harmless struggle he terrify the strongest of us, is a thing worth doing; to observe the mighty works of his early fury, softened as they are by his milder coadjutors, flood and glacier—both born long after him and dead these many centuries—and to notice over all these mighty wrecks, distortions and lacerations the kindliest touch of present nature in her sweetest mood, is to add reverence to understanding and give a finer form of life.

The average "tourist," slipping through the fingers of the Almighty scurries gregariously through the state, from Los Angeles to Mount Shasta, sees strange and beautiful semi-tropic products cultivated in broad acres, visits Yosemite and stands head covered at the foot of El Capitan, stops sometimes to see the most gorgeous ocean, passes all his spare time in luxurious hotels, lounges comfortably in a sleeping-car while passing under the shadow of the great dead volcano of the north, and after all this he has seen—California? No. He has seen a strange and beautiful picture, but not a thousandth part of the grandeur of it all. For knowledge must precede understandingly and intelligent perception is the best pleasure that travel can afford. In the topography of California reside its greater marvels. Railroads follow the lines of least resistance. Traffic is a child of commerce; the spectacular is merely an instrument of the utilitarian. All this means to say—first, that for a proper appreciation of the topography of California one ought not only to learn what is new, but forget what is old; second, that the railroads, following the easiest path, are but an invitation to see and enjoy the nobler things that lie beyond the right of way. —Lippincott's.

When Widows Marry.

When a widow takes unto herself a second husband, no matter if she is only twenty years old, she must have the ceremony conducted on principles that correspond with the important fact that she is not a blushing bride who goes to the altar for the first time. The maid of thirty can don pure white garments, hide her somewhat mature charms under a veil of tulle, be followed by a procession of young girls and have little boys for ushers if she so wills, but the widow of twenty must remember that she is a woman of experience. No white gown or veil for her, no bridemaids and no ushers unless they be married men. Yes, the verdict has gone forth and the second venture must be invested with a certain dignity. Therefore none but married people can form a part of the bridal party. The bridemaids must be matrons and the ushers and best man benedicts. Gray is the nearest approach to the snowy-white garments that a widow is permitted to wear and a dainty bonnet replaces the traditional veil. Fashion dictates and we obey.—Philadelphia Times.

"Hail, Columbia."

That is what old Christopher Columbus probably would have sung, if he had known the song, on the 14th day of October, 1492. The way had been long and weary, groping in the dark for the unknown, and these shores, no doubt, seemed a "happy land" to him. Poor servant of an effete monarchy, he never could have believed, had he been told, that four hundred years from that morning his discovery would be celebrated at a place to be called Chicago, by a people numbering sixty millions, who had no king over them. Christopher's mistake was that he did not become a citizen, and grow up with the country, instead of going back to Spain to feel the ingratitude of a monarchy. We shall celebrate on the 20th, because some few hundred years ago Pope Gregory turned forward the hands on the Clock of Time, and what was then the 14th is now the 20th. When you go to Chicago to witness the ceremonies Oct. 20th to 22d, buy your tickets over the Burlington, at a reduced rate, as the best, quickest and most comfortable line. Apply to your home agent, or address W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agent, St. Paul, Minn.

The Maple Lake News is reported as having gone back to Lake Benton from whence it came.

The Montrose News had a fire on Saturday last. Editor Scott tipped the lamp over and the oil spilling on the floor became ignited and filled the small office with flames which damaged the office so we hear a new outfit will be required to resume business. A subscription paper has already been started to aid in re-establishing the news. A paper is a good thing to have in a town.

The M. E. Conference convened at at Minneapolis the past week and have left John Stafford P. E. for the Minneapolis district. Annandale G. W. Kenneston; Buffalo and Rockford, C. F. Political Pointers.

Mr. McDonald of Annandale was a Delano visitor on Tuesday looking after his legislative fences.

American tin plate has been worn in this county by, Buckley, Billings and French, and we hear that county Treasurer McKnight now has a sample

Among candidates at the fair on Saturday we noticed Valentine Eppel, F. B. Lampson, and H. C. Bull, Swanstrom of Cokato, George Carpenter, W. H. Cutting and W. E. Culkin, of Buffalo and Charles Bugbee of Rockford.

Old Soldiers who are anxious to vote for a comrade should remember major Baldwin, a member of the old Iron brigade which lost more men in action than any other like body in the war. They should also remember W. H. Cutting, who also carries his badge with him, and who is a candidate for the second term of County Attorney.

Wright county held its p. p., county convention last week and voted 22 to 9 against fusion. We cannot imagine where those 6 came from, but we know where they will go to! God will lay his heavy hand on those who propose to destroy this mighty movement for the sake of some little office!--The Great West.

We understand that one of the nine came from Sherburne county and accepted a nomination for the Legislature, and is liable to be endorsed by the manipulator of Democracy and if elected can be depended on to vote for anything for office.

Democratic County Ticket.

For Auditor, A. J. Whitaker, is a young man well fitted for the place.

For Treasurer, Frank McKnight has been around collecting tax and needs no recommend to most of you.

For Register of deeds, Isaac Podas is the same you elected two years ago, and has given satisfaction.

For Sheriff, Valentine Eppel, Delano's old wheat buyer, is known as an honest industrious capable man. He is not a capitalist and voters need not expect him to spend a fortune to be elected. If you elect him you will have a good one.

For County Attorney Cutting is making a manly fight for re-election. He is before the voters on his record. If you wish a county attorney to stand by the laws re-elect W. H. Cutting.

For Judge of Probate, Ashley C. Riggs is a well known old settler. If elected will doubtless discharge the duties of the office in an acceptable manner.

County Superintendent of Schools, John F. Collins, is a graduate of Wisconsin University, and capable of examining teachers and visiting schools in a satisfactory manner.

For County Commissioner of the 3rd District; Charles Bugbee of Rockford, is in the field to win.

38th District Legislative Ticket; Hon. H. C. Bull; Hon. Henry Berning; Hon. J. L. Harwick; Have each served a term and are well known to our voters.

Buffalo Business.

The Commissioners of Wright County are getting desperate. John Schefchik being on the official bonds of the County Attorney with two others, filed a request with the board, Oct. 11, to be relieved, as he considered himself "insecure and unsafe." The board passed a resolution directing the County Attorney to furnish a new bond for their approval by Nov. 3.

As the commissioners are so very anxious to get rid of the present attorney they will, in all probability, refuse to approve any bond he may present to them so there will be music in the air, in their anxiety to build the Monticello bridge, they will probably declare the office vacant and appoint either Culkin or Tarbox, long enough to pull the $22,500 out of the County Treasury but "the best laid schemes of mice and men gang aft aglee" and this is one of them.

Mr. Cutting has stood by the taxpayers of Wright Co. and the taxpayers are going to stand by him. They know that the County Attorney cannot interfere with the Commissioners if they proceed according to law, but that it is his duty to interfere if the commissioners act illegally.

Nothing could better illustrate the utter incompiteney and imbecility of the present board of commissioners. The attorney elected by the people will be County Attorney in spite of them.

When Knute Nelson was about to retire from politics, he became conscientious and voted for and advocated a lower tariff tax. When it was made for his interest to enter politics again, he goes back on his old record and declares that the higher the tariff the better are the people off. What use have Minnesotians for such a double dealing, back action hypocrite? If he knew the tariff of '38 was a robbery, how can the higher tariff of '90 help them any? Is a man with so plastic a mind and a conscience so elastic, a safe person to intrust the interest of the people with?—Le Sueur Sentinel.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize of the GRAND PRIZE—[illegible]—the seven other companies only seven, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory.

Democrats of Rockford.

On Friday evening a Democratic rally was held at Rockford. The G. A. R. Hall was well filled. Prominent Democrats were present from neighboring towns, Buffalo, Delano, Waverly and Cokato being represented. The first speaker introduced by Chairman Wendell, was Harry Hawkins, candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, who made an able and interesting speech. He pointed out some of the evils of the protective system. That the farmer sells in a free market and is obliged to buy in a protected one he claims to be wrong. Aggregation of capital as now going on, was also denounced. The speaker said Wright county has about 5000 voters and about 5000 mortgages, or about one mortgage to every voter in the county. [Here Sheriff Nugent, who was an attentive listener was heard to exclaim, in a tone loud enough to be heard by those near, "That's so."] Mr. Hawkins then said "Slaves are people who have 100 per cent of their earnings appropriated by some one else." The drawback system exposes the workings of the tariff laws. Manufacturers can sell in foreign markets cheaper than at home when the raw material entering into their goods has been subjected to a tariff duty, which, in case the goods are shipped out of the country is, nearly all paid back, under the drawback clause. The army record of the candidate for Congress was touched upon and "as my friend the Major is getting so terribly anxious to speak" he gave way to him.

Major Baldwin began by saying that for the first time in his life, during this campaign his Democracy had been questioned. Why, he said, I was born a Democrat. In April, 1861, I joined the army a Democrat. I was promoted to Major as a Democrat. Spent fifteen months in Andersonville and other prisons a Democrat. Came home a Democrat. And am still a Democrat. A man at the nominating convention said my title was good and he would make me a loan on it. I am a Grover Cleveland and a Daniel W. Lawler Democrat. He talked mostly concerning transportation of grain to the seaboard, "Deep Water Ways". The National Park scheme and other matters of particular importance to people of the Sixth Congressional District. He proved himself fully qualified to speak on these subjects. Water transportation of wheat he claimed was considered eight times cheaper than rail transportation, and that by having 21 feet of water in the rivers connecting the Great Lakes, wheat transportation to old countries would be done about 10cts per bushel less than at present; that would enhance the value of land. The next Congress will be Democratic. The State has leased its iron lands for $150,000, this year, $200,000 next year and, after that, the rent will pay the State taxes. St. Louis county asks a representative in Congress. The Republicans denied them this privilege. The National Park idea of one sixth the territory of Minnesota being set aside for that purpose he denounced as a pine land scheme. It would, also, result in depriving Duluth of an air line Rail Road to the golden grain fields of the West. I never held a public office. My opponent has for 26 years. His case has become chronic. But I am thankful that it is curable. I desire to shake the hand of every old comrade in the house to-night, before leaving.

J. Adam Bede, of Duluth, was then introduced as the Proctor Knott, of Minnesota, and in one of his characteristic speeches, entertained and instructed the audience for a short time, giving most attention to an analysis of the Free List of the McKinley bill, on which he found many things for which he thought farmers must have little if any use in this part of the country, such as kangaroos with the hair on, fishes bladders, rennet, cat gut, ice, asses skins, bones, old rubber boots etc., he made some rather cutting remarks and some of the Republicans were not pleased by them.

The meeting was a great success and was well received.

The Black Knight.

The prohibitionists had Rev. Hector the Black Knight, to talk to them on their favorite subject, at Armstrong on Thursday evening last week. He said he had lost respect for the peoples party leader, Mr. Donnely, as the Prohibitionists had hired a hall in a town up the line and had him waiting for the arrival of Mr. Donnelly on the train, and who was to hold a meeting there at the same time, when Mr. D was met at the train and asked to share the time with a Prohi speaker, he asked "who is it," and on being told that it was Rev. Hector he said "I will not meet him." Mr. Hector is a good talker and said there was a great deal to say about the democratic party but the republicans had lots more. The town hall was crowded and the audience seemed well pleased, the songs took well.

Rockford Republicans.

H. L. Smith, and daughter spoke to the Republicans at Rockford yesterday evening. We did not arrive on the scene until about 10 P. M. but in time to hear the gentleman's earnest recital of his war record. And go for trusts a little. He took the ground that the raising of the price on coal was a great blessing to us western farmerrs as it enables us to better prices for our wood. We differ somewhat with the gentlemen here. If our native forests are allowed to stand they are worth more every year to the farmers in preventing droughts than the whole amount received by them each year for wood sold. It would be wiser to preserve our forest as far as possible and look out for a means of securing as cheap fuel as possible from other sources for ourselves. Our big woods are going fast enough without the aid of trust fostered by protective tariff laws. The Buffalo Band made the music for the occasion.

From the Globe we learn that the Great Northern Railway company has elected the following officers for the following year, and it was a re-election of all the old officers: President, James J. Hill, St. Paul; vice president, Col. W. P. Clough, St. Paul; secretary, E. T. Nichols, New York, and treasurer E. Sawyer, St. Paul.

having allowed the charge to be published. Congress will bd asked by tnese Indians to repay them this money they will ceaim and Capt. Lee says they can prove, fraudulently deducted from the amount appropriated for them and payed to lawyers who nevea done anything in return therefor. It will probaly be fully investigated by Congress.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C. Oct. 14, 1892.

"Sacrifice every thing to save the National ticket." That is the substance of the confidential order that has been sent to every republican distric boss in several close doutful States. Do you know what it means? It means that the reports received by the republican managers from every congresional disin the contry have convinced them of the impossiblity of getting a majority in the house of Representatives and that they will give up thefight for Congressmen in the close and doubtful States, and to sacrifice even thoes candidates who are running in certain certain republican districts, if votes can be traided aginst them so as to inthe votefor the republicon electoral ticket in those States. New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, and Indiana are the States in which the trading is to be attempted. It is abole schene, but it to be "tried on" and to becom victoms have been, betwee pleasure and promises, made to acquiesce therein; a few are "kicking," but they will probaly be whiped some way or other.

There can be little doubt that the objeetive of the republicans in bringing the question of constitutionality of the new Michigan electoral law, providing for the elección of Presidential electors by Congressional districts insted of electing all of them on one ticket, befor the U. S. Supreme Coart is to obtain a political dicison, similar to the notorious 8 to 7 decision of 1877. The question was argued before the court this week, and republicans are boldly claiming that the law will be declared unconstitunal before election; but it is hardly probable that a majority of the court will sanction the claim by voting for such a decision. The case was brought befor the court is a private one, and cohtary to all precedent, the Attorney-Genneral of the United States appered as the leading council on the republican side; but he is not hardly to blame for taking such an unusual course, as it is stated by thosein a position to know, and generally beleived that he was acting under the orders of the republican bosses. All the same it was a improper proceeding although probably not illegal, Thiss was recognized by the Atturney-General himself, who took especial pains to have it known that it appears in the case as private counsell and not in his offical capasity. Lawyers of all political opinion commented unfavorably on the innovation and I failed to find one who beleived that Mr. Miller received a fee for his argument.

Indian Bureau officials are very much worked up over the charge made by Capt. J. M. Lee, an army officer who was detailed by Gen. Miles, commander of the departmemt of the Missouri, to investagate in the mater, that they had aybroved aclaim for $67,500 counsel feesand paid out the money thereon without warrant for law or equlity. The money was paid to Samuel J. Crawford, D. B Dyer, and John D. Miles, of Kansas, and M. G. Reynods, of St Louis, out of the $1,500,000 approprated to pay for the lands of the Cheyenne and Arrapahoe Indians the alleged contract upon which it was paid was no contract at all, having been obtained from some of these Indians by fraud and bribery. Reynolds ond of the lawyers who pocketed this big fee, is a particular friend of Secretary Noble, a fact which was not overlooked by the officials who passed upon and approved the so-called contract, and it is said that Noble has quarreiee with Secretary Elking for

RAILROAD CONTINUED.

Early in 1867 the St. P. M. & M. R. R. completed its line to Wayzata and during that year surveys were continued west fron Twelve Mile Creek following the 1857 survey to the edge of Big Woods south of Forest City and north of the present site of Darwin. In 1868 the latter survey was changed from Smith Lake westward to its present location and at the close of that year the iron was laid to Smith Lake and during 1869 the line was surveyed and completed to Willmar.

Wayzata was the only townsite, previously laid out, touched by the R. R. surveys. The beginnings and locations of the other villages followed the construction of the R. R., being built at points established by the R. R. Co., as stations, the locations of which, during the several months occupied in construction of the line, was a matter of much interest to the early settler; the R. R. company being disposed to be reticent in the matter.

WAYZATA.

In 1865 in prospect an early completion of R. R. to that point Wayzata began to have new life, O. B. Matteson who had been absent since 1857 returned, rebuilt a hotel on the same site on which Wm Dudley's hotel was burnt, 1860. He was soon followed by Henry and Louis Dudley of New York in the line of merchandising. The P. O. was re-established under the name of Freeport, Wayzata being objectionable to some of the new comers, but the new could not down the old. The traditional name Wayzata still lived and in the course of a year it was restored as the name of the P. O. The Dudleys were soon followed by Smith and Ray merchandise. The Dudley's being both invalids did not live to carry on their business beyond a period of a year or two.

These partles were succeeded by other firms, viz James Dudley and Harrington & Ray.

About the time of the completion of the long looked for R. R., to Wayzata Henry Maurer and Wm. Rockwell constructed and opened a hotel and summer resort and about that time O. B. Matteson died and he was supersided by — Gleason.

Since those days and extending to the present George Hedderly and Wm. Bushnell have been indentified with the merchandising business and Henry Maurer and family and the Gleason families with the Hotel business.

The business establishmenta at present are Bushwell and Favrom General J. I. Tibbetts, M. D. Physician, Mrs. West Hotel. E. B. Gleason, M. M. Dickey and others in various business enterprises. P. E. Westerwelt Carpenter and House remover. iness. —Bryant Feed store Ephraim Harrington, Feed, Jeremiah Doughetry Butcher. There is also a Congregational Church at Wayzata.

Long Lake embodies Orono history. In 1866 —Freeman and E. W. Cutter began the erection of steam saw mill on the southwesterly shore of Long Lake and on the survey of the St. P. & P. R. R. which was the beginning of Long Lake. The country surrounding Long Lake was then within the limits of the town of Medina and and Excelsior. In a few months —Freeman sold his interest in the saw mill to Capt. Arthur Mills following which George Condit of Chicago bought an interest in the enterprise, so the firm became known as Mills, Cutter&Condit. They completed the mill adding machinery for the manufacture of barrel staves and heading at the same time opening up a general store on the premises. The store was sold to J. F. Law soon after but the manufacturing plant, although at no time remunerative, was carried on by Mills, Cutter and Condit till 1868 when it was sold to Alex Syme, David Syme, and Charles May of Menasha, Wis., who soon made the plant a succes. The firm was known as May & Co. They openen a store in connection with their establishment. In 1869 J. F. Low removed his store to Darwin. About 1870 E. M. Snow and P. Parish opened a hotel and David A. Lydiard and Beny Drake bought May and Co's. store and continued in business till 1876 when they dissolved partnership; Lydiard continnueing in the business at Long Lake. In 1875 a flouring mill company was organized and erected what was known as the Medina Mills. The company consisted of Samuel, D. A. and J. H. Lydiard I. A. Christlieb, E. Dickey W. H. Braden Rob't Logan John Burns, E. M. Snow and others. The following mill after passing from the Medina Mill Co. through hands of Crosswell & Syme, Syme & De Mott, and De Mott & Shuler was destroyed by fire 1885. In 1877, B. F. Christlieb and J. H. Lydiard succeeding Wm. Hendricks opened a general store under the firm name of Christlieb & Lydiard which business continued till 1889 when the partnership was dissolved, B. F. Christlieb succeeded in the business.

In 1875 John Schmitz erected his hotel which was carried on by Thomas Hellier till 1877 when the proprietor took charge, since 1880 the proprietor has successively rented the hotel to A. J. Rosander O. T. Olson and O. T. Duvon being now operated by O. T. Olson.

About 1884 D. A. Lydiard sold his his store to Thomas and Absalom Hellier who during 1884, sold to Lawrence Brothers who are continueing the business at present.

Besides the above, the following parties are in business at present, viz: Frank Smith, Blacksmith; E. A. Ekstrom, wagonmaker; E. Biorklund, Black Smith; George A. Alley, House and sign painter; J. B. Kingslev, P. M. Louis Hellier, Harness maker; Christian Hehl, Butcher, H. S. Johnson, Barber and mail carrier.

The Memorial Presbyterian was built in 18870. Rev Jas. Hunter, was the first minister. He was succeeded by Rev. Charles Thayer and other ministers amongst whomwere Rev. Mr. Williams lastly by Rev. Geo. Cullen.

Up to 1868 the towns of Medina and Excelsior occupied a congressional township, in which the citizens residing North of Lake Minnetonka in Excelsior found it very inconvenient to cross Lake Minnetonka to transact town business at Excelsior and upon their petition to the Board of County Commissioners in 1868 were annexed to Medina.

In 1880-81 the Minnetonka Branch of the Great Northern Railway was constructed and lands on the north shore and projecting peninsulars were purchased and platted through which the branch railroad was constructed, upon which line Hotel Lafayette was constructed and soon the lands which previously had only a nominal value were sold at high prices.

In 1884 the boundaries between Medina and Excelsior were again cuanged so as to bring Hotel Lafayette within the limits of Medina it made the latter a very large town, and in 1889 the town of Orono was erected out of territory constituting the south half of Medina. The following are the officers of Orono., viz Supervisors A. S. Gardner, chairman Milo Stubb and Carl Ekstrom, Town Clerk, A. E. Baily; Assessor George Maxwell, A. W. Cook and A. C. Baley Justices.

A "VENTILATED UMBRELLA" is on the market. In mercy's name, does the average umbrella need any freer circulation than it enjoys already?

THE largest greenback extant is a $10,000 bill, and only one such note has been printed by the government. Of the $5,000 bills, the next largest, there are seven.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES MAYDWELL, of Cincinnati, have been the proud parents of twenty-one children, twenty of whom are still living. Three pairs of twins are counted in the family census.

IT will afford much food for discussion and wonderment that $20,000,000 in gold could be on a train all the way from San Francisco to New York and the car porter not secure even a single cent of it.

WHILE, according to the European and American returns, the number of women always exceeds that of the men, the reverse is the case in Japan, where for every 100 men there are only 97.92 women.

THE soil of Hayti is so fertile that three crops are often raised in a year. The natives, however, are too indolent to avail themselves of these advantages, and they only work for enough to enable them to live.

SIR JOHN WHITTAKER ELLIS, who was lord mayor of London ten years ago, is about to visit the United States, and as he has given a solemn assurance that he will not write up the country he may count upon a hearty welcome.

IMPRISONMENT may help a man by giving him absolute leisure in which to think. M. Turpin, the inventor of the explosive melinite, who is now undergoing five years' imprisonment, claims to have finally solved the problem of aerial steering.

THREE warships will be launched next month, cruiser No. 6 at San Francisco, unarmored, 5,500 tons, and carrying a powerful battery; the Cincinnati, from the New York navy yard; and the Ammen ram, now building at the Bath iron works.

THE proposed electric railways between Chicago and St. Louis and Chicago and Milwaukee, upon which the rate of travel will be one hundred miles an hour, are not looked upon as impracticable by many thinking men, and capital has been attracted to the enterprises.

A KITTEN became lodged in a fly-wheel of an engine in Portland, Ore. The wheel ran for six hours and a half. The cat was taken out nearly lifeless, but recovered. The fly-wheel makes nearly 250 revolutions per minute, and every turn pussy traveled 17 feet. The engine was in motion 390 minutes, and during that time the kitten traveled a distance of 315 miles.

NEW YORK'S most notable capitalists are men of very simple habits, and some of the richest of them spend less than a well-paid clerk spends on minor personal pleasures. Very few of them use tobacco or liquor. It is said to be a rare thing for Jay Gould to have $100 in money in his pocket, and Russell Sage, John D. Rockefeller and C. P. Huntington carry but little ready cash with them. Mr. Sage keeps as careful a record of his small personal expenses as does a young housewife on a limited income.

NANCY HANKS, the most famous of trotters, having now beaten her own record and accomplished a mile in two minutes and four seconds, has removed all lingering doubts as to the genuineness of her previous exploits. All the ideas of the trotting turf are modified. That the two minute point will some day be reached is no longer doubted. Nancy Hanks herself may accomplish the feat, as she is but six years old, and the best records of Maud S. and Goldsmith Maid were achieved after they passed that age.

RECENT reports from central Africa are not encouraging to the progress of Christian civilization there. The Arabs, who are superior to the negroes, seem determined to rule the country. As Mohammedanism allows slavery, they welcome and support missionaries of their own faith and influence the natives against Christian missionaries. The Congo Free State does not contain white settlers enough to exert much influence. Obviously there must be concert of action between European states or "Darkest Africa" will be in a worse condition than it was before it was visited by Livingstone and Stanley.

THE report of the commissioner of pensions for the year ended June 1, 1892, shows that 25,626 patents have been granted, and 16,361 more were applied for. On an average 454 patents were granted every week in the year. They embraced every imaginable subject. They relate to the production of light, heat and power, to sailing through the air and on the water, to stopping railway trains, propelling vehicles, catching mice, killing insects and disinfecting ships. They include new kinds of food, drinks and tobacco pipes. They show that we are the greatest inventive nation on the earth.

IN 1891 1,168 persons were killed on railways in the British isles, according to the report of the British board of trade. Of these only 163 were passengers, and more than 400 were persons neither passengers nor employes, the number including trespassers and suicides. The total number of passenger trips, exclusive of those made on season tickets, was 845,463,668, which is 27,719,622 more than in 1890. Accurate returns of trips on season tickets would swell the list. But on the basis of these figures this proportion of passengers killed during the year was one in 8,208,385; of injured, one in 524,481.

LATER NEWS.

A Total Wreck.

HONG KONG, Oct. 12.—The Peninsular & Oriental steamship Bokhara has been totally wrecked. The steamer struck on a sand island off the group known as the Pecadors, or Fisher's island, called Pheng Hoo by the Chinese, in the channel of Fikon, in the China sea. The weather was terrible, and the raging waters quenched the fires on the steamer. She became unmanageable and sank, and the commander and a majority of the officers and crew were lost. Twenty-three persons only were saved. It is feared that those who were lost were mostly Europeans. The survivors will reach Hong Kong on Tuesday morning next. The steamship Anchonia has proceeded to the scene of the wreck.

An important decision was rendered by Justice Brewer, of the United States court of appeals the 17th affecting all of the railway legislation of the country. It is in fact a reversal of the hitherto prevailing construction of the "long and short haul" clause of the "interstate commerce law." It thus upsets the basis on which rests the tariff charges of every railroad in the country, and in so doing necessitates a revision of the rates; it declares the foundation supporting the railroad legislation of the western states to rest upon an erroneous view of the meaning, intent and legal effect of the much discussed clause; and it wipes out of existence the vast code of rules and regulations that has been adopted for the regulation of railroad matters. The decision is final so far as the particular case is concerned, and the principles established will have a bearing upon all questions arising under the "long and short haul" clause. It holds that no railroad is required to arrange its local rates on the basis of its through rates, and that through rates are entirely distinct from local rates whenever the through rate is established by a combination between two or more roads. In short it practically destroys the "long haul" clause of the inter-state law.

MANY ACCIDENTS.

A Street Car in Pittsburgh Runs Into a Body of Political Paraders—Two Youths Killed—Fatal Railway Disaster in Indiana—Other Serious Mishaps.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 17.—A disaster attended by loss of life befell a portion of the republican parade at 7:30 Saturday evening. The dead are Henry Akel, aged 15 years, and Ward Ruffner, aged 18. Ten others were more or less injured.

The Eleventh ward marching club, with the American national band, 140 strong, and some other organizations, were marching down Wylie avenue from the hill district, en route to the south side where the big republican parade was to take place. When near the Townsend street crossing a street car came down the incline with such headway that the gripman was unable to control it. The marching paraders separated right and left as rapidly as possible, but Henry Able, of Jacobus alley, aged 15, who was carrying a torch for the band, was knocked down and crushed under the front trucks.

The car stopped. Members of the band and of the parading club and others took hold of the car and just succeeded in backing it off the boy's mangled but living form when another car crashed into the living mass of willing helpers, ground them up against the front car and threw them right and left. This mishap pushed the trucks of car 51 again upon the boy Abel and instantly killed him. It also fatally injured Ward Ruffner, a member of the Eleventh ward marching club, and, in addition, injured seven other members. Ruffner had both legs crushed, received internal injuries and died at midnight.

AUBURN, Ind., Oct. 17.—A head-end collision occured Saturday morning 3 miles east of this place on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad. Charles Henthorn, of Obisco, Ind., head-end brakeman, and John Lanning, fireman, of Garrett, both of the west-bound train, were fatally injured. Engineer Jack Harrison, of the west-bound train, had orders to sidetrack at Inverness. He is said to have forgotten his orders and had just passed the Inverness switch when the east-bound freight crashed into his engine. The dense fog prevented either engineer from seeing the approaching train until they were within a few rods of each other. Brakeman Henthorn was pinned between the engine and tender for three hours, and it was necessary to cut both feet off before he could be extricated. Fireman Lanning's clothes caught fire and parts of his body were burned to a crisp. Both men will die. Thirty cars and both engines are a total wreck. The engines were driven into each other with such force that two engines could not pull them apart.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 17.—At 11 o'clock Saturday night, just after the close of the speaking at a political rally here, fourteen persons were hurt, two fatally, by the explosion of skyrocket. At the close of the meeting a fireworks display was had. The rockets were fired from a wooden chute, around which the crowd was gathered. One of the giant rockets exploded, hurling stones and pieces of board among the crowd with fearful force, and the effect noted above.

SENACA FALLS, N. Y., Oct. 17.—After the Gleason mills closed Saturday night a force of men was set at work to clean out the flume and clear the causeway. Patrick Martin was taken out alive, but died a few minutes later.

Five Persons Seriously Injured in an Explosion at an Oil Well.

ST. MARY'S, O., Oct. 17.—An accident happened Friday night on the Hyatt farm in the Camden (Ind.) oil field. A large gusher had just been completed and when the crude oil was turned into the tank, by some means an explosion occurred. Quite a number of persons were on top to watch the inflow of oil. They were thrown in every direction and five were seriously injured by burns and from the fall. They are Jacob Listenfeldt, A. M. Hyatt, J. C. Graves, Charles Wood and A. B. Walker. The tank was entirely destroyed.

Two Men Meet Death in a Well on a Farm Near Fort Scott, Kan.

FORT SCOTT, Kan., Oct. 17.—Henry Humphrey, a farmer of Bourbon county, was Saturday overcome by foul air while digging in a well on his farm. A neighbor named Joe Carter, who was manning the bucket, saw him fall to the bottom of the hole and consented to go down in the bucket to his rescue. He also was prostrated. A brother of Humphrey called for help and was let down to rescue both. He succeeded in getting them out, but Humphrey was dead and Carter died later. The third man was also affected, but will recover.

FLOODS ABROAD.

Furious Rains and Gales Cause Much Damage and Some Loss of Life in Great Britain.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—The storm that set in over northern England, Scotland and Wales Wednesday night threatens to cause as much damage as some of the phenomenal gales and rains that passed over the country last autumn. The telegraph lines are down in every direction and communication with some of the coast towns is greatly interrupted. Tidings of disaster continue to be received and loss of life by shipwreck is beginning to be reported.

The fishing yawl James and Robert was capsized in a heavy squall in the Firth of Forth, Scotland, into which she was putting for shelter. She had a crew of five men, and all of them were drowned. Another fishing boat that was also making for shelter under short canvas saw the yawl turn over when she was about a mile distant. One man was seen clinging to the bottom of the overturned boat, but it was impossible for the larger craft to reach him in time to save him. An attempt was made to rescue him, but almost before the intending rescuer could bear away for him a heavy sea swept over the yawl, and when it had passed the man had disappeared.

At Leeds the River Aire has got out of its banks and overflowed the adjacent country. In some places the railways leading into the town are submerged to the depth of a foot. Houses in the lower portions of the Leeds and in Holbre and Hunslet are flooded. Several piers in the river Tyne were damaged by the storm. Many vessels continue to take shelter there. A terrific sea is running in the Irish channel. The mail boats plying between England and Ireland have been greatly delayed. Large tracts of land in the north of Wales have been flooded.

The Rye and Derwent rivers have overflowed, and the country for miles about is inundated. The floods have naturally been most disastrous in the moorlands. Half the crops still unharvested are submerged, and vast areas of pasture land are impassable except in boats.

The floods in Yorkshire are the most serious that have ever occurred in that county in the memory of the oldest inhabitant. Railway traffic has been completely diverted from the usual channels. The damage to property is enormous. A bridge at Selby on the York & Doncaster railway has been destroyed by floods. Thousands of acres of land are submerged in the Barnsley district, and many people are moving their effects from their homes. The floods in Derbyshire are causing a large amount of damage. Many horses and cattle have been drowned.

VICTORIA WILL RUN.

Mrs. Martin Accepts the Women Suffragist Nomination for President.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—Mrs. Victoria Claflin Woodhull Martin, the candidate of the women suffragists for president of the United States, arrived here from her English home on the steamship Etruria, which, after a night at quarantine, reached her dock at 7:30 Sunday morning. Her husband, Mr. John Biddulph Martin, a London banker, who is a world's fair commissioner from Great Britain, accompanied the American presidential candidate. They will attend the dedicatory ceremonies at Chicago. Immediately after the ceremonies they will return to this city, where the arrangements will be completed for the campaign speeches which Mrs. Martin will deliver in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Chicago and some other large cities.

Mrs. Martin gave out for publication her letter of acceptance of the nomination for president by the convention of woman suffragists. It is addressed to "Anna M. Parker and others, national nominating convention of women suffragists." A synopsis is as follows:

The letter begins by stating that the nomination upon a woman's suffrage platform commends itself to the writer especially from the fact that the issue is one which was originally raised and advocated by her and others as long ago as 1870, before congress, and was afterward maintained as the principal plank in the platform of the woman's suffrage campaign of 1872, "when my name was presented to the public as the first female candidate for president of the United States."

Mrs. Martin then quotes at length from her addresses delivered during that campaign, in which she argued that the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments to the constitution permitted this right of suffrage to women, and she earnestly commends all good women to persistently demand this right. The plank in the platform adopted at the convention of 1892 which declares that "by the united efforts of the women voters of this nation we will drive anarchy, crime, insanity and drunkenness from our midst by our humanitarian efforts, backed by the ballot," is next considered, and Mrs. Martin says:

"Old constitutions are incompetent to deal with the new conditions. The advance in science has shown personal conditions of physical unfitness of humanity itself to grapple with the various new conditions of progress. It is becoming just as necessary now to consider the important subject of breeding intelligence and physical culture in the human race as it is in the inferior animals. In order to accomplish such results, and I will add to overcome the conditions of crime, insanity and drunkenness referred to in your resolution, new regulations must be proposed for society. Nay more, we must go even further, and, investigating the physical degeneracy which breeds criminals, we must surround motherhood with the proper conditions of an enlightened age. It is to women, therefore, at the base, that we look for the regeneration of mankind."

Collapse of an Elevator.

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—The Illinois grain elevator, just north of Madison street on the west branch of the river, collapsed Saturday afternoon. One hundred and thirty thousand bushels of grain were scattered over the railroad tracks and dumped into the river. What caused the collapse can only be conjectured. The structure was erected twenty-seven years ago, and has passed every inspection, the last being but three months ago. The loss will not exceed $20,000, as part of the grain can be saved. The employes were warned in time and all escaped in safety.

Millionaire Bell Killed.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 17. — Thomas Bell met death Sunday morning by plunging headlong down a stairway. His fortune of $4,000,000 will go to his widow and six children. He came here in 1850 by way of Valparaiso and went into banking and rapidly acquired wealth. He was one of the incorporators of the Bank of California.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—The Methodist Protestant church has 147,000 members and 1,441 ministers.

—Out of 794 candidates examined at the Cambridge higher local examinations recently 782 were women.

—Catholic congregations in Prussia are increasing in much greater proportion than the increase of the population.

—The first Christian building in Tokio was erected twenty-five years ago. There are now ninety-two Christian churches and chapels there.

—At London the privy council has upheld Rt. Rev. J. Thomas Pelham bishop of Norwich, in his refusal to install a clergyman because he was nominated to the living at Brantham, Suffolk, by a Catholic.

—The total church membership of the country, according to the census, is 20,347,364, and the value of church property aggregates $646,125,704. The number of separate and distinct church organizations is nearly 150.

—The journal of the Ninety-seventh Annual Protestant Episcopal council, held in Danville, Va., gives the following figures: Clergy (including the bishops), 157; baptisms, adult, 390; infant, 1,172; number of communicants, 19,042; Sunday-school teachers, 1,777; scholars, 13,803; contributions, $350,839.95.

—The bishops of the African Methodist Episcopal church and the Zion African Methodist Episcopal church have adopted the basis of a union of the two organizations as desired by the general conference. It recommends that the name for the united churches be "The African and Zion Methodist Episcopal church."

—The condition of the public teachers in Spain is not to be envied. The payment of their salaries is almost always far in arrears, and a case came up the other day of a man who had not received a farthing from the government for seventeen years. The total amount of back salary at present due to teachers is about seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars. In some cases the sufferers are sustained by charity, and in others are compeled to send their children out as servants. Many schools have been closed altogether.

SEEING AND OBSERVING.

Invaluable Power of the Habit of Noticing Details.

During a war between Austria and Turkey, a baker in his cellar kneading bread noticed a slight noise rising and falling at intervals, which seemed to come from a distant corner of his cellar. He stopped his work, and tracing the sounds, discovered that they were caused by a few marbles dancing up and down on the head of a little drum his child had left there.

The majority of persons would have been satisfied to attribute the motion of the marbles to the rumbling in the street, or to the occasional firing of guns; but this man was an observer.

Surprised at the perfect regularity with which the marbles jumped from the drum-head, he put his ear to the ground and noticed a distant tapping. He recalled how as a boy he had heard from one end of a long log a companion scratching with a pin upon the other end; and he judged that the earth was just such a conductor of sound as the log had been.

Suddenly it flashed upon him that what he heard was the sound of a pick, and that the Turks were doing what had so long been feared, undermining the city. The news was carried to the Austrian general, examination made, a countermine prepared and exploded, and the Turks put to flight.

In the early part of this century an English button-maker became famous for the steel waist-coat button which he used to manufacture, with lines cut upon them for ornament. He gradually put the lines nearer and nearer together, and observed that as he increased the number of lines, the buttons became more and more iridescent. He explained his discovery to a scientist who began experimenting upon ruled plates of steel. The result was the wonderful "diffraction grating" which is now used in place of the glass prism, upon all great telescopes, to break the ordinary ray of light into its primary colors.

A bevy of schoolgirls, about to separate after graduation, once surrounded their professor, and asked him how they were to make their new life interesting.

"Learn to see," was his reply. "You want to penetrate into things. There is nothing on earth which when observed is not of enormous interest."—Youth's Companion.

SOUNDING JARS IN CHURCHES.

A Queer Idea of Architects of the Middle Ages.

One of the most singular features of the older churches in England and western Europe is the presence in the walls of large numbers of jars. They are imbedded in the masonry, with the neck turned toward the interior of the church and the mouth opening into the audience room. For a long time the openings were supposed to be holes in the walls, but a closer examination a number of years ago on one or two of these old buildings disclosed the fact that the openings were the necks of jugs, and led to no little speculation as to why they had been placed there. All old churches—that is to say, churches erected from the eleventh to the seventeenth centuries—have them, and in some they are present in great numbers. A church in Leeds, England, has over fifty, while this number is considerably exceeded in some of the old French churches, nearly two hundred having been counted in the cathedral of Angouleme, in France. The explanation of their presence is easy. They are placed in the walls with a view to the bettering the acoustic properties of the building. The idea is as old as Vitruvius, who, in a work on the Roman theater, advises that earthenware jars be placed in the walls for the purpose of increasing the resonance of the building. In several Roman structures such jugs have been found, used in the way afterward adopted by the architects of the middle ages. As to the efficiency of the device its employment is open to question. For increasing acoustic properties of the rooms the jugs are probably useless, but no one can certainly say that they are so until the experiment has been tried of constructing two rooms, with jugs in the walls of one and the walls of the other solid. A test made under these conditions would determine the question, which otherwise must remain unsettled.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

To Young Wives.

A disappointed bachelor has said that some time after marriage a man's wife ceases to be supremely attractive to him. Never was a greater libel. Beauty preserved and grace retained can never lose their charm or yield their empire. The preservation of our bodies in their original healthy perfection and comeliness is a sacred duty. Every young mother who will faithfully carry out the directions given with each bottle of "Mother's Friend" will never lose figure or complexion. The dainty bud will mature into the blooming rose, and old age will find her blessing the day she first used "Mother's Friend." Sold by all druggists.

That's the way Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets come. And it's a more important point than you think. It keeps them always fresh and reliable, unlike the ordinary pills in cheap wooden or pasteboard boxes.

In that way, they cure permanently, Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the liver, stomach, and bowels are prevented, relieved, and cured.

They're tiny, sugar-coated granules, a compound of refined and concentrated vegetable extracts—the smallest in size, the easiest to take, and the cheapest pill you can buy, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned. You pay only for the good you get.

There's nothing likely to be "just as good."

LITTLE THINGS.

It is the little things that count. For instance in the Post Office department our respected Uncle Samuel uses half a million lead pencils annually. He takes 7,200 quarts of mucilage, 1,500 barrels of ink, 10,000 pounds of rubber bands and 1,200 gross of pens. Life is made up of little things, little instances, little events. If a cold is taken to-day and is added to, to-morrow it develops into a grave pulmonary trouble. If you take cold do not fancy you can neglect it. To delay is dangerous. Get a bottle of Reid's German Cough and Kidney Cure at once. This great remedy contains no poison and it is impossible to take an overdose, but it will cure the worst malady arising from a cold. Get it of any dealer. The small bottle costs 25 cents, the large bottle 50 cents.

THAT GIRL I USED TO KNOW.

When in a reverie serene
I stray with willing feet
To the time when I was young and green
And mighty in conceit,
There comes to me a memory
Of the days of long ago,
And the pretty, sun-browned face I see
Of that girl I used to know.

We "went together" moons and moons;
Together we rode and strolled;
Together we spent our afternoons
And romanced in moonlight cold,
Till all the town had set it down
On the cards as a certain "go"
Between myself and that maiden brown—
That girl I used to know.

There are surprises in the years.
That girl and I, apart,
Forgot each other without tears
Or damage of the heart.
I met her once—the other day—
With another girl in tow.
"My daughter, sir," I heard her say—
What girl I used to know!

And so I wonder, as I see
Those pleasant yesterdays,
If yet it may not come to be,
In Time's uncertain ways,
That I may learn to fall in love
As in the long ago,
But this time with the daughter of
That girl I used to know!

KALA KILLS SHARKS.

A Sandwich Islander's Dexterity with His Knife.

He Leaps Over the Flying Cloud's Rail When the Captain's Son Is in Danger, and Dispatches Two Tigers of the Deep.

A GROUP of natives bade them beware of sharks. The warning was prompted by the recollection, still vivid in their minds, of the horrible death of two of their comrades the day before—by these ravenous monsters.

The sailors passed on with a savage imprecation on these terrors of the sea.

Next morning their ship, the Flying Cloud, pulled out of the Guatemalan harbor for Portland, Ore. A stiff breeze wafted them along. Away from their stern dropped the shores of the tropics. The broad bosom of the glimmering Pacific spread out to the encircling horizons. They passed a lone boat which was going to the mainland from one of the islands. A ship, faintly visible on the horizon, moved in the hazy air with all sails spread. Everything betokened a safe trip.

The second day following the wind died out in a dead calm. In the still air the sails hung idly. The tropic sun began in the early morning to beat down on the lone vessel, and as it approached the zenith its heat became well-nigh intolerable. The vessel's deck was so hot that even the cook had to sandal his feet to endure walking on the ship's side.

In the middle of the afternoon it was discovered that one of the planks on the port bow near the water line was badly warped, and the pitch oozing from the expanding seams had permitted the calking to bulge out. It was at a point where the boat had struck a floating piece of wreckage on the down trip one night and the abrasion had been only temporarily repaired.

This extraordinary calm might be the precursor of a heavy gale and it would not be safe to allow it to remain in that condition. A man was lowered to the fracture and began the work of repair. He had nearly completed the job. Pushing himself off from the bow to get a wider view of his work he suddenly gave vent to an awful howl. His legs had been dangling in the water and a shark springing up had seized one of them and snapped it off at the knee. He lost his balance and slipped out of his seat, but managed still to cling to his rope, which slid through his hand until it reached the end of the loop. A couple of mates sprang to the gunwale, but before they got him half out of the water another shark made a leap for him. Seizing him it tore him away from his support and pulled him down.

The water was transparent. The horrified sailors, leaning over the rails, could see plainly their comrade's frightful struggles. But it was worse than useless to attempt a rescue. Even if they had the means to fight and beat off the monster, they could not hope to move with the shark's swiftness of descent. A red film came like edifying mist up from the depths and spread out on the surface, yet heaving with the turmoil of the awful struggle, and flecked here and there with bubbles, carnation-hued, sickening evidences of the last gasps of their mate far beneath. A dense gloom settled on the spirit of all the crew.

The sun, flaming red, sank beneath the glassy sea, which was dyed with its own sanguinary hue. Night's cooling airs came as a grateful relief to the suffocating intensity of the day. But the blue firmament, pierced by the glittering points of numberless stars, brooded over the vessel and stirred in the hearts of the silent sailors superstitious premonitions.

The following day they were able to make some progress. Sighting a ship they slowly approached. A dead calm fell again. Hailing the new vessel the captain, after awhile, lowered a boat and paid it a visit. Returning he brought two Kanakas, natives of the Sandwich islands, aboard. They wished to visit Portland, and were glad to get this opportunity of going straight there, instead of cruising in the other ship still further south, prolonging their trip more than a month.

They brought aboard with them one of their native canoes. One of these men was a remarkably fine looking fellow. Considerably above the middle height, he had broad shoulders, a deep chest, and arms with great bunches of muscle on them. He was lithe and agile in his movements. A bright, genial expression always played on his face. He soon became popular on the boat. A breeze swelled the sails soon afterward and the ship began again to slowly glide on its way.

But at the close of the day the wind died away again into a stirless hush. It was not quite so hot as it had been. There was more animation on the decks that night. Kala, the larger of the Kanakas, regaled the crew with several songs, which were lustily cheered. This started one or two of the crew with old-time ballads, and before the first watch was relieved quite a different humor pervaded the ship than had been prevalent for the preceding forty-eight hours. The blazing sun, round and brassy, appeared the next morning revealing not the faintest sign of a favorable wind. The Flying Cloud rocked lazily on the long glassy swell which reach far into either quarter and came indolently swaying onward.

The captain's son, a little boy and a universal favorite, had taken a boyish liking to the powerful Kanaka, which flattered the big fellow immensely. The two had been together a good deal that forenoon, Kala explaining to the boy's curious eyes various strange devices common to the Sandwich islands. Kala could talk English with a slight brogue. So they—the one a huge bronze-complexioned, ebon-eyed giant of the sea, the other a fair-cheeked, blue-eyed, sunny-haired child of the mountains—got on famously together. Another day went on without a breach. The boy had been in the cabin taking an afternoon nap. Coming on deck he wandered to the rail and looked over. The eddying currents, which slowly pirouetted about the ship's bow and swung abeam, caught his eyes. He looked, and jumped up and down, giving vent to merry exclamations of delight as the bubbles flourished and the circles swung.

A strange object caught his eye. It swerved close in to the ship's side. To see better he clambered to the top of the rail and looked over. Not finding it at the first glance he stretched out a little further, when an unusual swell of the ocean gave the vessel a lurch. The little fellow lost his balance and was precipitated into the water. A cry of fear broke from his lips before he struck. Instantly the watch in the main-top gave the alarm:

"Child overboard! The captain's boy overboard!"

"A shark! A shark!"

There was a rush to the boat's side. A sailor sprang over for the boy, who had already sunk. Exclamations of terror broke from half a dozen lips as they beheld several rods away a huge shark approaching, his ugly dorsal fin cutting the surface.

The cry aroused the powerful Kanaka from a doze into which he had fallen abaft, and, bounding across the deck in great leaps, he called sharply to his comrade in his own language. Only an instant he stood on the rail. A glance showed him the position of the shark and that of the boy. A knife gleamed in his teeth. A short stick sharpened at both ends was held firmly in the left hand. On came the shark.

"Get the boy. Me get shark!" he shouted to the men making ready to lower a boat.

His midnight eyes fairly blazed with fury. Far out from the ship's stern he leaped toward the advancing shark. His comrades had, in less time than it takes to tell it, lowered their canoe, fastened the rope to a belaying-pin, slid down, cut the rope loose, and paddled swiftly toward Kala.

As Kala emerged from the depths he shot up half way out of the water, his glance instantly riveted on the advancing shark.

He would intercept him. He would give him a meal of himself and so hinder his progress. Thus he would afford time for the sailors to rescue the boy—so the crew thought when they saw him jump from the other end of the vessel toward the approaching monster. One snap of those enormous jaws would cut him in two. Another snap would crunch the remainder of his body. Surely there was no hope for him. But Kala evidently was not alarmed. All alert was he. He seemed to be in his native element. A couple of powerful strokes put him directly in line of the advance of his ferocious antagonist. Swiftly the man-eater glided nearer, immense in his proportions. All on board shuddered with horror at the impending doom of the brave Kanaka.

But just as the monster turned on his back and opened his terrible mouth to crunch him, Kala veered quick as a flash from the line, and, as the momentum of the shark carried him on, with a tremendous stroke he plunged his long knife to the hilt in the monster's belly, drawing it with a long lateral stroke so that the intestines of the shark protruded.

The fierce monster lashed his tail in terrific agony and threw himself partly out of the water, going into frantic contortions, then he dove out of sight.

Kala sank beneath the surface, but in an instant he was up again, and a rod away, spinning around as if on a pivot, sweeping the water with his keen eye for the first signs of his antagonist from whatever quarter in which he might rise. A short distance away the shark reappeared. Getting sight of his foe his powerful flukes fanned the water and he came on slower than before that his momentum might not carry him again beyond the point of attack. Kala fixed his eyes upon him and when he got near became the aggressor. Darting like a flash to the reverse side he thrust his knife into the shark's eye so that it penetrated his brain. Instantly again he plunged down out of sight. The pain of the monster was acute. It was a fatal thrust. Maddened and half blinded with pain and rage, the shark lashed the sea for rods into foam. But Kala was well out of harm's way.

Rising to the surface at a distance he looked at the enraged monster, who made one final rush at him. The huge fellow turned on his back as he came tearing up, his mouth yawning, and as he passed Kala his jaws snapped together with a terrific report. Kala, again darting aside, repeated his stroke on the breast and slit him down a yard. It was the final struggle. The shark was dying. With a tremendous sweep of his tail, which midway fell limp, he went down and soon after rolled over on the surface dead.

Kala's comrade, who all the time held the canoe at the right distance to give immediate help should another shark appear, now shot forward. With a light and graceful movement, which hardly disturbed its poise, Kala was in the canoe.

From the decks of the Flying Cloud came vociferous cheers, in which none joined more enthusiastically than the golden-haired boy, dripping all over though he was with the sea brine. He would not permit himself to be taken away from the gunwale after he had been rescued. He must see Kala kill the shark. All of the ship's company viewed the contest with a fearful suspense. He alone was perfectly sure that Kala would conquer.

But another shark appeared on the scene as Kala's canoe came slowly toward the vessel. That dorsal fin, which never projects above the surface of the sea without exciting in the breasts of all sailors who view it the most implacable temper, was seen cutting the mirror gleam of the sea ahead. Bloodthirsty and remorseless to the last degree, the shark is the most terrible object of the mighty deep. Few are the old sailors who have not lost friends or comrades in the frightful jaws of these rapacious monsters. "No quarter" is the watchword of all seamen in the war of extermination on the shark tribe.

But the terror of the sea is so fierce that no seaman wants to take any risks in the encounter. Though Kala had succeeded in killing the other shark, the men on board did not want him to take any more risks, and they called out:

"Come aboard!"

But Kala recalled the tale of their shipmate's recent fate and how they grieved over his loss. He remembered too a dear brother of his who had been seized unexpectedly by one of these monsters and drawn remorselessly into the depths. Even there at the boat's rail he saw the sunny-haired boy who had excited in his heart a mighty love, whose beautiful life had been frightfully imperiled only a moment before.

The mighty man's bosom heaved, and his raven eyes dilated as he gazed on the approaching tiger of the sea. He spoke a few brief words to his comrades. His great form rose for an instant erect. He glanced toward the ship. He called out in thrilling tones "Remember Bill!" (Bill was the name of the man seized by the shark three days before.) The next instant he slid with scarcely a splash into the gleaming brine.

There was a ripple at a distance. He appeared on the surface. The shark saw him. It shot toward him. A thousand sparkles glanced in the sunshine as Kala curved downward out of sight. The shark turned over as it darted along, and the sailors saw a great red gash in its breast, from which the blood fairly spouted. His huge tail churned the brine into milk, and then he sank.

Over in clear water Kala rose to the surface. All on board held their breath, lest they distract Kala's attention. Round he spun again to see the point where the shark would rise. Yonder the shark appeared. He darted toward his wily foe. This time Kala remained on the surface. Marvelous was his agility in the water. Like the rise and fall of a sledgehammer in the curve, but like lightning in its velocity, Kala swung away from and back toward the monster, plunging his long knife into its side, below the head, and touching the spine. For, as always to seize its prey, the shark turned on its back as it approached. Infuriated to the last degree it swung round and round. Instantaneously Kala had sunk and darted out of harm's way.

When the shark returned to the attack Kala missed the nicety of his usual reckoning. He seemed at the shark's mercy. His left arm got into the great mouth. The jaws came down, but the stick in the left hand was upright and prevented them closing. The huge monster was getting sluggish from want of blood. Kala's peril had its advantage, which he instantly seized. He was closer to the shark than he had been, and quick as thought he plunged his knife into its very heart.

KALA KILLS A SHARK.

It was enough for one battle in the water. He would now take a rest. He slipped back into his canoe as the monster stretched out dead on the surface.

A perfect salvo of cheers greeted him, and kept resounding over the waters as he glided up and was received on deck. With hearty thanks the captain met him, tears gleaming in his honest eye, as he held his boy in his arms. The blue-eyed boy reached out his arms and embraced the powerful Kala, who bore it all meekly as a child, the greetings affecting him to tears.

The sailors hauled the floating carcasses to the side of the ship and found the first shark to measure twenty-four feet in length, and the second eighteen feet.

The crew felt that the death of their mate had been avenged.

The morning brought a stiff blow. When the Flying Cloud, not long after this, dropped anchor in Portland's harbor, Kala's reception in America made him forget that he was far from home, in a foreign land and among strangers.

Willie, with his sun-tinted hair and ocean-tinted eyes, insists that his stalwart friend, with night-tinted cheeks, is a greater man than the president.—Chicago Tribune.

LEADS THEM TO SLAUGHTER.

"Come, Phil."

A handsome eighteen-hundred-pound specimen of the bovine species which has been moping lazily along the driveway pricks up his ears in quick response to the call and trots up to his master with a promptness that would be commendable even in a pet dog. The call came from Head Driver Murphy, or one of his assistants, and Philip knows well enough what it means.

"G'long over to F," shouts the driver and at the same time he points up the alley in the direction of section "F." The motion of the driver's hand is superfluous, however, for Philip knows as well as anybody where "F" is, and he gallops off up the narrow driveway more like an educated canine than the huge, lazy steer that he is.

There is an interesting coincidence in connection with big Phil's history. His name, unbridged, is Philip D. Armour. This also the name of the proprietor of the packing-house at which the cloven-footed Philip is an important functionary. Driver Murphy, however, blunts the point of the coincidence by his explanation that the steer was honored with the name of his noted owner in order to give the animal a due appreciation of his extraordinary prowess and responsibility.

While Philip has risen from obscurity to pre-eminence, and has become the king of his kine, he has also degenerated morally from an innocent and guileless country ox into an arch-hypocrite. The gruesome offices of a hangman fade into insignificance when compared with those of Philip.

His daily labor is to entice the innocent cattle from their pens by his peculiar magnetism, and lead them in a wild dash to their death. As the drivers swing open the gate of a pen and rush a drove frightened, trembling steers out into the driveway, Phil gallops boldly up, and, swinging in ahead of the herd, assures his bewildered country brothers that he is master of the situation; that he has come as their deliverer, and that if they will follow him they will be browsing in clover fields and drinking from spring-fed brooks before the sun sets.

The unsuspecting cattle instinctively fall in line as soon as their eyes fall on the handsome and intrepid Philip. The herd troops away down the alleys, following closely every turn of their leader as he dodges in and out among wagons and sheds and heads straight for the broad "shoot" which leads up to the capacious slaughter-pen. When Phil approaches the "shoots" he has urged his followers into a mad stampede. Quick as a flash the leader whirls to one side at the foot of the approach, and the herd, carried on by its own impetus, charges madly up the ascent and into the waiting-room of death. Philip has sent another hundred of his kin to their doom. The big gates close behind his victims and they are led into the slaughter-mill one by one, almost as fast as one can count them, to come out flayed, drawn and quartered for the butcher's block.

Philip knows no pity, no remorse. His conscience is seered and callous. As he avoids the slaughter-pen by an adroit turn and sends his followers on to their death he drops his head between his knees, and seems to chuckle with ghoulish delight as he listens to the clatter of his victims' hoofs as they clamber pell-mell up the fatal "shoot."

To stay the butcher's knife from his own neck Philip has betrayed one hundred thousand fellow-creatures which looked to him for guidance. Perhaps it was through deference to the consummate villainy of such a beast as Philip that old Beelzebub took to wearing cloven hoofs.—Chicago Times.

WHO OWNED THE PEW.

Pat Only Wanted His Rights as a Proprietor Respected.

"If you had come and asked me for them, you might have had all you wanted, and welcome." This, if story-tellers are to be trusted, is what farmers always say when they find bad boys robbing their orchards. And it is true, beyond question, that people in general like to have their rights as proprietors respected, even in the most trifling matters. So it was with an Irishman of whom a reporter for the Chicago Post tells a little story.

There was a special celebration of some kind in the church where he owned a pew. The building was crowded, and just as the service began this proprietor made his way down the aisle to the door of his pew, which was only two seats from the front. In it were two or three ladies, strangers to him.

There was still abundance of room near the head of the seat, but he stopped at the door, laid one hand upon the back of the pew next in front, and with an impressive wave of the other said, in a voice loud enough to be heard over half the church:

"Come out of that now!"

The ladies, surprised and greatly confused, obeyed with all haste, but no sooner was the last one out in the aisle than the man waved his hand graciously.

"Now in wid yez again," he remarked, louder than before, "an' make yerselves ter home. Oi only wanted yez ter know who owned the pew."

His tone and gesture and smile were so polite and reassuring that the ladies resumed their seats, and the priest went on with the service.

Taming Leopards in India.

The Cheetah is tied in all directions, principally from a thick grummet of rope around his loins, while a hood fitted over his head effectually blinds him. He is fastened on a strong cot bedstead, and the keepers and their wives and families reduce him to submission by starving him and keeping him awake. His head is made to face the village street, and for an hour at a time several times a day his keepers make pretended rushes at him and wave cloths, staves and other articles in his face. He is talked to continually, and women's tongues are believed to be the most effective antisoporifics. No created being could resist the effects of hunger, want of sleep and feminine scolding, and the poor cheetah becomes piteously, abjectly tame.—Beast and Man in India.

HE WANTED A LETTER.

Mr. Turner Has Trouble at the Post Office.

He had just arrived. He hadn't been in town two days and every thing "knocked him silly." He was going west on Adams street when the federal building caught his eye.

"What's that?" he queried of a stranger, as he speared him in the side with an umbrella.

"What's what?" snarled the stranger.

"Why, that 'ere buildin,' of course," pointing to the mammoth structure.

"Post office?" jerked out the man, giving a withering look.

Then he sized it up. "It 'ud make a hundred of ourn," he said; "wonder if ther ain't a letter fer me. She might a-got skeered and writ. 'Twon't hurt 'em any to ask," and he passed in.

The first window that mot his gaze was the lost money order office. They were all alike to him, though, so he drew near and peered in. The clerk was busy writing and didn't look up.

"Say," he said, "anything here fur Turner?"

"When was it lost?" said the clerk, too busy for intelligent comprehension.

"When was what lost?" repeated Josiah, apprehensively clapping his hand on his purse.

"Why the letter, of course."

"Taint lost is it," he exclaimed, 'mout a bin though, gettin' mixed among all them letters."

Then the clerk went into particulars and after a struggle elicited the fact that he was only expecting a letter.

"Round on the west side, third window you come to is your window," and the clerk wearily turned away and cursed himself because he wasn't rich.

Around went Mr. Turner and got his face clear into the hole, when the following dialogue ensued:

"Anything here for Turner?"

"What name?"

"Turner, I told ye!"

"I know, but your first name. What is it?"

"Josiah Q. Turner. 'Q.' for Quintillius Titusville. That's it."

"Nothing here," was the reply. Josiah turned away ill-satisfied.

"May be she hain't writ yet," he muttered. "By gosh here's another winder, maybe it's here."

"Say," he bawled, not seeing anyone, "anything here for Turners." The same face appeared on the inside.

"Didn't I just tell you there wasn't anything for you?"

"Yass, but I thought this was another winder, we only got one to hum."

"Oh get out," groaned the clerk, "there's nothing here, this building is all one."

"Lookee here, young feller, don't you get too tarnation smart. You han't only workin' fur a salary. I'll git you fired outen here—that's what I'll do. You ha'nt half looked fer that letter nohow, and I'm goin' to report ye." And with that he walked away mopping his brow. As he walked out a gamin on the steps yelled to his comrade:

"Oh, Jimmie, I'd like to have 'em for paint brushes."

"What's that? What's that?" questioned Josiah suspiciously.

TREES OF GIANT GIRTH.

D. J. MacGowan, of Shanghai, gives the following account of the discovery of giant trees in Formosa. He says:

A recent mercantile exploration of the interior of southern Formosa by Chinese traders, described in the Hupao, discloses an interesting botanical fact, indicating that the beautiful island produces a tree that in size and magnificence vies with the gigantic sequoias of California. More than ten adventurous pioneers of commerce organized a mercantile expedition to open trade with savages, whose country had never been visited by civilized man. Their fastnesses were hidden in vast, impenetrable forests, which covered lofty, precipitous mountains.

They started from La Malan, which is probably Chockeday on the charts, and reached in seven days, by many stages, their objective point, Huaiin stream. The toil of ascending acclivities and descending declivities was surpassed by that of fording torrential streams, which they could accomplish only by clasping each other's hands—not a path, merely footprints of wild beasts and birds; no sign of natives; no smoke from habitations—they timidly kept out of sight, not daring to show themselves.

The travelers lodged in some stone caverns; the chattering of monkeys and the sounds of insects were appalling and indescribable. It is a wild region and reminded them of the legions of the Kingdom of Hobgoblins. What they accomplished in the way of barter with the wild aborigines is not recorded, an omission that is pardonable, in that they have made known the existence of tree of prodigious girth, forming a vast forest.

These trees measured more than ten outstretched arms, and were probably of corresponding height. There is besides another remarkable tree flourishing in the same forest which bears flowers, red or white, which are larger than a sieve and of extraordinary fragrance. Mr. Taylor, while searching for orchids, heard of these majestic trees and huge flowers, which he inferred, from what natives said, were epiphyte orchids.

I am moved to make known this sylvan discovery in the hope that, pending the exploration by this terra incognita by out botanists, Dr. Henry and Mr. Ford, residents of Formosa, will take measures to provide those naturalists with specimens of flowers, seeds, leaves and bark of the trees concerning which the Chinese have excited our curiosity. —North China Herald.

Rub In Rub Out is the way you have to wash clothes with soap. First you rub the soap in; that's work in itself. Then you rub it all out again over the washboard. If you're strong and healthy, and rub hard enough, you may get the dirt all out, too. It's hard work, and every woman knows it. But it isn't the woman only that suffers. She's wearing the clothes out, rubbing them to pieces, all the time. It's just as hard for every thing as it is for every body.

Soak In Soak Out is Pearline's way of washing. All it wants is to be let alone. Put it in the water and it does its own work — yours, too. It brings the dirt out easily and quickly—no hard work, no wearing rub, rub, rub, no washboard.

Doesn't that seem better? It is better. There's a saving of strength and a saving of clothes. And, what some women can't believe, it's absolutely safe. It's just as much so as any good soap.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, if your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back. 377 JAMES PYLE, New York.

DELANO DIARY

—Rev. Potter, of Minneapolis will preach at the Presbyterian church on Sabbath morning at 10:30; evening 7:30.

—The St. Peter school gave an entertainment commemerative of the 400th aniversary of the discovery America, at th City Hall, yesterday evening.

Everybody seems to be for County Auditor this year.

Cahdidates are of opinion thaa a considerable of red tape is attached to the procuring of names on the election tickets and we think considerable more swearing than that called for by the law and of a different nature has been done during the past week.

Rev. Dr. Stafford will be in Delano and hold the M. E. quarterly conference at 3o'clock Saturday and will preach and administer the Lords Supper on Sunday evening at half past seven. Every body is invited to be with us Sunday Eve. There will be no morning service.

Rev. Davies.

At a meeting of the Legislative Committee, at Buffalo, on Monday, Mr. J. J. Rennie's declination, on account of ill health was received, and the name of Dr. T. J. Catlin, of Delano, placed on the ticket instead. The Democratic Legislative ticket for the 38th Legislative District, comprising the counties of Wright and Sherburne, is:

H. C. BULL, of Cokato,
HENRY BERNING, of St. Michael,
J. L. HARWICK, of Sherburne,
THEODORE J. CATLIN, Delano.

The Republicans are around trying to whip their voters into voting for every man on the Legislative ticket so as to re-elect C. K. Davis to the Senate has it come to this that voters must elect men they do not want to the Legislature for the sake of getting C. K. Bock.

The Waverly Republicans had a speaker from New York Hon. Rawland Mahony, minister to Ecuador to address a meeting on Monday evening He was sent out by the national committee, to talk to the western people and come from Kansas City here we were told. A Prominent republican told us he was there until he was afraid he would catch cold, there being no fire and we presume the lack of enthusiasm was also, rather chilling as he said there was an audience of about 15 Another man said later in the evening counting the band 15, there was 40 or 50 present.

The Eagle announces the candidacy of Dr. Theodore J. Catlin, for tne Legislature, on the Democratic ticket and predicts the downfall of the entire Democratic Legislative ticket. It may be possible, however, that the Eagle's prediction is incorrect, as it has been known to fly wide of the mark before now. And its chief editor has been known to roll out a barrel of apples, and even to make it all right at the tailor shop for a new suit of clothes, on a bet with a prominent democrat whom he considered a far less astute polititon than himself. In the light of other days it is hardly worth while for the Democrats to become discouraged at this unfavorable prediction; but rather to renew their efforts in behalf of their candidates. As for the Doctor's chances the St. Paul Globe in announcing the fact of the change on the ticket, in placing Dr. Catlin instead of Mr. Rennie, of Annannale, who was nominated without his knowledge and who on hearing of his nomination declined, on account of ill health, to make the race, made use of the head line, "Strong Man Named."

GRAMMAR DEPARTMENT.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO.

Democratic State Ticket.

Grover Cleveland leads out, the great reformer of the Empire State, as a man that has his own convictions and does what his conscience tells him is right. As a man who for four years was president and whom the people are willing to again place at the head of the Government.

Adlai E. Stevenson, of Illinois, for vice president, is accounted a good man, also.

Daniel W. Lawler, of St. Paul, is one of St. Paul's rising young lawyers. As fine an orator as the State affords. A man of fine personal appearance, and best of all, if elected will be no man's man and wear no man's collar.

H. H. Hawkins, of Carlton county for Lieutenant Governor, is a man of ability and will fill the chair as president of the senate, we believe as satisfactorily as it has been filled for lo, these many years.

Peter Nelson, Goodhue county, one of the most popular men in that part of the country, who has been elected to various offices by overwhelming majorities in the Republican districts, is in a fair way to be our next Secretary of State.

Joseph Lecht, the Winona editor, is said to be a first class man for the place, and will, if elected take care of the Treasury of the State.

John C. Nethaway is a man with whom many of Wright county's citizens have met. He is one of the very best and most effective campaign workers on the stump, and although from Stillwater he will make a good Attorney General.

Daniel Buck, of Mankato, Thomas Canty, of Minneapolis and William Mitchell, of Winona, are three able men for Judges of the Supreme Court and are too well known to require much comment and are almost certain of an election.

Democrat For Congress.

Major W. R. Baldwin, of Duluth, is making a gentlemanly canvass for Congressman for our district, the Sixth, which extends from Delano to Duluth, and has as varied interests as any in the union, probably. The deep water ways to the sea; the iron interests in the north, and the wheat interests in the south and west part of the district, the state pine lands to look after, and the valiant Major, who has passed through the late war, and suffered the privations of Andersonville, and has always been a Democrat is not the man to take a back seat and keep quiet if there is any thing to be done for his district. He is in accord with the big majority in the House of Representatives and likely to get the ear of the House if anything is needed, and the senate stands a good chance of being of his political faith this season, and with old Grover at the helm things are apt to move about right if the Major is there to look after them.

Legislative Ticket.

BULL H. C., of Cokato, was formerly from New York, is in the real estate loans, and banking business. Is an active business man and is a members of the present Legislature.

BERNING HENRY, of St. Michaels, was born in Wright county and with his wife claims to be the first two children born in Frankfort township. Mr. Berning is a farmer, and a member of the present Legislature.

HARWICK, J. L., of Monticello, claims Michigan as his native state, is a farmer in Sherburne county, and a member of the present Legislature.

CATLIN THEODORE J., of Delano, was born in Indiana, in 1849, came to Minnesota with his parents in 1855, and to Delano, in 1874, where he has practiced medicine, being a graduate of Rush college, Chicago, ever since. Three years ago this fall he became editor and proprietor of the then only Democratic paper in this Legislative District, the BUFFALO GAZETTE, purchasing the outfit from Dr. Barton and S. W. Junkins, of Buffalo, and moving it to Delano, where it is now as active as ever for equal rights to all. The doctor has always been a democrat and is still a firm believer in the principles of that party and if elected will try to do what is right.

The Democrats ask the votes of this district for this Legislative ticket not as an electorial college for any one man to the United States Senate; but as legislators for the State of Minnesota. Our State has many and varied questions to be settled at home; by her own legislators, and that's what the people of the state send delegates to the Legislature for. Electing a United States Senator is but one of the duties of a legislator, and if the legislator is a good man he will endeavor to vote for as good a man as it is possible to get to represent our state in that high and honorable position. Our state has many institutions of learning, of charity, of financial and commerical importance to her citizens that need looking after, and are these to be totally ignored, cast aside as of no account to us? Are our Schools, Asylums, Reformatories, Pine Lands, Railroads, Wheat rings, Interest on money and the hundreds of other questions that are continually coming up before our Legislature to be left to take care of themselves while we select four men to go to St. Paul to vote for C. K. Davis for United States Senator, and who are just as likely to send Governor Merriam as they are C. K. Davis, and we think, a little likelier? Things have come to a pretty pass when the state must give up all her own interests, must be driven to voting for a United States senatorial college to the exclusion of a legislature that will look after the interests of the state. The Republicans are asking their voters here to bury all differences of opinion, of which there are many, among them, and to swallow the whole ticket as prepared for them at one gulp and not stop to consider whether they are all just to their liking or not, or whether it would not be as well to figure on matters a little and see if a legislator is not expected to do something else than cast a ballot for United States Senator.

Democratic County Ticket.

Mr. McKnight, for Treasurer and Podas for Register of Deeds, seem to have a sure thing according to Republican reconings.

For Auditor, A. J. Whitaker, depot agent at Cokato is a capable man and likely to have a chance to figure up county matters.

Judge of Probate Riggs has his licenses to practice law right with him, if you think he is not a lawyer, ask him.

Candidate for Sheriff Valentine Eppel waxed considerably hot in the collar the other day when some of his friends told him that his opponent had circulated a story that he was 80 years old, and walked with two sticks. He said "if I only heard him say it." Who ever started such a yarn was entirely wrong. We have knowa Mr. Eppel for the last eighteen years and he never uses a stick to walk with, and is not 80 years old, but can do as good a days' work, walk as far in a day, or catch as big a rascal and take him to jail as can his opponent. We are of opinion that Mr. Eppel is willing to try conclusions with him at almost any test of physical ability he or his friends may name.

Cutting is going to stump the county for the next week. Turn out and hear what he has to say about County Attorney's duties.

J. F. Collins is going on the stump also. He will doubtless satisfy doubters as to his capabilities to be a good Superintendent of Schools.

Court commissioner Cochrane will be handy in the court house.

County commissioners P. B. O'Loughlin, 1st. Dist., Charles Bugbee, 3rd. Dist., Carl Luhman, 5th Dist., will have an eye to the county interests when they assemble as commissioners at Buffalo.

County Chances.

The Democratic ticket in Wright County appears surer of an election this year than for many years. And old Wright seems about to redeem herself. It has been believed by several authorities on the subject for some time, that, on a square vote, Wright County was Democratic. This time under the Australian system voters are supposed to have a fair chance to express their opinions according to the dictates of their own consciences, and with the lack of enthusiasm for the head of the ticket; the man who opposed the Force bill, and who said the Mc Kinley bill would not open a market for another bushel of wheat or barrel of pork; the man who favored free trade with South America and some other countries, under the Reprocity clause, which he succeeded in hooking onto the McKinley bill; the man who would, doubtless, have carried Minnesota by a big majority had he been nominated at Minneapolis, the foremost statesman among them, James G. Blaine left off the ticket, and a national sadness thereby caused; with a man for Governor who is supposed to have been nominated principally for the purpose of holding the Swede vote, which the G. O. P. claims belongs to her; with a man for Congressman who is supposed to be interested in corporation affairs to a greater extent than the welfare of the people generally; with a legislative ticket made up of two or more factions bitterly opposed to each other on local matters, and which the leaders are trying to make the party vote for, as one man, not because they want them to look after the interest of the 88th Legislative district but for the sole purpose of voting for a United States Senator who is not in accord with their views on the Force bill, the tariff and other questions, and if elected together with enough others of his faith to hold the United States Senate in opposition to the House and President, both of which are almost sure to be Democratic, will only serve to block the wheels of legislation, and prevent the passage of bills for the welfare of the country; and which a majority of the people desire to have passed; with a county ticket made up of candidates who developed the most strength in the late county convention of one division of the several into which the party is divided in the county, with several life long and faithful men left out in the cold, old war horses left to sniff the breezes of their own pastures rather than take part in the battle of ballots; with a younger chairman, whose "toes do not stick out over the cracker box" so far as did those of his illustrious predecessor, the old time settler, soldier and valiant campaigner, the Hon. J. N. Stacy who is very conspicuous for his absence at all the rallies this year; with the young and energetic editor of the "Herald" gone, and his place filled by others not so well versed, in Wright county politics, with "Uncle Oliver" away, and many "old timers" actually fighting against some of the nominees; with others still more thoroughly tired and disgusted with the way things have gone leaving the ranks and voting with the Prohibitionists, the Populists and the Democratic party; with the postmasters trembling in the balance, shaking in their boots lest there be a change of administration, it does look a little discouraging to our Republican friends who desire to have peace and harmony prevail, and the chance for Democracy in Wright county is now here. Stand together and make the effort of your life to get every voter registered and to the poles and see that he votes, and with the aid of all that chance has, on this occasion, given us we must and will have most if not all our ticket elected on Nov. 8, of this the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus.

SNAKE IN THE BEER.

Six Miners Die After Drinking the Poisoned Fluid.

GREENSBURG, Pa., Oct. 13.—A strange story comes from Port Royal on the Baltimore & Ohio road, Saturday night six miners employed in that locality purchased a quarter of a barrel of beer and taking it to the home of one of the parties, proceeded to drink freely. Soon after the beer was exhausted the whole party grew sick. Medical aid was summoned, when the doctor discovered there was evidence of posioning. The usual remedies were administered, but to no avail. All the men died between Sunday night and Monday noon. Friends of the parties believing poison might have been placed in the beer opened the keg and discovered a copperhead snake about two feet long.—St. Paul Daily News.

Our Sherburne Neighbors.

We had occasion to visit a part of Sherburne county this week, and were considerably surprised to see evidences of so much enterprise and thrift, and to meet so many and such earnest Democrats as we did on this occasion. We had heard that the Republicans had a sure thing on that county but like the States of Kansas and Nebraska and Iowa, something happened to them, and they are no longer in the toils of that party, but, have become Prohibitionists, Peoples' Party, and Democrats. Various estimates are made as to the strength of each but the general opinion prevails that the three leading parties are not far from evenly divided. So far as we went we think Democrats will poll the most votes. T. E. Bowen and Alf. Jaques are stumping every night, and things are not sleeping.

KNUTE NELSON is having a hard road to travel just now. He is charged by A. R. Holstion, formerly an attorney at Cokato, as follows:

"Knute Nelson came into possession of his farm at Alexandria by jumping the claim of L. W. Kilburn, a poor settler, in the early days." And he is accused of wanting a collar so badly as to lay hands an another man's collar at Elbow Lake. Reports are that he is getting desperate, and that a warrant is out for his arrest for assault and battery.

DONNELLY said at Buffalo he would reward the man that would prove he had not kept on a straight line politically speaking for the past twenty years. And soon after while talking of other people said smart men change their minds, fools never.

JUDGE REA, of Minneapolis, formerly Commander of the G. A. R., is the latest to leave the Republican ranks and join the Democrat.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C. Oct. 21, 1892.

The man who devises some new scheme to influence the government clerks of the male persuasion to contribute to the republican campaign fund and to promise to go home and vote the republican ticket is the fellow the republican bosses are looking for just now, for the possession of the largest campaign fund ever handled by a National committee has not prevented the republican committee making its usual squeeze of department employes, and every day a new sort of influence is brought to bear upon those who have neither contributed nor promised to go home to vote. The latest is a circular letter from the chairman of the local committee of the precinct in which the clerk votes, begging him to contribute and to come home for the election and intimating that it may be dangerous to his official head not to do both. The officials of the New York State republican association do not hesitate to openly say that they intend using all the influence they possess to have clerks from that State who refuse to contribute and to vote dismissed. Still the Civil Service Commission says the law is not being violated. Perhaps not; but it is being evaded on all sides, if not violated.

It is such a common thing to find republican members of the Cabinet engaged in small political business that until the case is in some respect striking it excites little or no comment here. Attorney-General Miller has occasionally posed as a man who endeavors to keep politics out of his official acts; but he has, this week, been guilty of demanding, nay, compelling the resignation of a democratic judge of the Utah Supreme Court, for no other reason than his politics. This too, in the face of the unwritten rule that judges of Territorial courts be allowed to serve a term of four years, unless they are guilty of misconduct, and the fact that the term of this judge, who was appointed shortly before the close of the Cleveland administration, would have expired in a few months anyway. The deposed official, Judge T. J. Anderson, takes what he considers his dismissal philosophically. He says: "My place was wanted for a republican and one will now get it. That's all there is to it.

The tone of Whitelaw Reid's somewhat belated letter of acceptance is decidedly pleasing to democrats, It shows in the first place that the republican managers thought it necessary to put before the public a special plea in behalf of the republican policy on the tariff and kindred subjects, and it admits that the control of the Senate and the House will go to the democrats with the election of Cleveland and Stevenson. This admission was, of course, inserted to scare out the full republican vote, but it cannot fail to have an excellent effect on the democrats, by pointing out the fact that for the first time in many years they have an opportunity to gain possession of the entire Government, a prize well worth striving for.

Washington democrats have always been noted for their enthusiastic campaign work and their liberal contribution of time and cash to the party, and they are living right up to their reputation this year. The advisory committee, which includes some of our most prominent business men, are

FOR PRESIDENT
Grover Cleveland.
FOR VICE PRESIDENT
Adlai E. Stevenson.

hard at work and determined that every democratic voter in a doubtful State who is temporarily residing in Washington shall be sent home to vote, unless he positively refuses to go, as a few of the weak-kneed brethren in government offices have already done. This committee is prepared to furnish free transportation to those voters unable to pay their own way, and it expects to get several thousand voters to go home to cast their votes for Cleveland and Stevenson. There was an enthusiastic ratification meeting held here tonight under the auspices of the Maryland Democratic Club, of this city, and participated in by all of the local democratic organizations.

There is one happy democratic member of the Washington Stock Exchange; he succeeded, after a long search, in finding a republican to cover his $500 wager that Cleveland would be elected. That sort of republican is scarce and mighty hard to find just now.

Democrats have every reason to be pleased with the political news which comes to this city, as it indicates that the end of republican misrule is near at hand.

The departments are all running without heads this week, and the most of them will be in that condition until after election, as nearly all of the Cabinet members will take the stump after leaving Chicago, where they all are today.

Knute Nelson Bluffing.

From the Franklin Independent.

The following question was fairly put to Knute Nelson at Hanley Falls, Saturday, Oct. 8:

"The following revenue was collected in Canada, on American and English imported watches in 1891. American watches. $411,738; English watches, $5,489, both paid the same tariff, this is taken from the corrected Canadian report of June, 1892. Why do we need 25 per cent protection on American watches?"

Knute read the question through and then turned on the questioner with a savage "Who are you?" twice in succession, not giving his interrogator time to answer. The man was taken by surprise at first and then answered that he "was an American citizen." Knute then said, "Are you a democrat?" and was answered "that is for you to find out," Knute then accused the man of "not being a gentleman in handling the question to him," which was done in most polite manner. The man told him that he was interested in that business and had asked for information. "You are, eh?" said Knute; "well, I am not making barroom arguments," he continued. This was irrelevant, as there was no barroom within nearly half a mile, and the place was filled with gentlemen of his own nationality. He declined most positively to discuss the question further. Nelson is losing votes wherever he goes and he says he wants to send to hell all those who do not agree with him in politics. Your correspondent is afraid that he may be elected, but sincerely hopes not, for the good of the whole American people. W.

AN elevator containing thirteen people dropped seven stories in a building in Chicago and nobody was killed. Two or three were injured, but no one was fatally hurt. THE ink used in printing your money is not the ordinary printer's ink in general use. James Eddy, Troy, N. Y., makes all the ink with which the government paper money is printed. His father invented it, and just before his death let his son into the secret of its manufacture—a secret that he still keeps to himself, as it is worth $50,000 a year to him. The ink in question is said to be the only kind that will print on the paper now used for government notes.

A MODERN case of Damon and Pythias has come to light in Cincinnati through the application of Thomas Colon to be released from the workhouse, where he has been confined for the past fifteen months. It is a delicate legal question whether he can be freed, as he deliberately confessed the crime he never committed.

INSECTS have recently destroyed whole forests in Powhatan county, Va., and among other trees the famous Pope's pine, a noted landmark. It stood for years on an eminence from which it was visible for 20 miles around. In old times Col. Col. Pope, who lived to be 90 years old, knew personally every president from Washington to Polk, and was a famous character in Virginia.

FATAL FLAMES.

They Cause the Death of Two Persons at Englewood, Ill., Besides Destroying Property Worth $100,000.

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—Twenty buildings burned to the ground, involving a loss of $100,000, and two human lives crushed out were the appalling results of a fire of Englewood Tuesday morning. The flames broke out at 4:30 o'clock a. m. in Blum & Jaeger's bakery, 617 Sixty-third street, and raged for nearly three hours. For a time it seemed as if the gallant efforts of the firemen to confine the conflagration within the block in which it started would be futile, and the entire business portion of the little city was threatened with destruction. After two hours of hard and desperate fighting, however, the firemen succeeded in mastering the fire fiend, and by 9 o'clock the flames were well under control.

So far as known but two lives were lost. They are:

Mrs. Ada Butler, Hotel Kent, Sixty-third and Honore streets, killed by jumping from a third-story window. Body bruised and mangled; taken to the county morgue.

John Howard, baker, Sixty-third and Wright streets, burned in Blum & Jaeger's bakery; body taken to Hornig's morgue.

Nobody seems to know just how the fire started. When the alarm was first given the frame structure in which the bakery was situated was a mass of flames, and when the engines, under command of Marshal Murphy, reached the spot the people were pouring out of the adjoining buildings, dazed and half-clad. The lodgers in the Hotel Kent, a three-story brick structure at the corner of Honore and Sixty-third streets, however, did not at first seem to be worried at the rapid approach of the fire, but when they did awaken to the full realization of their danger they lost all reason. With plenty of opportunity to escape they rushed to the Honore street side of the hotel and, breaking the windows, stood panic-stricken, shrieking for assistance.

When the patrol wagon reached the scene the officers saw at once that the occupants of the hotel could be easily rescued, and shouted to them to remain where they were. All obeyed and were saved except Mrs. Ada Butler, who lost her head and jumped, being killed by the fall. She climbed over the railing of the porch at the third story and prepared to leap. Mattresses had been spread on the sidewalk to break the fall of any who might jump, but they proved useless in this case. Mrs. Butler turned her back to the crowd, and just as the fire had reached the porch above her head she released her hold and shot below. As she went down her feet struck the railing of the porch of the second story. The jar threw her far out. Her body turned slowly and she fell on her head. When an officer reached her side she was dead.

The whole affair occupied but a few moments' time, but in that time the fire had gained great headway. Starting in the rear of Blum & Jaegers, it had communicated to the frame sheds in the rear and went along the line in both directions, until twenty buildings had been destroyed. The heat was so intense that it warped the iron on the street car tracks, and set fire to the hose on the street.

It was fully 9 o'clock when the firemen began a search for those absent, and who were supposed to be in the ruins. The fact that nobody about the burning block or in the baker shop of Blum & Jaeger had given any alarm caused the firemen to turn their attention to that place. Huge streams of water were turned into the place and some time later a body was found. The unfortunate man had been literally roasted to death and could not at first be recognized. That he was an employe in the baker shop was certain. The body was placed in the wagon and taken to the morgue, where it was afterwards identified as that of John Howard, a baker, employed by Blum & Jaeger.

SHOT DOWN HIS YOUNG WIFE.

Princley besought her to return to him but she refused. Monday night while the woman was walking with her sister and four other young women Princley ran up behind her, placed a revolver to the back of her head and fired. A second shot mangled her arm and a third flew wild. The first shot killed her. Princley then fled, and knowing the by-ways of the locality escaped.

MORE LIVES SACRIFICED.

Seven Persons Killed in a Railway Disaster Near Philadelphia—Two Men Slain in a Collision in Wisconsin—Seven Deaths from a Disaster in the State of Washington.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 25.—The Shamokin express on the Philadelphia & Reading railroad which is due in this city at 9:30 a. m. was in collision with a train of empty coal cars a short distance north of West Manayunk, about 8 miles north of this city, at a few minutes past 9 o'clock Monday morning. Seven persons were killed outright and twenty-four more or less seriously injured.

Following are the names of the killed:

Annie Atchison, aged 25, of Minersville, Pa.; James Boynton, a machinist, of Reading, Pa.; Mrs. Margaret Devine, of Philadelphia, killed under a stone on the express; David S. Herr, of Harrisburg, was a member of the last Pennsylvania legislature; James Kilrain, aged 23, of Tamaqua, Pa., brakeman; Frank Stiff, a newsboy, of Reading, Pa.; Thomas Welsh, fireman of the express train.

The Shamokin express left Pottsville at 7 o'clock. At Phœnixville orders dated at Reading were received to run on the north-bound track from West Conshohocken to West Falls regardless of all other trains. From West Conshohocken in pursuance of these orders the train took the north-bound track. Train No. 538 of empty coal cars started north from West Manayunk on the northern track shortly before 9 o'clock. The railroad officials say that positive instructions had been given that the coal train should lie up at West Falls, south of where the collision occurred, until the Shamokin train had pasaed.

The two trains came together on a curve. A moment later the shrieks and groans of the dying and wounded filled the air. The express was filled with passengers. The engines plowed their way through each other, then the pieces rolled over. The front of the baggage car was crushed in. The rear of the baggage car and the forward end of the smoker crashed together. The smoker telescoped its way into the passenger coach fully one-half its length. The baggage car was literally smashed to pieces and thrown over on the north-bound track in a heap with the engines. It caught fire and was soon burned up. The next two cars kept the track, notwithstanding that they were telescoped. The next passenger coach and the Pullman car were badly damaged. Except for scratches and bruises the passengers in the last two cars escaped unhurt.

As the engines approached each other Engineer Billings and Conductor Gelechacher of the coal train jumped from the cab, and what injuries they sustained were received in falling. Gallagher, the fireman, was coaling up at the time and saw the impending danger in time to jump from the tank. The only injury he sustained was a sprained wrist. Engineer Fitch and Fireman Waish were alone in the passenger engine. They were buried in the ruins before they knew what happened.

The injured were quickly taken away and soon a row of seven dead bodies were laid out on the side of the road. Word was sent in several directions for medical aid, and in a short time a staff of physicians were on hand looking after the injured who could not be immediately removed in the ambulances. The dead were taken to the city police station at Manayunk.

MILWAUKEE, Oct., 25.—A collision between a freight and work train on the northern division of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road between Elkhart and Plymouth, Wis., at 10:30 o'clock Monday morning resulted in the death of two employes and the injury of eight others. The names of the dead are: Thomas Fitzgerald, of Depere, and Nick Ringle, of Elkhart. The working train, engaged betwen Elkhart and Plymouth, left Flagman E. C. Richardson on the road to flag freight train No. 14, due from the north. Richardson either failed to perform his duty or the signal was not seen, and the freight crashed into the work train.

SPOKANE, Wash., Oct. 25.—An accident occurred on the construction line of the Great Northern road at 8 o'clock Monday morning, resulting in the death of seven men and fatally injuring five more and seriously injuring six others. The track-laying crew had finished work up to the Wenatchee river, and Monday morning started to lay rails across that stream. The east approach and first span were crossed safely. When the middle, at the second span, was reached, the false work under the bridge collapsed and the track machine, together with two carloads of ties and three cars loaded with rails, fell into the river 60 feet below. The men were thrown in every direction and some buried by ties.

United States Cruisers Will Hold High Carnival at Charleston.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—The Charleston (S. C.) festival in commemoration of that city's escape from total destruction in the earthquake of 1886, which will be given October 31, and which will last six days, will be participated in by the United States cruisers Vesuvius and Dolphin. An interesting feature of the celebration will be a reproduction of the assault by the federal fleet on Fort Sumter in 1863. A fac simile of the old fort will be bombarded and the land batteries of the confederates on Morris and Sullivan islands will blaze away with vigor.

GAVE UP THE STRUGGLE.

After Months of Suffering Death Comes Painlessly to Mrs. President Harrison—Scenes During the Closing Hours of Her Life—Her Remains to Be Buried at Indianapolis—A Biographical Sketch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—Mrs. Harrison is no more. The end came at 1:40 a. m. For the second time in the history of the white house a president's wife has died within its walls. Mrs. Harrison met death with the patience and resignation of a devout Christian, and her last days were comparatively free from pain. The body will be taken to Indianapolis, where the interment will be made at Crown Hill cemetery Thursday.

About 12:30 o'clock, while Dr. Gardner sat by Mrs. Harrison's side with his fingers lightly pressed to her pulse, his practiced hand discerned a noticeable weakness of the heart's action, followed almost immediately by a slight decrease of respiration. He notified the grief-stricken family grouped around the couch that the end was near.

The president was beside his dying wife, as he had been for nine hours continuously, and his was the last of the loved features her eyes had dwelt upon. Her breath was labored and slow. As the hands of the clock crept toward the next hour it grew fainter and yet less frequent, and as the time piece marked the hour of 1:40 o'clock there was an interruption of the feeble breath, a resumption and then a stop, this time to be eternal, and the life of Caroline Scott Harrison had gone out peacefully and quietly and without pain.

All of the family in Washington were present at the deathbed except the three little grandchildren and the venerable Dr. Scott, the father of Mrs. Harrison. They were: President Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. McKee, Mrs and Mrs. Russell Harrison, Lieut. and Mrs. Parker, Mrs. Dimmick and Mrs. Newcomer.

The members of the family spent a few minutes around the lifeless clay, and let a veil be drawn over their deep grief. When they emerged with sorrowful faces the president retired immediately to his room and closed his door. The other members of the family, respecting his evident wish, allowed him to remain unmolested to contemplate his great bereavement and commune with his Maker.

[Mrs. Caroline Lavinia Scott Harrison was born in Oxford, O., on October 1, 1835, but the friendship which resulted in making her the wife of the future president of the United States began at College hill, Cincinnati, when young Ben was 16 years old and was attending a school in which Carrie Scott's father, Rev. John W. Scott, was a professor. Miss Carrie was just about young Harrison's age and a warm and earnest friendship sprang up between them. Dr. Scott removed to Oxford, O., to become president of the Oxford female seminary, and in the fall of 1850 Harrison entered the Miami university at the same place. Possibly the fact that Miss Carrie was in that town had something to do with turning his steps thither. At the numerous social entertainments which took place at Oxford Student Harrison had a chance to meet Miss Carrie, and the friendship born back at College hill continued. She was one of the brightest and most intelligent of the young lady students there. She had dark brown hair and eyes of the same shade, while her features, of a brunette cast, were firm, but pleasing, winning and beautiful. She had the faculty of making everyone easy in her presence, and so the pathway of the rather modest young man was not a rough one. So they were engaged. Two years rolled away. Student Harrison graduated and began the study of law in Cincinnati. In October, 1853, the marriage of Carrie Scott and Benjamin Harrison took place, and during the winter of 1853-4 the happy couple lived at his home near North Bend, not far from Cincinnati, preparing meanwhile to begin life's battle alone in the spring. When spring came they removed to Indianapolis, where they have since resided with the exception of the time passed in Washington. Her married life was naturally in a measure a reflection of her husband's. She never hindered him in any duty of life, and when he told her of his enlistment for the war she did not hinder him. She gave him her blessing, and when he left her for the field the tears and words at parting showed what a sacrifice she had made. Upon the election of Mr. Harrison as United States senator and the breaking up of the home at Indianapolis for the one at Washington, the same qualities distinguished her as at Indianapolis and she won a social triumph. Following her experiences as the wife of a senator came the duties of mistress of the white house. As such she proved herself a charming hostess, being ably assisted by her daughter, Mrs. Mary Scott McKee. Aside from her daughter and the latter's little son, Mrs. Harrison had one son, Russell B. Harrison. Having graduated at the Oxford seminary in the same year Mr. Harrison took his degree at the university, Mrs. Harrison was always devoted to literary matters, and at Indianapolis was a member of several literary clubs. She was also a musician and devoted to painting and was manager of one of the Indianapolis orphan asylums. As the daughter of a minister of the gospel she was always an active Christian, and was a member of the Presbyterian church. Among the many noble women of Indianapolis whose zeal in good work is their glory and a benediction to the city Mrs. Harrison stood in the front rank. Intelligent, refined, educated and devoted to God, she helped to make her home as much a sanctuary of religion as of domestic love and happiness.]

Judge Blodgett Resigns.

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—Judge Blodgett has sent his resignation to President Harrison and after the first Monday in December there will be a vacancy in the office of the United States judge for the northern district of Illinois. The resignation was sent last week and the date above named was fixed for it to take effect, so that the president could have ample time in which to pick out a successor for the present judge. The reason for the resignation is the recent appointment of Judge Blodgett as a member of the commission of arbitration in the dispute between this country and England regarding the Behring sea fisheries.

Fifty Thousand Persons Drowned in China

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 25.—Letters from Chinan Fu, in China, bring terrible accounts of the loss of life and property caused by the breaking of the banks of the Yellow river, which is aptly called "China's sorrow." It is only three years since the whole basin of the river was flooded and now comes a new flood, fully as disastrous as the other. It is estimated that the flooded district is 150 miles long by 30 wide, that over 50,000 people have been drowned and that fully 1,000,000 will starve to death unless the Chinese government furnishes them food from now till next spring.

TO BRACE UP the system after "La Grippe," pneumonia, fevers, and other prostrating acute diseases; to build up needed flesh and strength, and to restore health and vigor when you feel "run-down" and used-up, the best thing in the world is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It promotes all the bodily functions, rouses every organ into healthful action, purifies and enriches the blood, and through it cleanses, repairs, and invigorates the entire system.

For the most stubborn Scrofulous, Skin or Scalp Diseases, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, and kindred ailments, the "Discovery" is the only remedy that's guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure, you have your money back.

Can you think of anything more convincing than the promise that is made by the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy? It is this: "If we can't cure your Catarrh, we'll pay you $500 in cash."

"German Syrup"

Two bottles of German Syrup cured me of Hemorrhage of the Lungs when other remedies failed. I am a married man and, thirty-six years of age, and live with my wife and two little girls at Durham, Mo. I have stated this brief and plain so that all may understand. My case was a bad one, and I shall be glad to tell anyone about it who will write me. PHILIP L. SCHENCK, P. O. Box 45, April 25, 1890. No man could ask a more honorable, business-like statement.

TWO GREAT REMEDIES.

The human citadel is open to attacks from two sources and aside from accidents these two are the avenues from which all of the maladies that afflict the race spring. The first of these are what is known as the excretory organs—the lungs, the kidneys and the skin. These suffer from congestion which takes the form of colds. Starting from what is called a cold the maladies that result are wide spread ranging from a cough to consumption. They attack all ages and all stations. No one is free from these troubles. There is, however, a remedy that is a safeguard. This is REID'S GERMAN COUGH AND KIDNEY CURE. It contains no poison, and it will heal any form of lung trouble or any malady that arises from a cold. The other class of disease arise from derangement of the digestive organs and result in constipation. When the bowels do not act the stomach soon refuses to digest the food and we are troubled with indigestion and a long train of disorders that embrace a large range of maladies. THE LAXATIVE GUM DROPS will correct any difficulty of this sort. They contain nothing deleterious, but are safe and pleasant. Get them of any dealer. SYLVAN REMEDY CO., Peoria, Ill.

AN elevator containing thirteen people dropped seven stories in a building in Chicago and nobody was killed. Two or three were injured, but no one was fatally hurt. What shall be said, after this, of the thirteen superstition? It has to be proven that if twelve people, or fourteen people, had fallen seven stories in an elevator they would have been so fortunate.

THE ink used in printing your money is not the ordinary printer's ink in general use. James Eddy, Troy, N. Y., makes all the ink with which the government paper money is printed. His father invented it, and just before his death let his son into the secret of its manufacture—a secret that he still keeps to himself, as it is worth $50,000 a year to him. The ink in question is said to be the only kind that will print on the paper now used for government notes.

A MODERN case of Damon and Pythias has come to light in Cincinnati through the application of Thomas Colon to be released from the workhouse, where he has been confined for the past fifteen months. Patrick, his brother, struck a man with a shovel and by mistake Thomas was arrested. He pleaded guilty in order to save his brother and was sentenced. It is a delicate legal question whether he can be freed, as he deliberately confessed the crime he never committed.

THE women of Bohemia have about 100 different clubs and societies organized for the advancement and aid of women. One of the clubs or societies is for the purpose of protecting young girls morally neglected. A home is provided for them and opportunities for study in the schools afforded until they are old enough to go out to service. Another club is devoted to raising the standard of education for women by founding schools and securing admission of women students to the universities. One college for women now exists, and in four years the University of Prague will be open to them.

INSECTS have recently destroyed whole forests in Powhatan county, Va., and among other trees the famous Pope's pine, a noted landmark. It stood for years on an eminence from which it was visible for 20 miles around. In old times Col. Pope, a local patriot, put a liberty cap like that stamped on our copper cent pieces on top of the tree, and every year, when Fourth of July came around, he celebrated the anniversary by holding a barbecue at the foot of the pine. Col. Pope, who lived to be 90 years old, knew personally every president from Washington to Polk, and was a famous character in Virginia.

Omitting 35 charged with double crimes, 6,958 of them were men and 393 were women. As to color, 4,425 were white, 2,739 negroes, 94 Chinese, 1 Japanese and 92 Indians. As to the nativity of the whites, 3,157 were born in the United States, 1,213 were foreign born, and the birthplace of 55 is unknown. More than one-half of the foreign-born whites are unnaturalized.

FATAL FLAMES.

They Cause the Death of Two Persons at Englewood, Ill., Besides Destroying Property Worth $100,000.

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—Twenty buildings burned to the ground, involving a loss of $100,000, and two human lives crushed out were the appalling results of a fire of Englewood Tuesday morning. The flames broke out at 4:30 o'clock a. m. in Blum & Jaeger's bakery, 617 Sixty-third street, and raged for nearly three hours. For a time it seemed as if the gallant efforts of the firemen to confine the conflagration within the block in which it started would be futile, and the entire business portion of the little city was threatened with destruction. After two hours of hard and desperate fighting, however, the firemen succeeded in mastering the fire fiend, and by 9 o'clock the flames were well under control.

So far as known but two lives were lost. They are:

Mrs. Ada Butler, Hotel Kent, Sixty-third and Honore streets, killed by jumping from a third-story window. Body bruised and mangled; taken to the county morgue.

John Howard, baker, Sixty-third and Wright streets, burned in Blum & Jaeger's bakery; body taken to Hornig's morgue.

Nobody seems to know just how the fire started. When the alarm was first given the frame structure in which the bakery was situated was a mass of flames, and when the engines, under command of Marshal Murphy, reached the spot the people were pouring out of the adjoining buildings, dazed and half-clad. The lodgers in the Hotel Kent, a three-story brick structure at the corner of Honore and Sixty-third streets, however, did not at first seem to be worried at the rapid approach of the fire, but when they did awaken to the full realization of their danger they lost all reason. With plenty of opportunity to escape they rushed to the Honore street side of the hotel and, breaking the windows, stood panic-stricken, shrieking for assistance.

When the patrol wagon reached the scene the officers saw at once that the occupants of the hotel could be easily rescued, and shouted to them to remain where they were. All obeyed and were saved except Mrs. Ada Butler, who lost her head and jumped, being killed by the fall. She climbed over the railing of the porch at the third story and prepared to leap. Mattresses had been spread on the sidewalk to break the fall of any who might jump, but they proved useless in this case. Mrs. Butler turned her back to the crowd, and just as the fire had reached the porch above her head she released her hold and shot below. As she went down her feet struck the railing of the porch of the second story. The jar threw her far out. Her body turned slowly and she fell on her head. When an officer reached her side she was dead.

The whole affair occupied but a few moments' time, but in that time the fire had gained great headway. Starting in the rear of Blum & Jaegers, it had communicated to the frame sheds in the rear and went along the line in both directions, until twenty buildings had been destroyed. The heat was so intense that it warped the iron on the street car tracks, and set fire to the hose on the street.

It was fully 9 o'clock when the firemen began a search for those absent, and who were supposed to be in the ruins. The fact that nobody about the burning block or in the baker shop of Blum & Jaeger had given any alarm caused the firemen to turn their attention to that place. Huge streams of water were turned into the place and some time later a body was found. The unfortunate man had been literally roasted to death and could not at first be recognized. That he was an employe in the baker shop was certain. The body was placed in the wagon and taken to the morgue, where it was afterwards identified as that of John Howard, a baker, employed by Blum & Jaeger.

SHOT DOWN HIS YOUNG WIFE.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 19.—Mrs. Alice Princley, aged 22, was shot and instantly killed here Monday night by her husband, Theodore Princley. The young couple were married January 16 last, but after a month of married life, during which the young man drank to excess, stole some jewelry and was sent to the workhouse, Mrs. Princley refused to live with her husband and returned to her parents. Princley besought her to return to him but she refused. Monday night while the woman was walking with her sister and four other young women Princley ran up behind her, placed a revolver to the back of her head and fired. A second shot mangled her arm and a third flew wild. The first shot killed her. Princley then fled, and knowing the by-ways of the locality escaped.

KILLED BY THE CARS.

Three Men Lose Their Lives in a Wreck on the Lehigh Road.

WAVERLY, N. Y., Oct. 19.—Three men lost their lives in a railroad wreck at the highway crossing near Scott's coal yard, a short distance from this place on the Lehigh railroad. Engineer Patrick Laven was standing with his engine on the frog when a yard engine in charge of John Gorman came up the main line with a box car in front and smashed into Laven's engine. Laven and his fireman were killed and Edward Passmore, a brakeman, was struck by a caboose and killed.

To Be Closed on Sunday.

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—The Columbian exposition national commission held a meeting here Tuesday. A resolution was offered declaring in effect that the commission desired to see the fair open seven days in the week. The resolution did not even reach the state of debate. A motion to table it was made, put and carried viva voca in short order. Commissioner St. Clair announced that the directors had formally agreed to the Sunday-closing condition by accepting the government appropriation, and would present rules on Monday containing a Sunday-closing clause.

MORE LIVES SACRIFICED.

Seven Persons Killed in a Railway Disaster Near Philadelphia—Two Men Slain in a Collision in Wisconsin—Seven Deaths from a Disaster in the State of Washington.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 25.—The Shamokin express on the Philadelphia & Reading railroad which is due in this city at 9:30 a. m. was in collision with a train of empty coal cars a short distance north of West Manayunk, about 8 miles north of this city, at a few minutes past 9 o'clock Monday morning. Seven persons were killed outright and twenty-four more or less seriously injured.

Following are the names of the killed:

Annie Atchison, aged 25, of Minersville, Pa.; James Boynton, a machinist, of Reading, Pa.; Mrs. Margaret Devine, of Philadelphia, killed under a stone on the express; David S. Herr, of Harrisburg, was a member of the last Pennsylvania legislature; James Kilrain, aged 23, of Tamaqua, Pa., brakeman; Frank Stiff, a newsboy, of Reading, Pa.; Thomas Welsh, fireman of the express train.

The Shamokin express left Pottsville at 7 o'clock. At Phœnixville orders dated at Reading were received to run on the north-bound track from West Conshohocken to West Falls regardless of all other trains. From West Conshohocken in pursuance of these orders the train took the north-bound track. Train No. 538 of empty coal cars started north from West Manayunk on the northern track shortly before 9 o'clock. The railroad officials say that positive instructions had been given that the coal train should lie up at West Falls, south of where the collision occurred, until the Shamokin train had pasaed.

The two trains came together on a curve. A moment later the shrieks and groans of the dying and wounded filled the air. The express was filled with passengers. The engines plowed their way through each other, then the pieces rolled over. The front of the baggage car was crushed in. The rear of the baggage car and the forward end of the smoker crashed together. The smoker telescoped its way into the passenger coach fully one-half its length. The baggage car was literally smashed to pieces and thrown over on the north-bound track in a heap with the engines. It caught fire and was soon burned up. The next two cars kept the track, notwithstanding that they were telescoped. The next passenger coach and the Pullman car were badly damaged. Except for scratches and bruises the passengers in the last two cars escaped unhurt.

As the engines approached each other Engineer Billings and Conductor Gelechacher of the coal train jumped from the cab, and what injuries they sustained were received in falling. Gallagher, the fireman, was coaling up at the time and saw the impending danger in time to jump from the tank. The only injury he sustained was a sprained wrist. Engineer Fitch and Fireman Walsh were alone in the passenger engine. They were buried in the ruins before they knew what happened.

The injured were quickly taken away and soon a row of seven dead bodies were laid out on the side of the road. Word was sent in several directions for medical aid, and in a short time a staff of physicians were on hand looking after the injured who could not be immediately removed in the ambulances. The dead were taken to the city police station at Manayunk.

MILWAUKEE, Oct., 25.—A collision between a freight and work train on the northern division of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road between Elkhart and Plymouth, Wis., at 10:30 o'clock Monday morning resulted in the death of two employes and the injury of eight others. The names of the dead are: Thomas Fitzgerald, of Depere, and Nick Ringle, of Elkhart. The working train, engaged betwen Elkhart and Plymouth, left Flagman E. C. Richardson on the road to flag freight train No. 14, due from the north. Richardson either failed to perform his duty or the signal was not seen, and the freight crashed into the work train.

SPOKANE, Wash., Oct. 25.—An accident occurred on the construction line of the Great Northern road at 8 o'clock Monday morning, resulting in the death of seven men and fatally injuring five more and seriously injuring six others. The track-laying crew had finished work up to the Wenatchee river, and Monday morning started to lay rails across that stream. The east approach and first span were crossed safely. When the middle, at the second span, was reached, the false work under the bridge collapsed and the track machine, together with two carloads of ties and three cars loaded with rails, fell into the river 60 feet below. The men were thrown in every direction and some buried by ties.

GERMANY'S ARMY.

The Peace Footing from 1893 to 1895 Will Be 492,000, Making the Strength of the Empire Almost as Great as That of Russia.

BERLIN, Oct. 25.—Official details of the new army bill have been published. The peace footing from October 1, 1893, to March 31, 1895, is fixed at 492,068. The service of the infantry is generally reduced to two years. The adoption of this measure is necessary because the former military preponderance of Germany is gone. The war strength of France is placed at 4,053,000 and of Russia 4,556,000. When the reorganization under the bill is completed the German army will have attained a strength of 4,400,000.

TERRIBLE MORTALITY.

The Victims of Cholera in Russia Number 77,000.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 25.—Since the outbreak of cholera in the Russian dominions there have been in the lieutenancy of the Caucasus 125,000 cases of the disease and 65,000 deaths. In Saratoff there have been 31,000 cases and 11,000 deaths and in St. Petersburg 3,300 cases and 1,500 deaths, making in these three districts alone a total of 159,300 cases and 77,000 deaths. Three weeks ago the disease broke out in Warsaw, and since that time twenty cholera deaths have occurred in that city.

United States Cruisers Will Hold High Carnival at Charleston.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—The Charleston (S. C.) festival in commemoration of that city's escape from total destruction in the earthquake of 1886, which will be given October 31, and which will last six days, will be participated in by the United States cruisers Vesuvius and Dolphin. An interesting feature of the celebration will be a reproduction of the assault by the federal fleet on Fort Sumter in 1863. A fac simile of the old fort will be bombarded and the land batteries of the confederates on Morris and Sullivan islands will blaze away with vigor.

GAVE UP THE STRUGGLE.

After Months of Suffering Death Comes Painlessly to Mrs. President Harrison—Scenes During the Closing Hours of Her Life—Her Remains to Be Buried at Indianapolis—A Biographical Sketch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—Mrs. Harrison is no more. The end came at 1:40 a. m. For the second time in the history of the white house a president's wife has died within its walls. Mrs. Harrison met death with the patience and resignation of a devout Christian, and her last days were comparatively free from pain. The body will be taken to Indianapolis, where the interment will be made at Crown Hill cemetery Thursday.

About 12:30 o'clock, while Dr. Gardner sat by Mrs. Harrison's side with his fingers lightly pressed to her pulse, his practiced hand discerned a noticeable weakness of the heart's action, followed almost immediately by a slight decrease of respiration. He notified the grief-stricken family grouped around the couch that the end was near.

The president was beside his dying wife, as he had been for nine hours continuously, and his was the last of the loved features her eyes had dwelt upon. Her breath was labored and slow. As the hands of the clock crept toward the next hour it grew fainter and yet less frequent, and as the time piece marked the hour of 1:40 o'clock there was an interruption of the feeble breath, a resumption and then a stop, this time to be eternal, and the life of Caroline Scott Harrison had gone out peacefully and quietly and without pain.

All of the family in Washington were present at the deathbed except the three little grandchildren and the venerable Dr. Scott, the father of Mrs. Harrison. They were: President Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. McKee, Mrs and Mrs. Russell Harrison, Lieut. and Mrs. Parker, Mrs. Dimmick and Mrs. Newcomer.

The members of the family spent a few minutes around the lifeless clay, and let a veil be drawn over their deep grief. When they emerged with sorrowful faces the president retired immediately to his room and closed his door. The other members of the family, respecting his evident wish, allowed him to remain unmolested to contemplate his great bereavement and commune with his Maker.

[Mrs. Caroline Lavinia Scott Harrison was born in Oxford, O., on October 1, 1835, but the friendship which resulted in making her the wife of the future president of the United States began at College hill, Cincinnati, when young Ben was 16 years old and was attending a school in which Carrie Scott's father, Rev. John W. Scott, was a professor. Miss Carrie was just about young Harrison's age and a warm and earnest friendship sprang up between them. Dr. Scott removed to Oxford, O., to become president of the Oxford female seminary, and in the fall of 1850 Harrison entered the Miami university at the same place. Possibly the fact that Miss Carrie was in that town had something to do with turning his steps thither. At the numerous social entertainments which took place at Oxford Student Harrison had a chance to meet Miss Carrie, and the friendship born back at College hill continued. She was one of the brightest and most intelligent of the young lady students there. She had dark brown hair and eyes of the same shade, while her features, of a brunette cast, were firm, but pleasing, winning and beautiful. She had the faculty of making everyone easy in her presence, and so the pathway of the rather modest young man was not a rough one. So they were engaged. Two years rolled away. Student Harrison graduated and began the study of law in Cincinnati. In October, 1853, the marriage of Carrie Scott and Benjamin Harrison took place, and during the winter of 1853-4 the happy couple lived at his home near North Bend, not far from Cincinnati, preparing meanwhile to begin life's battle alone in the spring. When spring came they removed to Indianapolis, where they have since resided with the exception of the time passed in Washington. Her married life was naturally in a measure a reflection of her husband's. She never hindered him in any duty of life, and when he told her of his enlistment for the war she did not hinder him. She gave him her blessing, and when he left her for the field the tears and words at parting showed what a sacrifice she had made. Upon the election of Mr. Harrison as United States senator and the breaking up of the home at Indianapolis for the one at Washington, the same qualities distinguished her as at Indianapolis and she won a social triumph. Following her experiences as the wife of a senator came the duties of mistress of the white house. As such she proved herself a charming host, being ably assisted by her daughter, Mrs. Mary Scott McKee. Aside from her daughter and the latter's little son, Mrs. Harrison had one son, Russell B. Harrison. Having graduated at the Oxford seminary in the same year Mr. Harrison took his degree at the university, Mrs. Harrison was always devoted to literary matters, and at Indianapolis was a member of several literary clubs. She was also a musician and devoted to painting and was manager of one of the Indianapolis orphan asylums. As the daughter of a minister of the gospel she was always an active Christian, and was a member of the Presbyterian church. Among the many noble women of Indianapolis whose zeal in good work is their glory and a benediction to the city Mrs. Harrison stood in the front rank. Intelligent, refined, educated and devoted to God, she helped to make her home as much a sanctuary of religion as of domestic love and happiness.]

Judge Blodgett Resigns.

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—Judge Blodgett has sent his resignation to President Harrison and after the first Monday in December there will be a vacancy in the office of the United States judge for the northern district of Illinois. The resignation was sent last week and the date above named was fixed for it to take effect, so that the president could have ample time in which to pick out a successor for the present judge. The reason for the resignation is the recent appointment of Judge Blodgett as a member of the commission of arbitration in the dispute between this country and England regarding the Behring sea fisheries.

Fifty Thousand Persons Drowned in China

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 25.—Letters from Chinan Fu, in China, bring terrible accounts of the loss of life and property caused by the breaking of the banks of the Yellow river, which is aptly called "China's sorrow." It is only three years since the whole basin of the river was flooded and now comes a new flood, fully as disastrous as the other. It is estimated that the flooded district is 150 miles long by 30 wide, that over 50,000 people have been drowned and that fully 1,000,000 will starve to death unless the Chinese government furnishes them food from now till next spring.

TO BRACE UP the system after "La Grippe," pneumonia, fevers, and other prostrating acute diseases; to build up needed flesh and strength, and to restore health and vigor when you feel "run-down" and used-up, the best thing in the world is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It promotes all the bodily functions, rouses every organ into healthful action, purifies and enriches the blood, and through it cleanses, repairs, and invigorates the entire system.

For the most stubborn Scrofulous, Skin or Scalp Diseases, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, and kindred ailments, the "Discovery" is the only remedy that's guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure, you have your money back.

Can you think of anything more convincing than the promise that is made by the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy? It is this: "If we can't cure your Catarrh, we'll pay you $500 in cash."

"German Syrup"

Two bottles of German Syrup cured me of Hemorrhage of the Lungs when other remedies failed. I am a married man and, thirty-six years of age, and live with my wife and two little girls at Durham, Mo. I have stated this brief and plain so that all may understand. My case was a bad one, and I shall be glad to tell anyone about it who will write me. PHILIP L. SCHENCK, P. O. Box 45, April 25, 1890. No man could ask a more honorable, business-like statement.

TWO GREAT REMEDIES.

The human citadel is open to attacks from two sources and aside from accidents these two are the avenues from which all of the maladies that afflict the race spring. The first of these are what is known as the excretory organs—the lungs, the kidneys and the skin. These suffer from congestion which takes the form of colds. Starting from what is called a cold the maladies that result are wide spread ranging from a cough to consumption. They attack all ages and all stations. No one is free from these troubles. There is, however, a remedy that is a safeguard. This is REID'S GERMAN COUGH AND KIDNEY CURE. It contains no poison, and it will heal any form of lung trouble or any malady that arises from a cold. The other class of disease arise from derangement of the digestive organs and result in constipation. When the bowels do not act the stomach soon refuses to digest the food and we are troubled with indigestion and a long train of disorders that embrace a large range of maladies. THE LAXATIVE GUM DROPS will correct any difficulty of this sort. They contain nothing deleterious, but are safe and pleasant. Get them of any dealer. SYLVAN REMEDY CO., Peoria, Ill.

FOREVER.

Two little streamlets leapt and flowed,
And sang their songs together;
They felt alike the summer rays,
And bore the stormy weather;
The selfsame blossoms decked them both
In colors rich and rare;
And in each stream the song-birds wooed
Their bright reflections there.
And on, and on, and on they danced,
Each leaping toward the river,
And then they met to kiss and part
Forever and forever.

Two human lives, two kindred hearts,
By destiny's decree,
Met in the spring of life, to learn
Its deepest mystery.
They dreamed their morning dreams of hope
Through fair unclouded weather;
They opened love's bewitching book,
And read it through together;
They saw in one another's eyes
A deep unspoken bliss;
And from each other's lips they took
Love's ever-ready kiss.

And then the fate that crushes all
The sweetest pleasures here
Turned hope's glad music to a sigh,
Its glory to a tear.
It stepped between them; ah! it mocked
The love it could not kill;
It bade them in its fury live,
And love and suffer still.
They tried with outstretched hands to span
Fate's wide unyielding "Never."
The voice of destiny replied:
"Forever and forever."

Mine is no wild imagined theme,
No idle fancy flight,
It lives through daylight's busy hours,
And haunts the silent night.
The wail of sorrow fills the air,
It rests, it ceases never;
It wrings some soul, it breaks some heart,
Forever and forever.

A SPY'S STRATAGEM.

How a British Officer Secured Information of Washington's Army.

Early in the winter of 1779 Washington's army was encamped at Morristown; and about twenty miles west of that place was the residence of Squire John Kitchell, one of the most widely known and unyielding patriots of northern New Jersey. His farm and dwelling bordered on the main road; and one evening, late in November, the usual family worship had just closed, his wife and his daughters had retired upstairs, and the squire was quaffing his nightcap of sweet cider, when his ear caught the hoof-beats of a horse outside.

Presently a step sounded on the stoop; and when the squire unfastened the door his flaring candle shone fitfully upon the long beard and blue-caped cloak of a stranger. The newcomer, somewhat bent by the weight of apparently sixty years, asked the favor of a night's hay for his horse and, for himself, only permission to rest in the barn beside him; for his purpose was to depart before sunrise. He was on his way to the American army with supplies, he said, and his laden wagon was but half a day's journey behind him. He supported his request by showing a pass which allowed Capt. Job Spring, with his team, a safe passage to the army and a return to the Delaware river.

To all this the squire replied that he was welcome to such quarters for himself and horse as he could find in the barn. Taking a lantern, he led the way, adding that in one of the stalls he had, an hour before, given lodging to a young man about to join the patriot ranks, and that his farmhand, Black Tom, also slept in the hay near by. After seeing the stranger and his roadster fairly accommodated, the squire bade him good night and returned to his homestead.

It was at least an hour after midnight when the repose of the sleeping household was rudely disturbed by the tramp of horses and the voices of a body of men demanding admittance. The alarmed inmates hastily answered the summons.

"Squire Kitchell, you are my prisoner!" cried the leader of the party.

"Who are you, sir, and where is your warrant?"

"We are all true blue and belong to the Sussex militia, and here is the warrant of the county committee to arrest you for communicating secretly with King George's commander in New York."

"Pooh! Pooh!" lightly exclaimed the squire. "Everybody knows I am a good whig; and when you bring me before Gen. Washington he'll just laugh at you and tell you to go about better business."

"Well, you won't go before Gen. Washington, and we have no time to waste any words. We'll just search your house and then escort you safely to our county jail at Newton."

"Here's more of 'em, leftenant!" cried a couple of troopers, hastily entering, in charge of Capt. Job Spring, together with the young man who had occupied a stall near him, and Black Tom, the farmhand.

"Strap the nigger fast behind one of the men and see that he don't escape. Squire, you and these other two will go into the parlor and keep quiet there along with your family, while we search upstairs for your treasonable papers. Sergeant, place sentinels around the house and one outside this parlor door, and see that no one leaves the room."

Then the leader and his men rushed upstairs to begin their search.

The prisoners were left alone in the parlor, and the door was closed; but by his tramp and voice they knew that a sentry was stationed in the hall outside. A candle on the table feebly illuminated the room, and the silence was broken only by the sobs of the squire's wife and daughters. At length the old gentleman soothed them and then seized the opportunity to explain the situation to his guest, Capt. Spring, and solemnly to protest his entire innocence of the charge alleged against him.

"Squire Kitchell, I believe you with all my heart," replied the captain, "and this will yet prove to be some grand mistake. I have heard of you before as one of our stanchest patriots. But what can you do at present? From what I have learned, there appears to be no charge against me nor against anyone but you. They cannot go behind my pass nor detain me."

"Nor detain me a moment, if my son at army headquarters could but get word of it. He is one of Washington's most trusted officers," said the squire.

"And his name?"

"Lieut. Kitchell, of the commissary department."

"What! Lieut. Kitchell!" cried the captain. "Why, my eldest son was once under his command, and his letters home oftened mentioned the lieutenant with gratitude. He is on the staff, then?"

"Yes," said the squire. "He is a young man of fine education, and so was put in general charge of the army records as well as those of the commissary—"

"And that," interrupted the sobbing wife, "is no small affair in an army of ten thousand men."

"So many as that!" exclaimed Capt. Spring.

"No, no, wife, not quite so many—" began the squire.

"Well, no matter," put in the captain. "Let us look at this matter coolly—and quickly, too. Now, have you paper, pen and ink in this room?"

In an instant the squire had opened a bureau and placed the required articles on the table.

"Now," said the captain, "sit here, squire, and write only a few lines to your son. Tell him you send them in haste by me, Capt. Job Spring, from the Delaware. Say you have been apprehended unjustly by the Sussex militia, and state the charge. Now say they are about to burn the house, and you may add they will probably hang you before they leave. Make it strong enough to bring relief quickly."

"What if these scoundrels should be Moody's men, after all!" suddenly cried the squire.

"Moody, the British spy? A good idea! Put that in, too. So, sign your name. Now I propose to take this letter and gallop off to headquarters as soon as these rascals leave. As for this young man—what is your name?"

"Maxwell—Robert Maxwell," was the reply of the young man.

"Well, I shall tell these fellows you are one of my teamsters. That's the only way to get you clear of them. And, I say, as you are going to join the army, I want you to hasten after me and meet me at the Morristown camp just as quickly as you can."

"Come, Squire Kitchell! To horse!" exclaimed the sentry, suddenly throwing open the parlor door.

Then, after a sorrowful scene of parting, the troopers rode away with their two captives, the squire and Black Tom.

Very soon after the faint dawn was just appearing when Capt. Spring mounted his nag in front of the house, and said to young Maxwell:

"Push after me, my lad, as fast as you can. I have saved you, and I want you at Morristown, to state what you have witnessed here this night."

The young man gratefully assented. But as soon as the captain was out of sight, he took good care to leave the road and get into the woods and fields, on a course that would bring him considerably to the northward of Morristown. The truth was, he had been a British prisoner, taken with Burgoyne's army, had escaped from his confinement in Pennsylvania, and was making his way to the British lines at New York. He certainly had no desire to follow in the track of Capt. Spring.

It was full ten o'clock that morning when the captain was passed through the lines of the American army and ushered into the commissary's office on Bottle hill above Morristown. Lieut. Kitchell was alone in the office, busily writing at a table covered with record books. First exhibiting his pass, Capt. Spring then handed him the squire's letter.

"Good heavens!" exclaimed the lieutenant, "this must have instant attention!" and he rushed in agony out of the office.

The captain sat still for a few moments. Then he rose and looked curiously over the record-books, made a few notes from them, and ended by putting one of them into the breast-pocket of his coat. A grand review of the army was going on in the plain below on the border of the village, and, as the lieutenant seemed in no haste to return, the captain mounted his nag and rode down to see the parade. The commander in chief and his suite were there, and, like any other old rustic, the captain and his jade rode slowly up and down near the line, apparently enjoying the sight. Presently some one in the crowd seemed recognize him and hailed him; but to this he gave no attention. He merely turned his horse and, in an absent sort of way, ambled through the streets of the village, westward. After getting beyond the town, his nag began to trot, then to gallop, and it seemed as if the rider had forgotten all about his business, his supplies, his laden wagon and everything, except getting back home to the Delaware as fast as possible.

The deep boom of a cannon sounded from the heights above the town. It was the "Old Sow,' an eighteen pounder, that was fired only in case of a general alarm. The report seemed to act like a spur on the captain's steed. As he reached the summit of a hill he hastily looked back, and in the distance, behind a cloud of dust rising on the high-road, a squadron of dragoons was in full gallop, and the captain flew like a flash. They were evidently the pursuers and he the pursued. He was pressing toward the distant defiles of the mountains. Three miles more brought him into a forest road. A single dragoon, outriding the others, dashed up; but the captain's pistol-shot emptied his saddle. The chase grew furious, desperate. Two other troopers fell in succession. His pistols were empty, and his only resource was continued flight. There was still one remaining pursuer—and but one—at his heels, and he came near enough to grasp the fugitive's cloak. Adroitly slipping it loose, and urging his horse to the utmost, once more he dashed ahead. The dragoon followed fast and, coming alongside, aimed a slashing cut, that would have finished the flight had not the captain's horse stumbled and, in his headlong fall, dashed his rider to the ground. He was at the mercy of his foe. The pursuing soldier leaped from his saddle and, advancing with threatening blade, cried:

"At last, Moody, at last!"

Before the fallen man could make a sign of surrender there was a rustle in the neighboring bushes. A stranger sprang out of them in the rear of the excited trooper. A heavy club was in his hand, and with one blow he laid the unsuspecting soldier low. The next instant Capt. Spring—Moody, the British spy—flung himself on the dragoon horse, and, with a wave of his hand, dashed westward to the mountains. In his unlooked-for deliverer he recognized young Maxwell.

Moody's object had been gained. He had obtained for Sir Henry Clinton the ration-book and all other information relative to Washington's army, and when he rejoined his loyalist band that night his first care was to set free Squire Kitchell, who had so unwittingly aided him. Moody's well-known retreat in that region was an inaccessible cavern on the borders of two ponds, known as the Big and Little Muckshaw, and about two miles south of Newton in Sussex county. Between this lurking place and the city of New York was his line of operation and the region of his many famous exploits.

When Moody escaped, Maxwell, his deliverer, did not succeed in evading the remaining body of dragoons who immediately came up. He was captured, and, being identified by Squire Kitchell, was charged with aiding in the attack and plunder of his house. Eventually he was taken to Newton jail and there confined under sentence of death. Moody, however, had not forgotten his good service. Often absent on distant and perilous expeditions, it was not until the succeeding spring that the loyalist spy learned of the doom impending over his rescuer. Death threatened young Maxwell for an act of which he was innocent and of which Moody himself was the perpetrator. The spy, therefore, determined to attempt his release at any risk.

The midnight rescue is one of the notable historical incidents of Sussex county, and the details can also be found in Moody's "Revolutionary Journal," published by himself in London in 1782.

Taking with him six picked men, the spy entered the village of Newton late at night. It was a perilous enterprise, and stratagem became necessary. The keeper of the jail was hailed, and he appeared at an upper window.

"I have a tory prisoner to deliver to you," said Moody, assuming the character of a continental officer. "You know him well. It is Jaquitte, one of Moody's men."

The jailer was overjoyed at the prospect of having so notorious a loyalist in his custody; but he was cautious. He refused to open the doors.

"Moody and his men are out—so it is said—and my orders are not to unbar the door after sunset. You will have to wait till morning."

The spy then abandoned stratagem, and sternly exclaimed:

"The man who now speaks to you is Moody. I have a strong party here! Instantly open the doors, or I'll pull the jail down and hang you on the nearest tree!"

The jailer vanished from the window and sounded the alarm bell. The people of the town were aroused by it, and their approaching steps were heard in the darkness. The spy knew that in former years, not long past, the village had been the scene of Indian attack and massacre, and he ordered his men to set up a terrific yell and a succession of war-whoops. The villagers were panic-stricken.

"The savages are upon us!" they cried, as they hurried back to defend their homes.

In the meantime an entrance had been forced, and Maxwell was found in his cell, peacefully slumbering. The sudden vision of armed men startled him. Instant execution menaced him, as he thought, and he was thrown into an agony of despair. The next moment, the words: "You are free!" raised him to such a frenzy of joy that he could scarcely be hurried away in time to escape the pursuit that followed.

Young Maxwell was afterward recaptured and suffered death. He was the brother of Lieut.-Gen. Sir John Maxwell, who, in 1830, was the last survivor of the British officers who had served in the American revolution. Moody himself, as he has recorded, went to London, bearing the sad news of his young friend's fate; and the tale we have here told was once as well known on "Maxwellton braes" as the story of Lucknow and Annie Lawrie.—J. Barritz Bacon, in N. Y. Ledger.

SIOUX INDIANS.

Red Men Who Are Said to Fear Neither God Nor Man.

"I have had a good many scrimmages with Indians of various tribes, but the wildest and woolliest of the whole copper-colored breed are the Sioux," said Maj. Dan Allen, one of the original "pathfinders" of the trackless west. "Most Indians are born sneaks and cowards, who do their fighting from cover, but the Sioux fears neither God, man nor the devil, and would fight Napoleon's Old Guard in an open field. A bluff won't work on them worth a cent, and, when they tackle you, you can just make up your mind to do some killing or loose your scalp.

"I was out in the southwestern part of what is now South Dakota a few years ago with a hunting party, when we encountered a lot of bucks on the warpath. There were twenty of them, while my party only numbered half a dozen. But the redskins had the old-fashioned muzzle-loaders, while we were armed with Winchesters. There wasn't a rock or tree for miles, and we had to just stand up to the rack and take our fodder. One of the party was a mining engineer who had been prospecting for pay rock and had with him several pounds of dynamite and an electric battery. He was a Yankee, one of those quick-witted people that would find a way to get out of perdition though all Milton's terrors guarded the exit. He concealed the explosive in the grass, attached his wire and we retreated slowly about four hundred yards and stopped. The redskins didn't waste any time maneuvering; they came and saw and expected to conquer in short order. On they came, straight as the crow flies, and we lay down in the grass with rifles cocked. I tell you it was an interesting moment for us. If the battery failed to do its duty we were gone to a man. But it didn't. The 'blue-bellie' had dropped his hat near his Vesuvius, so that he could tell just when to touch the button. As the foremost horse reached the hat he turned on the current. There was an explosion that made the very ground reel, and the air for forty rods was full of horse flesh and fragments of noble red men, saddles and rifles, blankets and buckskin. 'Now's our time, boys,' I called, and we ran forward and began pumping the lead into the terrified savages as fast as we could pull a trigger. The remnant of the party took flight, and I am known among the Sioux to this city as the thunder-maker. The title does not belong to me, but it is mighty good capital out in their country."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—A school is to be opened in Japan by Mrs. Tel Lom, a highly educated Japanese lady of Tokyo, where she will teach the native women of her own rank.

—Russia permits the free importation of the Bible printed in other languages than Russian. But no Russian Bible can circulate unless printed by the state church.

—Prof. Harold M. Fowler of the venerable Phillips Exeter academy has accepted the chair of Greek in the university of Texas at nearly twice the salary he is now receiving.

—Nearly 300 villages have been visited during the last year by the thirty-eight missionaries of the Church of England Temperance society. Over 18,000 cases were visited at their homes, and nearly 20,000 prisoners were met on their discharge from jail.

—The queen of Prussia is devoutly religious and devotes much of her time and money to church extension. She has been the chief worker for the erection of half a dozen churches in Berlin, and obtained permission from the sultan of Turkey to build a Protestant church in Jerusalem.

—In 1870 the proportion of certified women teachers was 48 in every 100; to-day it is 66. Similarly, the number of women assistants has rison from 60 to 77 per 100. In 1870 there were 7,273 girls and 5,569 boy teachers. There are now 21,771 girls and only 6,360 boys learning the art of teaching.

—It has been decided by the French minister of public instruction to preserve as a museum Jeanne Darc's home in Domremi, and to illustrate in it her history. It will contain models of the statues erected to her memory, copies of paintings showing scenes in her life, and sketches of the picture of her in the Pantheon.

—The introduction of bells into churches is usually ascribed to Saint Paulinus, bishop of Nola in Campania (400 A. D.). Their use in churches and monasteries soon spread through christendom. They were introduced into France about 550, and Benedict, abbot of Wearmouth, brought one from Italy into England about 680.

—The new Grace Street church, Philadelphia, had its origin in the gift of fifty-seven cents for a new church made on her deathbed by a little girl six years old. She had been refused admission to the Sunday-school because it was too large to receive her. From that day she began to save her money to build a larger church.

—When the church of Scotland petitioned Lord Palmerston to appoint a day of fasting and prayer so that the cholera might depart from "their midst," he told them instead to get down on their knees and scrub their floors and let in God's light and air, and keep everything clean. They voted, however, to resent his advice as blasphemous and insulting. That was thirty years ago, and such advice takes better now.

—Pessimism, like the cholera, comes to us from the east, and is not less deadly. It creeps into our poetry, pervades our philosophy and riots in our fiction. A world without God is necessarily a world without hope. One can not postulate progress except there be given the power to work out the results prophesied. Nothing can save atheism from despair, and nothing turn despair aside from anarchy. "Where there is no vision the people perish."—N. Y. Evangelist.

TIRED PEOPLE.

Advice for Those Who Are Wearing Themselves Out Over Household Cares.

Of the many unfortunate people in the world, there are few so deserving pity as those whose daily toil is such a hardship to them that neither strength nor inclination is left for anything else. The drain upon their energies is so heavy that nature is unable to meet it; and now and then there is a breakdown, which means a loss of work and of money, and a doctor's bill into the bargain. To such sufferers we would suggest the advisability of looking at matters fairly and thoroughly, and asking themselves whether it is not possible to lighten in some measure the burden of work and responsibility that is now crushing the zest and joy out of life. Some of us have got into the uncomfortable habit of doing things we have no business to do. In our anxiety to have the work well done, we go fidgeting round, giving finishing touches that are not needed, and allowing it to absorb more time and strength than we can spare. That happy knack that some persons have of working quietly, easily, and with as much contentment as can be gained out of the day's experience, is worth cultivating, if only for the sake of the physical exhaustion it will save. A bustling, worrying, excitable workman goes through far more exertion, yet does his duty no better than his more orderly neighbor. The old saying that "it's no use killing yourself to keep yourself," has a grain of wisdom in it for tired people. The most effectual remedy for the weariness that proves so embarrassing in the majority of instances is to lessen the present strain somehow, and be careful not to add new, unnecessary burdens. When nature calls for a rest, her demand must be obeyed, and it must be a genuine respite from toil. There is not much permanent advantage to be derived from trying to push a number of little jobs in edgewise, "while we are resting," and a persistent adherence to such a practice will result, sooner or later, in a weariness of body and a depression of spirit that will tax to their utmost the best efforts of doctors and nurses.—Health and Home.

An Electric Spring.

It was but a plain mineral spring, but the cups that the patients drank from were fastened by a brass chain to an iron bar which inclosed the mouth of the bubbling spring. You were prevented from coming too close by another circular iron railing, about eight feet across. The ground around the spring was naturally moist, and it was either this ground or the iron railing which was one of the ends of an open electrical circuit. The cup held by the chain was the other end. The person drinking simply completed the circuit through his body, and when he had finished the attendant kindly and immediately removed the cup from his hand. The drinkers always felt that "delightful tingling sensation," and rejoiced that they had found the fountain of youth. Some imagined they even felt the new blood coursing through their veins. A small induction coil ingeniously concealed, and connected with the cup and railing, was a cheap method for producing that "invigorating feeling."—Electrical Review.

READING CHARACTER.

The Best Place for the Study Is a Railway Train.

"A railway train is the best place in the world to study character," said a gentleman at the Lindell recently. "What a man of good habits of observation can not learn about the character and disposition of a fellow traveler during a railway journey of one thousand miles is not worth knowing. Women especially throw off the conventional mask and appear just what they are. During my last trip from New York to St. Louis I had for traveling companions an invalid woman and her three children. Now, a female invalid is my bete noir and children my abomination. When I learned that the quartet would make the through trip in the Pullman I felt inclined to wait and take the next train. Well, sir, it was the pleasantest trip I ever made. That woman was the queen of the car from the time we left New York until we rolled into the union depot in St. Louis. The passengers, conductors and porters vied with each other in waiting upon her and fairly fought for the privilege of amusing her children. Although suffering acute pain she was a veritable sunbeam and her long, weary journey was a triumphal procession. She made every man that met her think better of womankind and better of himself. An hour in her society was worth a term in college and a hundred sermons. In traveling one meets any number of prudes and flirts but few true women who understand the art of being gracious without becoming familiar."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

FOREVER.

Two little streamlets leapt and flowed,
And sang their songs together;
They felt alike the summer rays,
And bore the stormy weather;
The selfsame blossoms decked them both
In colors rich and rare;
And in each stream the song-birds wooed
Their bright reflections there.
And on, and on, and on they danced,
Each leaping toward the river,
And then they met to kiss and part
Forever and forever.

Two human lives, two kindred hearts,
By destiny's decree,
Met in the spring of life, to learn
Its deepest mystery.
They dreamed their morning dreams of hope
Through fair unclouded weather;
They opened love's bewitching book,
And read it through together;
They saw in one another's eyes
A deep unspoken bliss;
And from each other's lips they took
Love's ever-ready kiss.

And then the fate that crushes all
The sweetest pleasures here
Turned hope's glad music to a sigh,
Its glory to a tear.
It stepped between them; ah! it mocked
The love it could not kill;
It bade them in its fury live,
And love and suffer still.
They tried with outstretched hands to span
Fate's wide unyielding "Never."
The voice of destiny replied:
"Forever and forever."

Mine is no wild imagined theme,
No idle fancy flight,
It lives through daylight's busy hours,
And haunts the silent night.
The wail of sorrow fills the air,
It rests, it ceases never:
It wrings some soul, it breaks some heart,
Forever and forever.
—Lizzie Berry, in Chambers' Journal.

A SPY'S STRATAGEM.

How a British Officer Secured Information of Washington's Army.

Early in the winter of 1779 Washington's army was encamped at Morristown; and about twenty miles west of that place was the residence of Squire John Kitchell, one of the most widely known and unyielding patriots of northern New Jersey. His farm and dwelling bordered on the main road; and one evening, late in November, the usual family worship had just closed, his wife and his daughters had retired upstairs, and the squire was quaffing his nightcap of sweet cider, when his ear caught the hoof-beats of a horse outside.

Presently a step sounded on the stoop; and when the squire unfastened the door his flaring candle shone fitfully upon the long beard and blue-caped cloak of a stranger. The newcomer, somewhat bent by the weight of apparently sixty years, asked the favor of a night's hay for his horse and, for himself, only permission to rest in the barn beside him; for his purpose was to depart before sunrise. He was on his way to the American army with supplies, he said, and his laden wagon was but half a day's journey behind him. He supported his request by showing a pass which allowed Capt. Job Spring, with his team, a safe passage to the army and a return to the Delaware river.

To all this the squire replied that he was welcome to such quarters for himself and horse as he could find in the barn. Taking a lantern, he led the way, adding that in one of the stalls he had, an hour before, given lodging to a young man about to join the patriot ranks, and that his farmhand, Black Tom, also slept in the hay near by. After seeing the stranger and his roadster fairly accommodated, the squire bade him good night and returned to his homestead.

It was at least an hour after midnight when the repose of the sleeping household was rudely disturbed by the tramp of horses and the voices of a body of men demanding admittance. The alarmed inmates hastily answered the summons.

"Squire Kitchell, you are my prisoner!" cried the leader of the party.

"Who are you, sir, and where is your warrant?"

"We are all true blue and belong to the Sussex militia, and here is the warrant of the county committee to arrest you for communicating secretly with King George's commander in New York."

"Pooh! Pooh!" lightly exclaimed the squire. "Everybody knows I am a good whig; and when you bring me before Gen. Washington he'll just laugh at you and tell you to go about better business."

"Well, you won't go before Gen. Washington, and we have no time to waste any words. We'll just search your house and then escort you safely to our county jail at Newton."

"Here's more of 'em, leftenant!" cried a couple of troopers, hastily entering, in charge of Capt. Job Spring, together with the young man who had occupied a stall near him, and Black Tom, the farmhand.

"Strap the nigger fast behind one of the men and see that he don't escape. Squire, you and these other two will go into the parlor and keep quiet there along with your family, while we search upstairs for your treasonable papers. Sergeant, place sentinels around the house and one outside this parlor door, and see that no one leaves the room."

Then the leader and his men rushed upstairs to begin their search.

The prisoners were left alone in the parlor, and the door was closed; but by his tramp and voice they knew that a sentry was stationed in the hall outside. A candle on the table feebly illuminated the room, and the silence was broken only by the sobs of the squire's wife and daughters. At length the old gentleman soothed them and then seized the opportunity to explain the situation to his guest, Capt. Spring, and solemnly to protest his entire innocence of the charge alleged against him.

"Squire Kitchell, I believe you with all my heart," replied the captain, "and this will yet prove to be some grand mistake. I have heard of you before as one of our stanchest patriots. But what can you do at present? From what I have learned, there appears to be no charge against me nor against anyone but you. They cannot go behind my pass nor detain me."

"Nor detain me a moment, if my son at army headquarters could but get word of it. He is one of Washington's most trusted officers," said the squire.

"And his name?"

"Lieut. Kitchell, of the commissary department."

"What! Lieut. Kitchell!" cried the captain. "Why, my eldest son was once under his command, and his letters home oftened mentioned the lieutenant with gratitude. He is on the staff, then?"

"Yes," said the squire. "He is a young man of fine education, and so was put in general charge of the army records as well as those of the commissary—"

"And that," interrupted the sobbing wife," "is no small affair in an army of ten thousand men."

"So many as that!" exclaimed Capt. Spring.

"No, no, wife, not quite so many—" began the squire.

"Well, no matter," put in the captain. "Let us look at this matter coolly—and quickly, too. Now, have you paper, pen and ink in this room?"

In an instant the squire had opened a bureau and placed the required articles on the table.

"Now," said the captain, "sit here, squire, and write only a few lines to your son. Tell him you send them in haste by me, Capt. Job Spring, from the Delaware. Say you have been apprehended unjustly by the Sussex militia, and state the charge. Now say they are about to burn the house, and you may add they will probably hang you before they leave. Make it strong enough to bring relief quickly."

"What if these scoundrels should be Moody's men, after all!" suddenly cried the squire.

"Moody, the British spy? A good idea! Put that in, too. So, sign your name. Now I propose to take this letter and gallop off to headquarters as soon as these rascals leave. As for this young man—what is your name?"

"Maxwell—Robert Maxwell," was the reply of the young man.

"Well, I shall tell these fellows you are one of my teamsters. That's the only way to get you clear of them. And, I say, as you are going to join the army, I want you to hasten after me and meet me at the Morristown camp just as quickly as you can."

"Come, Squire Kitchell! To horse!" exclaimed the sentry, suddenly throwing open the parlor door.

Then, after a sorrowful scene of parting, the troopers rode away with their two captives, the squire and Black Tom.

Very soon after the faint dawn was just appearing when Capt. Spring mounted his nag in front of the house, and said to young Maxwell:

"Push after me, my lad, as fast as you can. I have saved you, and I want you at Morristown, to state what you have witnessed here this night."

The young man gratefully assented. But as soon as the captain was out of sight, he took good care to leave the road and get into the woods and fields, on a course that would bring him considerably to the northward of Morristown. The truth was, he had been a British prisoner, taken with Burgoyne's army, had escaped from his confinement in Pennsylvania, and was making his way to the British lines at New York. He certainly had no desire to follow in the track of Capt. Spring.

It was full ten o'clock that morning when the captain was passed through the lines of the American army and ushered into the commissary's office on Bottle hill above Morristown. Lieut. Kitchell was alone in the office, busily writing at a table covered with record books. First exhibiting his pass, Capt. Spring then handed him the squire's letter.

"Good heavens!" exclaimed the lieutenant, "this must have instant attention!" and he rushed in agony out of the office.

The captain sat still for a few moments. Then he rose and looked curiously over the record-books, made a few notes from them, and ended by putting one of them into the breast-pocket of his coat. A grand review of the army was going on in the plain below on the border of the village, and, as the lieutenant seemed in no haste to return, the captain mounted his nag and rode down to see the parade. The commander in chief and his suite were there, and, like any other old rustic, the captain and his jade rode slowly up and down near the line, apparently enjoying the sight. Presently some one in the crowd seemed recognize him and hailed him; but to this he gave no attention. He merely turned his horse and, in an absent sort of way, ambled through the streets of the village, westward. After getting beyond the town, his nag began to trot, then to gallop, and it seemed as if the rider had forgotten all about his business, his supplies, his laden wagon and everything, except getting back home to the Delaware as fast as possible.

The deep boom of a cannon sounded from the heights above the town. It was the "Old Sow,' an eighteen pounder, that was fired only in case of a general alarm. The report seemed to act like a spur on the captain's steed. As he reached the summit of a hill he hastily looked back, and in the distance, behind a cloud of dust rising on the high-road, a squadron of dragoons was in full gallop, and the captain flew like a flash. They were evidently the pursuers and he the pursued. He was pressing toward the distant defiles of the mountains. Three miles more brought him into a forest road. A single dragoon, outriding the others, dashed up, but the captain's pistol-shot emptied his saddle. The chase grew furious, desperate. Two other troopers fell in succession. His pistols were empty, and his only resource was continued flight. There was still one remaining pursuer—and but one—at his heels, and he came near enough to grasp the fugitive's cloak. Adroitly slipping it loose, and urging his horse to the utmost, once more he dashed ahead. The dragoon followed fast and, coming alongside, aimed a slashing cut, that would have finished the flight had not the captain's horse stumbled and, in his headlong fall, dashed his rider to the ground. He was at the mercy of his foe. The pursuing soldier leaped from his saddle and, advancing with threatening blade, cried:

"At last, Moody, at last!"

Before the fallen man could make a sign of surrender there was a rustle in the neighboring bushes. A stranger sprang out of them in the rear of the excited trooper. A heavy club was in his hand, and with one blow he laid the unsuspecting soldier low. The next instant Capt. Spring—Moody, the British spy—flung himself on the dragoon horse, and, with a wave of his hand, dashed westward to the mountains. In his unlooked-for deliverer he recognized young Maxwell.

Moody's object had been gained. He had obtained for Sir Henry Clinton the ration-book and all other information relative to Washington's army, and when he rejoined his loyalist band that night his first care was to set free Squire Kitchell, who had so unwittingly aided him. Moody's well-known retreat in that region was an inaccessible cavern on the borders of two ponds, known as the Big and Little Muckshaw, and about two miles south of Newton in Sussex county. Between this lurking place and the city of New York was his line of operation and the region of his many famous exploits.

When Moody escaped, Maxwell, his deliverer, did not succeed in evading the remaining body of dragoons who immediately came up. He was captured, and, being identified by Squire Kitchell, was charged with aiding in the attack and plunder of his house. Eventually he was taken to Newton jail and there confined under sentence of death. Moody, however, had not forgotten his good service. Often absent on distant and perilous expeditions, it was not until the succeeding spring that the loyalist spy learned of the doom impending over his rescuer. Death threatened young Maxwell for an act of which he was innocent and of which Moody himself was the perpetrator. The spy, therefore, determined to attempt his release at any risk.

The midnight rescue is one of the notable historical incidents of Sussex county, and the details can also be found in Moody's "Revolutionary Journal," published by himself in London in 1782.

Taking with him six picked men, the spy entered the village of Newton late at night. It was a perilous enterprise, and stratagem became necessary. The keeper of the jail was hailed, and he appeared at an upper window.

"I have a tory prisoner to deliver to you," said Moody, assuming the character of a continental officer. "You know him well. It is Jaquitte, one of Moody's men."

The jailer was overjoyed at the prospect of having so notorious a loyalist in his custody; but he was cautious. He refused to open the doors.

"Moody and his men are out—so it is said—and my orders are not to unbar the door after sunset. You will have to wait till morning."

The spy then abandoned stratagem, and sternly exclaimed:

"The man who now speaks to you is Moody. I have a strong party here! Instantly open the doors, or I'll pull the jail down and hang you on the nearest tree!"

The jailer vanished from the window and sounded the alarm bell. The people of the town were aroused by it, and their approaching steps were heard in the darkness. The spy knew that in former years, not long past, the village had been the scene of Indian attack and massacre, and he ordered his men to set up a terrific yell and a succession of war-whoops. The villagers were panic-stricken.

"The savages are upon us!" they cried, as they hurried back to defend their homes.

In the meantime an entrance had been forced, and Maxwell was found in his cell, peacefully slumbering. The sudden vision of armed men startled him. Instant execution menaced him, as he thought, and he was thrown into an agony of despair. The next moment, the words: "You are free!" raised him to such a frenzy of joy that he could scarcely be hurried away in time to escape the pursuit that followed.

Young Maxwell was afterward recaptured and suffered death. He was the brother of Lieut.-Gen. Sir John Maxwell, who, in 1830, was the last survivor of the British officers who had served in the American revolution. Moody himself, as he has recorded, went to London, bearing the sad news of his young friend's fate; and the tale we have here told was once as well known on "Maxwellton braes" as the story of Lucknow and Annie Lawrie.—J. Barritz Bacon, in N. Y. Ledger.

SIOUX INDIANS.

Red Men Who Are Said to Fear Neither God Nor Man.

"I have had a good many scrimmages with Indians of various tribes, but the wildest and woolliest of the whole copper-colored breed are the Sioux," said Maj. Dan Allen, one of the original "pathfinders" of the trackless west. "Most Indians are born sneaks and cowards, who do their fighting from cover, but the Sioux fears neither God, man nor the devil, and would fight Napoleon's Old Guard in an open field. A bluff won't work on them worth a cent, and, when they tackle you, you can just make up your mind to do some killing or loose your scalp.

"I was out in the southwestern part of what is now South Dakota a few years ago with a hunting party, when we encountered a lot of bucks on the warpath. There were twenty of them, while my party only numbered half a dozen. But the redskins had the old-fashioned muzzle-loaders, while we were armed with Winchesters. There wasn't a rock or tree for miles, and we had to just stand up to the rack and take our fodder. One of the party was a mining engineer who had been prospecting for pay rock and had with him several pounds of dynamite and an electric battery. He was a Yankee, one of those quick-witted people that would find a way to get out of perdition though all Milton's terrors guarded the exit. He concealed the explosive in the grass, attached his wire and we retreated slowly about four hundred yards and stopped. The redskins didn't waste any time maneuvering; they came and saw and expected to conquer in short order. On they came, straight as the crow flies, and we lay down in the grass with rifles cocked. I tell you it was an interesting moment for us. If the battery failed to do its duty we were gone to a man. But it didn't. The 'blue-bellie' had dropped his hat near his Vesuvius, so that he could tell just when to touch the button. As the foremost horse reached the hat he turned on the current. There was an explosion that made the very ground reel, and the air for forty rods was full of horse flesh and fragments of noble red men, saddles and rifles, blankets and buckskin. 'Now's our time, boys,' I called, and we ran forward and began pumping the lead into the terrified savages as fast as we could pull a trigger. The remnant of the party took flight, and I am known among the Sioux to this city as the thunder-maker. The title does not belong to me, but it is mighty good capital out in their country."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—A school is to be opened in Japan by Mrs. Tel Lom, a highly educated Japanese lady of Tokyo, where she will teach the native women of her own rank.

—Russia permits the free importation of the Bible printed in other languages than Russian. But no Russian Bible can circulate unless printed by the state church.

—Prof. Harold M. Fowler of the venerable Phillips Exeter academy has accepted the chair of Greek in the university of Texas at nearly twice the salary he is now receiving.

—Nearly 300 villages have been visited during the last year by the thirty-eight missionaries of the Church of England Temperance society. Over 18,000 cases were visited at their homes, and nearly 20,000 prisoners were met on their discharge from jail.

—The queen of Prussia is devoutly religious and devotes much of her time and money to church extension. She has been the chief worker for the erection of half a dozen churches in Berlin, and obtained permission from the sultan of Turkey to build a Protestant church in Jerusalem.

—In 1870 the proportion of certified women teachers was 48 in every 100; to-day it is 66. Similarly, the number of women assistants has rison from 60 to 77 per 100. In 1870 there were 7,273 girls and 5,569 boy teachers. There are now 21,771 girls and only 6,360 boys learning the art of teaching.

—It has been decided by the French minister of public instruction to preserve as a museum Jeanne Dare's home in Domremi, and to illustrate in it her history. It will contain models of the statues erected to her memory, copies of paintings showing scenes in her life, and sketches of the picture of her in the Pantheon.

—The introduction of bells into churches is usually ascribed to Saint Paulinus, bishop of Nola in Campania (400 A. D.). Their use in churches and monasteries soon spread through christendom. They were introduced into France about 550, and Benedict, abbot of Wearmouth, brought one from Italy into England about 680.

—The new Grace Street church, Philadelphia, had its origin in the gift of fifty-seven cents for a new church made on her deathbed by a little girl six years old. She had been refused admission to the Sunday-school because it was too large to receive her. From that day she began to save her money to build a larger church.

—When the church of Scotland petitioned Lord Palmerston to appoint a day of fasting and prayer so that the cholera might depart from "their midst," he told them instead to get down on their knees and scrub their floors and let in God's light and air, and keep everything clean. They voted, however, to resent his advice as blasphemous and insulting. That was thirty years ago, and such advice takes better now.

—Pessimism, like the cholera, comes to us from the east, and is not less deadly. It creeps into our poetry, pervades our philosophy and riots in our fiction. A world without God is necessarily a world without hope. One can not postulate progress except there be given the power to work out the results prophesied. Nothing can save atheism from despair, and nothing turn despair aside from anarchy. "Where there is no vision the people perish."—N. Y. Evangelist.

TIRED PEOPLE.

Of the many unfortunate people in the world, there are few so deserving pity as those whose daily toil is such a hardship to them that neither strength nor inclination is left for anything else. The drain upon their energies is so heavy that nature is unable to meet it; and now and then there is a breakdown, which means a loss of work and of money, and a doctor's bill into the bargain. To such sufferers we would suggest the advisability of looking at matters fairly and thoroughly, and asking themselves whether it is not possible to lighten in some measure the burden of work and responsibility that is now crushing the zest and joy out of life. Some of us have got into the uncomfortable habit of doing things we have no business to do. In our anxiety to have the work well done, we go fidgeting round, giving finishing touches that are not needed, and allowing it to absorb more time and strength than we can spare. That happy knack that some persons have of working quietly, easily, and with as much contentment as can be gained out of the day's experience, is worth cultivating, if only for the sake of the physical exhaustion it will save. A bustling, worrying, excitable workman goes through far more exertion, yet does his duty no better than his more orderly neighbor. The old saying that "it's no use killing yourself to keep yourself," has a grain of wisdom in it for tired people. The most effectual remedy for the weariness that proves so embarrassing in the majority of instances is to lessen the present strain somehow, and be careful not to add new, unnecessary burdens. When nature calls for a rest, her demand must be obeyed, and it must be a genuine respite from toil. There is not much permanent advantage to be derived from trying to push a number of little jobs in edgewise, "while we are resting," and a persistent adherence to such a practice will result, sooner or later, in a weariness of body and a depression of spirit that will tax to their utmost the best efforts of doctors and nurses.—Health and Home.

An Electric Spring.

It was but a plain mineral spring, but the cups that the patients drank from were fastened by a brass chain to an iron bar which inclosed the mouth of the bubbling spring. You were prevented from coming too close by another circular iron railing, about eight feet across. The ground around the spring was naturally moist, and it was either this ground or the iron railing which was one of the ends of an open electrical circuit. The cup held by the chain was the other end. The person drinking simply completed the circuit through his body, and when he had finished the attendant kindly and immediately removed the cup from his hand. The drinkers always felt that "delightful tingling sensation," and rejoiced that they had found the fountain of youth. Some imagined they even felt the new blood coursing through their veins. A small induction coil ingeniously concealed, and connected with the cup and railing, was a cheap method for producing that "invigorating feeling."—Electrical Review.

READING CHARACTER.

"A railway train is the best place in the world to study character," said a gentleman at the Lindell recently. "What a man of good habits of observation can not learn about the character and disposition of a fellow traveler during a railway journey of one thousand miles is not worth knowing. Women especially throw off the conventional mask and appear just what they are. During my last trip from New York to St. Louis I had for traveling companions an invalid woman and her three children. Now, a female invalid is my bete noir and children my abomination. When I learned that the quartet would make the through trip in the Pullman I felt inclined to wait and take the next train. Well, sir, it was the pleasantest trip I ever made. That woman was the queen of the car from the time we left New York until we rolled into the union depot in St. Louis. The passengers, conductors and porters vied with each other in waiting upon her and fairly fought for the privilege of amusing her children. Although suffering acute pain she was a veritable sunbeam and her long, weary journey was a triumphal procession. She made every man that met her think better of womankind and better of himself. An hour in her society was worth a term in college and a hundred sermons. In traveling one meets any number of prudes and flirts but few true women who understand the art of being gracious without becoming familiar."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

County Cullings.

A call has been issued for a delegate convention for Better Roads, to meet at St. Paul, Jan. 25 and 26. The county commissioners are requested to appoint the delegates. Each Senatorial District is to send two delegates for each senator and two for each representative. Giving our Senatorial District an even dozen delegates. By all means let's have them if the roads are to be improved.

County Attorney.

DEAR GAZETTE:—"No man can be re-elected to any office in Wright Co., who has done anything for the interest of the tax payers, proof of this is Bill Ziebarth, I helped to defeat him, and I will now defeat W. H. Cutting for County Attorney."

The above words I understand were used, this fall, by D. W. Flannigan, the commissioner from the 4th District. Can it be possible that this man Flannigan should voice the sentiment of a majority of the voters of this county? Would it not be an everlasting shame to the tax payers of this county if this man's sayings should prove true? And what is it that brought Flannigan on his ears? Why nothing more nor less than Cutting's opposition to the most damnable jobbery ever witnessed in this county? Let any man study the minutes of the county board for the last two years, and he will be convinced that something is wrong in this State of Denmark, and Cutting had the moral courage to oppose these practices; he had the moral courage to appeal bills of this board to the District, court and the court sustained Cutting. That's were Flannigan opposition comes in. What a contrast to his opponent Culkin. Culkin waited for the tax payers to REQUEST him to appeal bills allowed by the board, although he knew or ought to have know that the bills were not legal charges against the county. I refer to that classification humbug bill and to the Fenlanson bill. Culkin was a moral coward, such business is unpleasant, it cost votes, as Flannigan says, and our hero is first, last and at all times for himself. Must I refer to Muffley's postage bill, to the bill of this man Flannigan going around by Minneapolis to get to Buffalo. Did Culkin as county attorney appeal it? Not much.

In the libel suit of State versus Gutzwiller this man Culkin now the well paid attorney for Gutzwiller picked up one of J. C. Nugent's bills and addressing the jury, he said: "Gentlemen of the jury, here is a bill of J. C. N. which Mr. Ziebarth as county commissioner, allowed," this bill is not PROPERLY itemized; Great Scott! not PROPERLY itemized, but Mr. Culkin forgot to tell the jury, that just such bills of J. C. Nugent, identical in every respect were referred to him as county attorney by the county board but he NEVER told the board that the bills were not properly itemized. He never found fault with Nugent's bills. Never told the board that the charges were illegal with the exception of the prisoners board bills, which he wanted us to cut down from $1.00 per day to $4.00 per week, as if this county ever furnished the sheriffs with any facilities for boarding prisoners by the week. Justices' bills and Constables' bills Culkin was profuse in offering his advise to cut them down; the sheriff, he was afraid to tackle. I could go on ad infinitum to show the inconsistency the downright cowardice of this Culkin, but the above will suffice voters of Wright Co., a vote for W. H. Cutting for County Attorney is a vote for honest county government, a vote to watch and down the boodlers.

WM. ZIEBARTH.

Presidential Electors.

The duty of a Presidential elector is simply to meet with his fellow electors in his state. And cast his ballot for president and vice president. It matters not, then, so we are satisfied they will do that, as to how we like or dislike them. This is the way we vote for president. And if the electors on our ticket are elected we are about certain they will vote for the man of our choice, while those of the opposite ticket would vote against Grover Cleveland. The Cleveland electorial ticket has but five names, the others haying withdrawn, and the committee having filled the vacancies by choosing from among the People's Party candidates, four men, who, it is claimed are sure, under no circumstances, to vote for Harrison. The Democratic Electorial ticket is:

ROBERT A. SMITH	Dem.
BENJAMIN F. NELSON	Dem.
DAVID N. JONES	Dem.
WILLIAM QUINN	Dem.
MARTIN SHEA	Dem.
WM. MEIGHEN	Peoples and Dem.
A. L. STROMBERG	" " "
JAMES DILLON	" " "
A. H. HOLLOWAY	" " "

Mrs. Harrison Dead.

After suffering for months, Mrs. Harrison, wife of the President of the United States, is dead. Death is sure to all, whether in the white house, at Washington, or in the busy walks of life, or in the quiet home of the well to do farmer or in the backwoods man's cabin, death, sooner or later, calls for each and every one. All should be prepared to meet it when it comes.

McGary on Republicanism.

INDEPENDENCE, Oct. 25.—On Friday evening of last week there was a Republican class meeting at town hall, Armstrong, some five or six converts to the McKinley bill came up from Minneapolis to discuss to the farmers of Independence, the merits of the McKinley bill, you know a good many men think this McKinley bill next to the ten commandments. The speakers for the evening were Frank M. Nye, John H. Steele, James H. Ege and three or four others. The first speaker that took the platform was one looking for legislative honors. He took for his text the McKinley bill told how much it was doing for the people of this country especially the farmer, they were getting so much more for their farm produce under the McKinley bill than they got before the McKinley bill was passed, had a good deal to say about potatoes they were now worth 45 cts. under high protection. But he forgot to tell them that two years ago this fall before we had a McKinley bill, potatoes sold readily in Minneapolis market for 60 and 70 cents per bushel and also forgot to make mention, that after farmers kept their potatoes in the cellars all last winter sold them this spring for 15 cents under the protecting wing of the McKinley bill. Common horse sense is worth more to the farmer than a ten acre field of McKinley bills. Then he got on to tin plate, told about a certain dealer that sold tinware. The laborer's tin dinner pail that he formerly sold for 35 cents, was now selling for 15 cents, we do not dispute his statement but did he suppose there was no one who had brain enough to see through it. If the dealer is doing this, he is furnished with campaign money on purpose. So he can cut on his price, and make the people believe it is on account of the Mckinley bill. It is done for campaign capital according to this statement about the tin pail the dealer had been robbing the poor laboring man, for at 35 cents he was making nearly 60 percent on his goods, also made mention of how our tin industries was building up in this country, and the result had been that it had shut down about 60 tin industries in Wales. Now have we come to this that this country boasting of all its wealth freedom and benevolence, must first impoverish some foreign country in order to build up the prosperity of our own. God forbid it. Would it seem any man would glory in this who had any of the milk of human kindness curdling in his breast. Does not the poor laborer in Wales have to live? Does he not have to earn a living for his wife and little ones? Now would say there is some people foolish enough not to believe that this McKinley bill is doing such mighty things for the farmer. After imbibing a good dose of republican doctrine I returned went to bed and did not awake from my slumbers until I heard from my own barn yard the lusty crow of the chanticleer as from his lofty perch he notified me of the coming morning.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

To Voters.

This year we use for the first time the new system of balloting, called the Australian system. It is easy enough after you learn how but seems to scare some away at first. In other states where this system has been used thousands have failed to vote. Some authorities think in Wright county there will be a falling off of 1000 votes. We think this estimate too high, as that would be about 40 votes at every polling place on an average. In order to prevent this falling off or any part of it let each voter be at the polls as soon after nine in the morning on Tuesday, Nov. 8, as possible. And let him cast his ballot as early as possible so that those coming from a distance or detained from other reasons from coming until late in the day may have time, and opportunity to vote. Don't fail to remember that you must mark "X" after every name you wish to vote. That the pencil furnished at the polls which you must use makes a mark you cannot rub out, and if you happen to make a mark where you did not intend to make it you must hand the ticket back where you got it and get another. You must fold your tickets up when you have finished marking it and hand it to the Judges so that no one can see how you have marked it. If you are not able to read English well enough to vote alone you can have a man to help you. Get a sample ballot and mark it to suit, if it is not already marked that way, and carry it with you into the booth where you mark your ticket and it will be of great assistance to you in voting. The Democratic sample county ticket has every Democrat on the ticket marked "X" and if you put it beside the genuine county ballot on blue paper when you go to vote you will find it matches so that all you have to do is to follow the lines across onto the one you wish to mark and make a plain "X" with the indellible pencil, opposite those you wish to vote for and you can save time. Even if you wish to split your ticket this ballot, fitting as it does, the one you vote will be a handy thing to have along, and if you are of some other party than the Democratic you will find good men on this ticket.

The State ticket will be white paper and voted separately, find a sample ballot and pick out your electors and other candidates and mark them as with the county ticket, so you will not get mixed up when you get into the booth. The white ticket for state officers, the congressman, legislators and county officers on the blue ballot. Come out early and vote. Everybody come and see the fun and vote before the crowd gets in, and be sure and vote right.

DON'T be afraid to ask the proper officials how to vote as we have a new system and no body is expected to know how until he learns.

EVERY man, who is a candidate before the people this year has his name on the same ticket, so that but one ticket for county and one for state officers is to be found.

DANIEL W. LAWLER seems to be making friends at every point he is heard from, and nothing but praise comes up from every quarter as to his fine accomplishments as an orator and his sound and logical speeches on the issues before the voters of our country at present. He appears at present to have as good, or a little better chance of being governor of Minnesota than either of his competitors in the getting to be exciting race.

Tariff is a tax by which the government rasises most of its revenue for paying officers' salaries pensions, sugar bounties, and builds its grand custom houses, and other public buildings. And a protective tariff is a tax which allows American manufacturers to make different articles and sell them for more than they are worth in the markets of the world, while the rebate clause allows them to compete with others in all markets while they have a monopoly of our own.

IT beats all how hard Judge Searle keeps begging for one more vote, as he claims to enlarge his certain majority. If he is so sure of an overwhelming majority it would look better to allow his opponent a few votes to break the disappointment of a defeat. As a matter of fact we presume the Judge and his friends are about as sure as we are that he will need every vote he can get to break his own disappointment on learning of the election of the gallant Major Baldwin, of Duluth, to the vacant seat in Congress.

REPUBLICANS, with few exceptions now admit that tariff is a tax but with McKinley insist that the foreigners pay it. Who are the foreigners that pay it? The Reciprocity clause allows South American countries and a few islands to ship their products in free. The foreigners then that pay this according to Republicans are the relatives left at home in Germany, Austria, Norway, Sweden, and other European countries by many of our leading families. Is it not very ungrateful to us to tax our own relatives across the ocean who Republicans say are working at starvation prices to run our government in an extravagant manner? We consider this a very poor argument to make to Minneesota people so many of whom have lately come over, themselves, from Europe.

Amendments to the Constitution.

There are two amendments to be voted on at this election. In order that either of them become a law it is necessary that a majority of the voters present and voting be obtained. In order to cast a vote on the amendments it is necessary to cross out the word yes or no as you may wish to vote. If you vote in favor of the amendments cross out "no" leaving "yes," and vice versa. The amendment prohibiting special legislation where a general law is applicable should be voted "yes" by scratching out "no." The other, authorizing the taxation on gross earnings of R. R's. seems to demand that "yes" be scratched out and "no" voted.

Hennepin County Politics.

The October session of the Hennepin county teachers' Association was held in Curtis Hall, Minneapolis, last Saturday. One hundred teachers were in attendance, and a short program, consisting of a paper by Miss Ella Stratton, of Excelsior, embodying her observations in the East, where she spent a part of her summer vacation and a general discussion of the subject of geography instruction, together with the election of officers for the ensuing year, occupied most of the forenoon.

The noon intermission was of two hours duration. The teachers returned early from their dinners, and the greater part of the intermission was spent in social intercourse, the chief topic of conversation being the approaching superintendency succession.

Prof James A. Lewis was decidedly the first choice of a majority of the teachers present, but Mrs. A. S. Beede, who honored us with her presence, was found to have a strong, very strong following. Among those who hovered close to Mrs. Beede throughout the day were Mrs Julia Stringer, the well-known friend and supportor of Mr. Henry, and the noted Hennepin county school teacher, Miss Ella Meek. It is rumored that both these ladies are supporting Mrs. Beede, but the report is not very generally believed in so far as relatives to Mrs. Stringer. Mrs. Stringer who has long been known as the stanch friend and supportor of Mr. Henry, and people generally are very loath to believe that she has deserted her friend and is allowing herself to be swept along by the high tide of popularity that is expected to land Greenwoods favorite daughter in the superintendent's chair. Mrs. Beede has one advantage over the other candidates in getting the support of an army of friends throughout the entire state. People everywhere seem to be interesting themselves in her behalf, and the county is flooded with newspapers from other counties referring to her candidacy and speaking of her in terms of very high commendation. She is the most talked about candidate who has ever aspired to an election to any office in Hennepin Co. Miss Ella Meek could easily have obtained the Republican nomination, but, contrary to the advice of her best friends, she made a hitch with Shaver. There was an understanding that if he was found to be losing in the convention, his support was to be given to her. He was found to be losing. He had the promises of 31 votes in the morning, but before night his supporters dwindled down to nearly half that number. McConnell was Miss Meek's great friend, and had Shaver been mindful of the interests of Miss Meek, Henry never could have been nominated, and the big girl from Groveland Park would now be the Republican nominee for superintendent of schools. But as soon as Miss Meek learned that there was a general desire for her nomination, she hurried away to treat with Shaver. She was forewarned that that would be a fatal mistake, but she pressed on heedlessly in her suicidal course. She is a dead duck now, in the Republican party. It is all sour grapes with her now. It must be said, however, to her credit, that she is not one who has not the moral courage to take a stand for or against a candidate She is in the fight for Mrs. Beede, and will make some of her false friends in the Republican ranks rue the day they forgot her interests and disregarded the wishes of her friends. She is leading an army from the Republican ranks, and in this way is avenging the wrongs which she has suffered at the hands of the Republican party, and attoning, in a measure, for the sins she had committed against our Democratic candidate. The women are making a great stir in politics in this county this fall, and if Mrs. Beede's election depended upon the amount of talking done she would be elected by a tremendous majority. But on election day, woman like, the ladies will stay at home. I have seen women in politics before. They mean well, but they are woefully lacking in energy on election day. Mrs. Beede will doubtless put in a hard day's work at the polls, and bring out every body within her reach. She is herself a great worker. This is one of the great secrets of her success. But her friends will not follow suit. They would rather see her defeated than impose upon themselves one honest, hard day's work in her behalf. They will procrastinate on election day, and Mrs. Beede will be defeated. The solid Democratic vote that will reelect our present very efficient superintendent might be easily and overwhelmingly overcome by the women of the county, but not one out of fifty of them will take the trouble to go to the polls. This is pretty plain talk, but it is nevertheless true, and as the truth is mighty it must prevail. Mrs. Beeds's male friends will, to a man, march up to the polls and vote for her. If her female friends would do likewise, no earthly power could prevent her election, but the ladies will not be there, and that is all there is to it.

The way matters stand now, Prof. Lewis' successor must certainly be either Mrs. Beede or himself, so it is gratifying to know that we are sure of an excellent superintendent for the next two years.

HISTORICAL FACTS.

Pioneer Days In The Region North of Lake Minnetonka.

RAILROAD CONTINUED.

It may not be out of place to make some mention of the civil engineers, who made the surveys and locations of the St. P. & P. R. R. line. The survey of 1857 was in charge and conducted by a man by the name of Allen. Amongst his assistants were Jas. E. Shields. In 1864 when the line was changed to strike Lake Minnetonka, Chas A. F. Morris was chief engineer of the St. P. & P. R. R. Co., Mr. Morris was an early settler of Lake Minnetonka and previous to 1857 had laid out the townsite of St. Albans on the east side of Excelsior Bay opposite the village of Excelsior. There is little doubt but Mr. Morris' knowledge of the country had much weight with the R. R. Co., in its decision to construct its line by Lake Minnetonka. In 1865 Morris having resigned, James D. Skinner became chief engineer and it was under the latters supervision that R. R. was located and partly built to Darwin. Assistant engineers were Col. Wm. Crooks, Col. Thomas, W. P. Payte, Wm. Wallace, R. Davenport, P. Simons, B. F. Christlieb and others. E. D. Atwater afterwards secretary of the Land Departmentofthat R. R. Co. was for several years surveyor and land examiner for that department. The writer on several occasions assisted the latter in his work.

Hon. Jared Benson, of Anoka and Hon. S. P. Folsom, of St. Paul, were successive Right of Way Agents for the St. P. & P. R. R. during the period of construction. Through them considerable of the Right of way of the line was purchased by the R. R. Co. from parties through whose lands the line passed.

LONG LAKE.

A few items concerning Long Lake were overlooked in last issue of Historical Facts.

Tamarack P. O. with Jno A. Coleman, post master was still in operation on the present site of Long Lake in 1866, being still a post office on the Hutchinson mail route. On the latter during the war and until the railroad was built, a regular conveyance for passengers was owned and operated by the successive mail contractors amongst whom may be named Uriah Wilson and Austin Knight. J. A. Coleman carried on hotel business in connection with the post office. In 1866 on the erection of the steam saw mill by Freeman & Cutter and number of dwellings this point became the abiding place of a number of people and it then took the name of Long Lake, being named for the lake on which it was situated. In 1867, the name of the post office was changed from Tamarack to Long Lake and in 1868, the St. P. & P. R. R. established a station at Long Lake with Pliney D. Putman as agent. In 1869 May and Syme bad a plat of the townsite recorded being certified to by B. F. Christlieb as surveyor. In 1874, Freethinkers Hall was erected by the Medina Freeman's association (all being in Medina then.) This hall after passing from the original owners through the Lydiard brothers became a town hall. Formerly the Medina, and latterly the Orono Town hall.

MAPLE PLAIN.

In 1868 upon the completion of the St. P. & P. R. R. through Independence township a station was located near the line of section 24 and 25, on lands of H. C. Budd, and was named Maple Plain for the post office of the same name then on the Watertwon road and Hutchinson mail route. The postoffice being removed to the station, John B. Perkins became postmaster, S. W. Yokely having previously resigned the postmastership. S. W. Yokely was the first station agent and John B. Perkins was the first merchant in Maple Plain, the latter removing a store that he was operating on his farm (formerly Perkinsville) to Maple Plain. Soon after John and William Wasson opened up merchandising.

About January, 1869, H. C. Budd had some land platted and designed as the townsite of Maple Plain, the plat being certified by Ashabel Ingerson as surveyor, and William Marsh and Mrs. Moody had west Maple Plain laid out the plat being certified to by B. F. Christlieb as surveyor. On its becoming a railroad station Edward Jenks, of Rockford, opened a boarding house at Maple Plain. These enterprises began 1868-9 were superseded and followed by others. G. W. Smith bought out J. B. Perkins and S. W. Yokely and George Breed opened up and carried on merchandising for a time. Asa Bennett operated steam saw mills and other enterprises for several years. About Dec., 1876, Benj. Drake bought the store of Geo. W, Mason, then in operation at Maple Plain and for several years following, Geo. W. Smith and Benj. Drake represented the merchandising lines. In the mean time other enterprises were commenced and carried on. Dave Briley conducted blacksmithing and H. C. Dickey wagon making. Latterly business enterprises are represented about as follows: General Stores, McCormick & Co. (Geo. McCormick and James Turnham,) Mrs. G. W. Smith, (widow of the late G. W. Smith) confectionery ——Kennedy, hotels Enock Cleveland and Julius Hardt, blacksmithing, J. W. Peterson, wagon making, H. C. Dickey.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C. Oct. 28, 1892.

Politics was by unanimous consent a tabood subject in Washington from the time the death of Mrs. Harrison was announced until the funeral train bearing her remains started upon its sorrowful journey to Indianapolis. The hearts of our people were overflowing with sympathy for the President of the United States who was, for the time, forgotten as the candidate of a political party and remembered only as the loving and bereaved husband of the good woman lying dead in the White House. There was no boundary line to this sympathy; it came from every section of our own country as well as from all parts of the world; Mr. Cleveland, our candidate, was among the first to wire condolences, and the local democrats as a mark of their sympathy removed their Cleveland Stevenson banner until after the funeral cortege had passed down Pennsylvania avenue on its way to the train. Mrs. Harrison belonged to the type of mother and wife of which every American is proud; she carried herself with the same quiet dignity when presiding over her little three room cottage home as when mistress of the White House and ranking as the "first lady in the land." This country owes more to this type of woman than history will ever tell, and it was only right that it should pause in the midst of a presidential campaign to shed a tear over the grave of Caroline Scott Harrison.

Hon. Wayne McVeigh, of Pennsylvania, was in Washington this week to argue a case before the Supreme Court. He says he has received hundreds of letters from republicans, many of them men who have in the past been prominent in that party, endorsing his action in coming out for Cleveland and in denouncing the republican tariff policy, and informing him that the writers intend to vote the straight democratic ticket this year. He predicts the election of Cleveland by an overwhelming majority, and that the tariff reformers will be in a majority in both Houses of the next congress.

Let no democrat be thrown off his guard by the story sent out from republican sources in New York, that by advice of Senator Quay, now bossing the republican campaign, New York is to be abandoned to the democrats and all the money and other resources of the Republican National committee are to be concentrated upon Missouri, Tennessee, West Virginia, and North Carolina. There is not a word of truth in the story, which was given out for no other purpose than to make the democrats lessen their effort to carry New York, efforts which, if kept up, the republicans know are bound to result in victory. The Republican National committee has no idea of abandoning the contest in New York as its members know, as everybody else does, that there are about ninety-nine chances out of a possible one hundred in favor of the election of the presidential ticket that carries New York; but if the democrats can only be lulled into a feeling of security, boss Quay undoubtledly thinks the corruption fund at his dispesal big enough to buy a victory in New York.

Mr. Blaine is back in Washington and he is far from being pleased with what he considers the trickery of the men who prevented his nomination at Minneapolis in trying to make him the responsibility for their management of the republican campaign by remaining in New York, supposedly as an adviser of the Republican National committee, but in reality as a dummy lay figure with nothing to say or do, except to look pleased. He told a friend that he had neither given nor been asked to give the National committee any advice.

Senator Hill passed through Washington on his way to Virginia where he makes several speeches this week. He was asked what the prospects were in New York, and his reply was both characteristic and significant—"Oh, New York is all right."

Union veterans who are democrats, and there are lots of them, regard the anuouncement that Judge John P. Rea of Minnesota, ex-commander-in-chief of the G. A. R., would support Cleveland because of his pension vetoes and his position on the tariff as a very important one, believing that it will have a great deal of influence with the much talked about "soldier vote." The republicans are already trying to break the force of the announcement by charging that Judge Rea has been mad with Mr. Harrison ever since he refused to appoint him Commissioner of Pensions, when Tanner was kicked out, and that he has taken this method of "getting even" with him.

There was a big scare of some sort at the republican headquarters in New York this week, and Committeeman Hobart was sent post-haste to Washington with the news. He arrived here in time to hold consulations with several members of the Cabinet before their departure on the the funeral train.

SOME German scientists have recently furnished information in regard to the ages of trees. They assign to the pine tree 500 to 700 years as the maximum, 450 years to the silver fir, 275 years to the larch, 245 years to the red beech, 210 to the aspen, 200 to the birch, 170 to the ash, 145 to the elder and 130 to the elm.

OWEN CHASE, a Maine hunter, knows the forests of the Pine Tree state by heart, having hunted and worked in them for nearly fifty years. He has killed two hundred and twenty-two bears during that period, and entertains very little respect for bruin's courage. He says a bear is the most cowardly beast in the woods.

IN 1876 Senator Perazzi, of the Italian parliament, while coming down an Alpine glacier, at the height of fourteen thousand feet dropped his coat in a crevasse. The guide, knowing the annual rate of the glacial movement, told him that it would probably come out from the glacier's mouth in about seventeen years. Last August some tourists saw a coat in the moraine, and on examination it turned out to be the senator's.

THE cholera scare in New York decreased the immigration from the old world to the United States nearly one-half in September. The total number of immigrants, as announced by the national bureau of statistics, for September, 1892, was only 28,229 persons, against 52,706 in September, 1891. During the nine months of the current year, however, 476,848 immigrants landed, or 7,572 more than during the first nine months of last year.

THE late poet Tennyson was fond of his pipe, which was his inseparable companion, but fonder of pretty women, to whom he was always ready to grant any favor. He was particularly susceptible to the charms of the other sex, and was as gallant to them as a young beau. It is said that Mr. Daly could never have persuaded Tennyson to write his Robin Hood drama, "The Foresters," if he had not taken Miss Ada Rehan with him to lay siege to the poet's heart. In his later years he was sometimes harsh and discourteous to strangers, for it had happened too often that they had abused his courtesy.

AS THE price of aluminum declines it is being used for a greater variety of purposes. In several European countries many portable articles that are required to be strong and which it is desirable to have light are made of this material. Many things which German soldiers have to carry on their marches are now made of it. An experiment is being made in Russia in using aluminum shoes for cavalry horses. They are lighter than shoes of iron and last much longer. It is likely that aluminum will become so cheap that it will take the place of iron and wood in the manufacture of many articles.

THERE is something almost pathetic and something illustrative, too, of the fact that we do not always recognize the degree of irresponsibility of the son or grandson of the savage, in the fact that two negroes hanged in Greensboro, S. C., requested that the execution be public and that they might make speeches. They had not much idea, apparently, of the enormity of their crime, and their vanity made them seek to have the occasion rendered memorable. So the gallows was placed on an elevation, allowing 10,000 people to witness the hanging, and there was made an end of the two murderers.

The Losses Are Estimated at Nearly $7,000,000—Several Lives Lost and Many Persons Injured—A Thousand Homeless People.

GREAT FIRE IN MILWAUKEE.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 29.—There were several alarms Friday afternoon for fires, all of them the result of the heavy gale of wind that sprang up shortly before noon and increased until at 5 o'clock it reached a velocity of about 50 miles an hour. Between 5 and 6 o'clock there were five alarms, and the fire department, including the fire tug, was scattered in various parts of the city, when shortly before 6 o'clock an alarm was sent in from the box at the corner of Detroit and East Water streets. It was for a fire in the Union Oil Company's store at No. 275 East Water street, situated on the west side of the street, about midway between Detroit and Buffalo streets, the rear of the store being on the river. From this point the flames spread until the lower part of the Third ward was burned over, causing a loss of nearly $7,000,000. The insurance is estimated at $2,500,000. At least 1,500 people are homeless. Among the more prominent firms burned out were the following:

Union Oil Company, M. Bloch & Co., wholesale liquor dealers; the F. Dohman Wholesale Drug Company; Milwaukee Mirror and Art Glass Company; J. P. Kissinger, wholesale liquor dealer; J. E. Leading insusance men say that about half of the losses is covered by insurance. They estimate the big losses as follows:

Chicago, Racine, Kenosha, Sheboygan and other points were early appealed to for help and responded promptly, firemen and apparatus arriving from the several points as rapidly as steam could bring them. They left the trains south of the fire and did much to confine it to the north bank of the river below the turn at Walker's Point bridge. At 12:45 Chief Foley announced that the fire was under control.

Two dead firemen are in the morgue on River street. They are:

Henry Pruddenbruck, No. 3 station, residence No. 250 Reid street, struck by falling timber and smothered; Charles Stahr, No. 4 hook and ladder, No. 522 Fourth avenue, struck by beam and smothered to death.

There was one other body at the morgue at midnight—that of a woman of perhaps 50 years, small in stature, with dark hair. There are no marks on her body to show how she met her death. She must have been suffocated by the smoke.

At Peacock's undertaking rooms at midnight the only body was that of a Mrs. Callahan, a widow who lived on Jackson street, opposite the Northwestern freight depot. She evidently died of fright, for it was known she was a sufferer from heart disease. When she was first found in a helpless condition she was taken to the Third ward schoolhouse, where she died.

There are many persons at the Emergency hospital. Two of these are seriously injured and may die. The most seriously hurt are:

James Bergenthal, No. 110 Twenty-ninth street, head and face injured by explosion; Richard Gardner, Humboldt and Auer streets, face and head hurt by explosion; J. H. Roesch, 39 years old, No. 184 Garfield avenue, broken leg, injured about head and body, may die, buried beneath falling walls; William Witte, 30 years old, No. 379 Greenfield avenue, leg broken, injured by falling bricks, may die.

The entire lower part of the Third ward, inhabited largely by poor Irish families, was devastated. About 500 cottages were destroyed.

The fire originated from an explosion of something in the cellar. Fed by the inflammable stock it soon spread through the three upper floors.

At 9 o'clock, by order of Mayor Somers, the militia alarm was sounded from the central fire station. Within an hour a number of the Lighthouse Squadron troopers, as well as many infantrymen, reported for duty. They were detailed along the burned district to assist the police in keeping back the hundreds of thousands of people gathered about and to assist the homeless in finding shelter from the bleak winds.

The Milwaukee fire department consists of 252 men, eighteen engine companies, seven truck companies, seven chemical engine companies, the fire boat Cataract and the water tower. The fire losses last year amounted to $525,000.

PRIVATE IAMS.
(After receiving punishment.)

On the day H. C. Frick was shot Private Iams, of the Tenth regiment, which was stationed at Homestead, came out of his tent and gave three cheers "for the man who shot Frick." His remark was overheard by Leiut. Col. Streator and for the offense Iams was first hung up by the thumbs for half an hour and then his head was shaved and he was drummed out of camp. CHICAGO, Oct. 28.—Mrs. Tina Mobrings, 45 years old, who lived at Hawthorne, and her 9-year-old son were run down and instantly killed by a Chicago, Burlington & Quincy passenger train at Hawthorne Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Mobrings and her son were walking west on the track, when the fast passenger train, in charge of Conductor Babcock, came up behind them. The engineer saw the couple on the track when he was half a mile away and blew his whistle and slightly checked the speed of his train. Just before the mother and son were reached Mrs. Mobrings turned and perceived the train. She made a frantic effort to drag her son out of the way, but he was so badly frightened that he attempted to pull his mother in the opposite direction. While they were struggling directly in front of the train they were struck by the pilot of the locomotive and hurled a distance of 50 feet. When picked up both were dead.

ITS VALUE RUBBED AWAY.

Loss of 13 Per Cent. by Abrasion in $15,000 Worth of Gold.

CHICAGO, Oct. 28.—A remarkable example of the loss of gold by abrasion has come to the notice of the customs officials. George W. Sheldon & Co. sent $15,000 in gold to the collector to pay duties. The amount was in equal amounts, made up of $5, $10 and $20 pieces. The teller found that the coin footed up all right taken at its face value and it was sent over to the sub-treasury. Word came back to the collector that the $15,000 in gold was $1,935 short weight and that the deficit would have to be made up before a receipt would be issued. Examination proved that the coin had been abraded to that extent—nearly 13 per cent. Sheldon & Co. at once notified the paying bank and a gold certificate for the amount lacking was sent to Collector Clark.

ONCE UPON A TIME.

In the kingdom of our childhood
How we loved each rhyme,
And each oft-told tale beginning
"Once upon a time."

Now we hold as no less precious
Thoughts of youth's sweet prime,
And the blessed golden season
Once upon a time.

Discord then had never mingled
With our hearts' glad chime;
Life was harmony and gladness,
Once upon a time.

Hands were free, then, for life's labors;
Feet were strong to climb;
Hearts were full of brave ambitions
Once upon a time.

Then no doubts were ever blended
In life's happy rhyme,
Love was true and lovers faithful,
Once upon a time.

Shall we mock at those who teach us
Life is still sublime?
Ah, how very fair we thought it,
Once upon a time!

JOHNSON'S FORTUNE.

He Found Oil, But Not in Paying Quantities.

"I've done my best, mother," Farmer Hobbs said, coming in hot and tired from the hay field. "That there dratted machine won't work, and ef I am to save my hay, I'll have to take that interest money and buy a new machine."

"I think you'd better not, father," Mrs. Hobbs answered, in mild alarm. "I don't know where you're goin' to get any more, and Johnson is powerful clost about gettin' the money on time. I'd be afeard to let it run over a minute."

"Well, but, Lucindy, the hay's wuth more'n the intrust, and you know they's no takin' the stock through the winter without it. The cattle might kinder rub along, but the horses is jist plum ableeged to have their timothy, and my timothy is as fine a piece as you ever sot eyes on."

"Suppose you try again," Mrs. Hobbs suggested, helping her husband to a luscious quarter of raspberry pie. "I'll go out with you and help oncholke her, and we'll use plenty of ile, and mebbe you can rub through jest this oncet."

"Well, I'll try, Lucindy; I hain't no hopes, but I would like to save that intrust money."

Mrs. Hobbs stayed in the field till five o'clock, and the hay was cut with few delays. The girls brought out the supper, which was eaten with much relish in the hayfield. The horses being watered and fed, the work went on by the big harvest moon, and at ten o'clock the hay from the "big medder" was in the stacks.

A few days after Jim Johnson came out to see if the interest money was ready. He tied his horse under a tree and started through the meadow to see Mr. Hobbs, who was fencing his ricks at the other side.

"Moses and the bullrushes! What's that?" he asked, gazing at glinty blue reflections floating on pools of water standing everywhere, for it had rained heavily the night before. "Oil, and no mistake!" he went on, after dipping his finger into a puddle and testing it carefully with his nose.

It was only the day before that the papers had contained an account of some new oil fields found not above twenty miles away; an old partner of Jim had been the first to invest, and was consequently fabulously rich.

Johnson carefully rubbed his finger on his pocket handkerchief, stowed the latter in a deep pocket and hastened across the field, his face pale and his eyes glittering very unpleasantly. He tried to greet the farmer with his accustomed familiarity, but his words came by jerks and in gusts, and his throat became so dry that he could scarcely articulate.

"What's the matter? Hain't you well?" Mr. Hobbs asked, suspending his work to gaze curiously at his visitor. "You look taller-colored as the dead, an' your eyes is like burnt holes in a blanket."

"No, thank you, not at all," Johnson replied at random. "I'm quite well, except husky sore throat—are you well? And the family?"

"Pretty fair—we've got a good deal of health mixed up amongst us—you know they's twelve all told."

"Yes, a large, interesting family—want to sell the farm?"

He tried to make the question less eager, but he could not quiet the tremor in his voice, and he was in mortal dread lest Mr. Hobbs should have some reason to cross the field and see the oil, when his "cake would be dough," as he mentally expressed it.

"No," Mr. Hobbs replied, shortly, and went on with his work.

"I'll give you a good price for it—I want it for a combination shoe factory. Set a figger."

"Well, twelve thousand—a thousand apiece," said Mr. Hobbs, jokingly; the farm was not worth more than a third of that sum.

"I'll take it," with a gasp. "Here's fifty to bind the bargain, and I'll fill out a check for the balance right here."

He did so, and handed the paper to Mr. Hobbs, who kept his countenance and received it with perfect gravity. Privately he was convinced that Johnson was crazy.

"Come to the house and sign the contract for the deed."

"All right."

Mr. and Mrs. Hobbs accompanied Johnson to town, and were thunderstruck when they learned that the sale was real, and that they had twelve thousand dollars in the bank.

"Sense that Johnson hain't crazy," Hobbs began as soon as he was clear of the town, "why they's somethin' in the wind. It may be a shoe factory, but I don't believe it. I wonder ef they've found gold?"

"It don't make no sort o' difference to us, father," Mrs. Hobbs answered. She was afraid that her husband might take alarm and want to "rue back," as she expressed it. "No, it don't make a grain o' difference to us, an' we've got enough for the place ef they find diminta. I never did like it, an' I don't keer how soon we git away. Let's buy back our six acres on the edge of Cloverdale. We can git it for three thousand, an' then you'll have nine thousand to put out at interest."

"Yes, mother."

"And we kin git little Jim his cornet and send him off to be learnt to play."

"Yo kin do jist as you please, mother. I'm rich enough now, I reckon, to do as I like, and I hope I won't never want to do nothin' very bad."

"That's somethin' you never did do, father," dutifully replied his wife, "and I don't believe bein' rich is a-goin' to change you much. If it would I'd want somethin' to come along and take the money away from us, because it can't never pay to give up doin' good."

As soon as the transfer was made and the deed recorded, Johnson sent the following telegram to his whilom partner:

"Come on—bring all your loose cash—oil in abundance."

The cash was sent with instructions to buy adjoining farms on option of thirty days; the oil man would come later and bring an expert.

The farms were bargained for at ridiculously low figures, and then Johnson invited his friends out to see his "find."

"I tell you, boys," he said, as he rode up and tied his horse to the meadow fence, "the whole earth is just a-soakin' with it, and it's jist burstin' out of the ground. You see this country has never had any oil taken out of it," he went on glibly, "and as it is constantly generating it has become so chock full that the ground can't hold it and it's compelled to come out. You'd be astonished to see how it is actually boiling up."

"It must be wasting if it is in that condition," some one remarked.

"What's a waste of a few millions o' barrels?" scornfully retorted Johnson. "There's enough left for me and my family and all my poor relations."

By this time others, having heard the news, had arrived at the farm, and quite a crowd had gathered when the partner with the expert drove up, followed by Mr. Hobbs.

"Just wait until you examine these blue patches," Johnson said to the two men after they had alighted from their buggy. "Now tell me if you ever saw a surer indication of oil?"

The expert gave a glance over the field, took a quick survey of the conformation of the country, and opened his lips to speak; but before he could articulate a word, Mr. Hobbs broke into the conversation with a remark that sent the cold chills down Johnson's spine.

"And is it them blue patches that indicate ile?" he asked, with a glance half pitying, half contemptuous. "That's a fact, for I used mor'n two gallon on my ole mowin' machine, a-tryin' to git through the season without buyin' a new one."

"Let this be a lesson to you, sir," said Johnson's partner.

"All the lesson I git out of it," again put in Mr. Hobbs, "is that when you are a-cuttin' hay use plenty of ile."

"It's a—swindle!" Johnson broke out, livid with rage. "And I'll land you in the pen before this is over."

"Don't talk to me about swindling," Mr. Hobbs began, advancing upon Johnson, who retreated to his buggy. "Who was it swindled the Widow Robinson out of her property and drove her to commit suicide? Who was it that swindled the people out of their taxes and barely missed the pen? Who was it that swindled—"

Johnson gave his horse a lash with the whip and drove rapidly away.

"I didn't know nothin' about this ile business until this mornin'," Mr. Hobbs explained to the people present. "I knowed they was somethin' up, but I had no ida what it was, for I supposed every blamed fool in the country would know machine-ile on a medder after a rain."—Waverly.

HE WAS MUCH SURPRISED.

A Man Married His Wife on the Day of Her Expected Funeral.

"I married my wife on the day I expected to attend her funeral," said a St. Louisan to the Idle Hour club that was holding a seance the other day. "That was twenty-five years ago, in Richmond, Va. We were to have been married on the first of January, but on Christmas day the young lady was taken ill, and on the last day of the old year she died, apparently.

"The funeral was to occur at an early hour next morning, and she was placed in the coffin that evening. About midnight I went to the room where she lay, and the watchers withdrew to the hall. I sat down and bowed my head on the coffin, overwhelmed by my loss. I had sat there perhaps ten minutes when I heard a scratching inside the coffin, then a stifled sob.

"My nerves, already strained to their utmost tension, seemed to snap, and I stood up and screamed like a hysterical woman. The watchers thought I had become insane, and tried to take me away. I was powerless to speak, and could only point to the coffin. They did not understand me, and persisted in taking me away. I broke from them and strove to tear off the coffin lid with my fingers. They called for help, but all the men in Richmond could not have held me back. I ripped that coffin lid to splinters, dragged the young lady from it and rushed into the open air with her. The people were too much horrified to follow me instantly. They called in the police to confine me, but when they found me the young lady had her arms around my neck and we were both laughing and crying like a couple of children. The minister came to preach the funeral sermon, but performed the marriage ceremony instead."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

PLAIN PHILOSOPHY.

Here Are a Few Brief But Pointed Utterances.

The reason so many horse races are crooked is because the human race isn't straight.

People who cling to the anchor of hope often have to go down into the mud with it.

Man is ninety per cent. water; and, like water, he finds it easier to go down hill than to climb.

A stoic is a man who has so keen an appreciation of the intensity of sensations that he is ashamed to acknowledge his own real feelings.

Genius is only another form of insanity. The genius is the only man who will put in hours of earnest labor when he doesn't know whether his wages are to be $.00 or $100.

Dear friends, be not unhappy. If you can't get what you want in this world, be assured that there is a plentitude of things that you don't want waiting for you. There is always enough in the world, but most of it is a misfit.

All men are born equal; but equality is the first thing they grow out of.

The street gamin is never contented with any other place than the head of the procession; but in manhood he usually drops behind it.

Man has to begin at the foot of the ladder; and if he doesn't look out he often takes a tumble into the sub-basement; where there is neither sweetness nor light.—Puck.

SCHOOL AND CHUROH.

—The oldest bishop of the English church in point of service is Dr. William Percy Austin, whose field of labor is the diocese of Guiana. He is eighty-five years old and has been for fifty years a bishop.

—Mrs. Croly (Jennie June) has received the degree of doctor of literature, and will occupy the newly-created chair of literature and journalism at Rutgers Women's college, in New York city.

—Next year will occur the episcopal jubilee of the pope, and it is said that there will be a large pilgrimage of priests from North and South America, including seven hundred from the United States.

—The annual report of the Wesleyan Methodist Sunday School union shows 7,024 Sunday schools, an increase of 32; 128,955 officers and teachers, a decrease of 323; 939,938 pupils, an increase of 1,611. There are 3,566 Bands of Hope connected with the Sunday school with an enrolled membership of 375,024, an increase of 24,849.

—An extraordinary number of young ladies are now becoming missionaries. At the Church Missionary society's headquarters, in Salisbury square, one day last month, no fewer than twenty who have been accepted for service, were introduced to the committee. Never before, it is said, have so many recruits been welcomed in one body.—Presbyterian Observer.

—According to a recent census, Christianity is the third creed in India in point of numbers. Dr. George F. Pentecost, who has been engaged in missionary work in that country, gives a hopeful account of the steady growth of Christianity in India. He reports a Brahmin as saying that Christianity is not so much converting individual Hindoos, as Christianizing Hinduism.

—Why should not gospel wagons be sent into the country neighborhood with invitations to the inhabitants to ride into town and attend public services there. It would give them opportunities to become better acquainted with one another, to hear good preaching, to enlarge the circle of their acquaintance and to join in public worship, to which they have grown indifferent after having been at first deprived of it. We believe that many a church might much enlarge its influence by maintaining a gospel wagon.—Congregationalist.

—It is thought that the prospects of a union between the Presbyterian church in England with the Calvinistic Methodist church of Wales are growing more favorable. The Welsh church is much larger than the English church, and it is well organized and well worked. Dr. Lundee, of Liverpool, gives the following facts which shows its strength and activity. He says: "It may help us to realize the magnitude of the work committed to our Welsh Presbyterian brethren if we give one or two statistical items. There are 1,271 churches and 188 preaching stations. There are 137,415 communicants. Collections for all puposes amount for the year to £237,718, and there is an increase of no less than £35,011. The financial reputation of the church may be inferred from the saying of a leading banker, the best security we deal with is the Welsh Calvinistic church; no banker ever loses a penny by them.'"—Presbyterian Observer.

VISITING A DIAMOND MINE.

Disappointing Experience of the Stranger That Makes the Trial.

Is going down a diamond mine a pleasant experience? Scarcely. A diamond mine is about as dark, dirty and repulsive as a coal pit, and not a hall of dazzling light, as seems to run in the popular imagination. At the mouth of the shaft, which is usually inclined, not perpendicular, there is a "cage" which to the stranger looks like a wooden coffin. Into this casket you step and you are launched into darkness with awful and perplexing speed. After you have dropped about six hundred feet you are brought to a full stop, much, probably, to your satisfaction. The sensation of descent as you lie in the coffin is not calculated to make one sing hilariously. I have known men very plucky on the surface howl dismally as if they thought they were bound for some pitiless Inferno.

Arrived at the bottom, or perhaps only the first level, the visitor will probably be confounded with the noise and vapor and lurid gleams of hundreds of candles and lamps, and the uncouth, unnatural appearance of the natives who move about like so many demons. He will see dirty trucks into which dirty men shovel dirty earth, which is drawn to the surface in the same fashion as coal is from a mine. The visitor will probably see nothing to even remind him of a diamond. The precious gems are encased in the dirty earth he sees sent to the surface in quantities of thousands of tons per day. The sight is somewhat disappointing and removes much of the sentimentality about a diamond mine.—Jewelers' Circular.

Too Much Attention.

Railway ticket agents are not the only people annoyed by foolish questions. A Vermont farmer sent a large black hen to his married daughter, who lives in town and who wished to keep this present as a pet. The lady put the hen in a coop within sight of the street. Almost immediately a neighbor, passing by said:

"Ah, you have a hen, haven't you?"

"Yes," said the lady.

"Nice black one, isn't it?"

"Yes."

Soon another neighbor came along and said:

"Why, you have a hen?"

"Yes."

"Just one hen?"

"Yes."

"Coal black, isn't it?"

"Yes."

In a few minutes another acquaintance came by.

"Well, you have a—"

"Bridget," said the lady to her servant, "kill the hen for supper!"—Youth's Companion.

Adapted to the Work.

"I see you wear an open straw hat," observed Gaswell, as he inspected Van Braam's headgear.

"Yes. Do you think it is a little late in the season for straw?"

"A trifle; but that wasn't what concerned me."

"May I inquire what it was?"

"You may."

"Well?"

"I have heard several fellows say you talked through your hat, and I was curious to see what sort of one it was."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—Crisp crackers in the oven before using unless they are freshly made.

—Gravy or sauce made with a flour thickening should be allowed to cook slowly ten or fifteen minutes, to destroy the starchy taste.

—Delicious Flavor to Lamb: To give a delicious flavor to lamb, when it is to be eaten cold, put in the water in which it is boiled whole cloves and long sticks of cinnamon. If the lamb is to be roasted, boil the cloves and cinnamon in water, and with this baste the meat.—Detroit Free Press.

—Pumpkin Pie: Cream the yolks of four eggs with as many tablespoonfuls of granulated sugar; add two cupfuls of stewed pumpkin, strained, two cupfuls of milk, a teaspoonful of cinnamon, a pinch of ground mace, some grated nutmeg, and last the whites of the eggs beaten very stiff.—N. Y. Observer.

—To extract grease spots from silk, lay the soiled spot upon a thick sheet of brown or blotting paper. Now press a moderately-warm flatiron over it for a minute or two, and the spot will disappear. Then rub the stained part with a bit of silk or flannel.—Detroit Free Press.

—Walnut Catsup: Select green walnuts before the shell is formed. Grind or pound them in an earthen mortar, squeeze out the juices through a coarse cloth, and add to each gallon of juice one pound of anchovies, one pound of salt, four ounces of cayenne pepper, two ounces of black pepper, one ounce each of ginger, cloves and mace, and the root of one horse-radish. Boil till reduced one-half. When cold bottle and seal. Will be ready for use in three months.—Good Housekeeping.

—Rice Waffles: Sift two teacupfuls warm, soft, boiled rice, stir into it a tablespoonful of flour, half a teaspoonful salt and two teaspoonfuls baking powder. Mix with this the yolks of three eggs, well beaten, and one and a half cupfuls sweet milk, with one tablespoonful melted butter, and lastly add the well-beaten whites. Have the waffle-iron hot and well greased, partly fill with batter, cover and cook a moment, then turn and brown the other side.—Orange Judd Farmer.

—Light and Dainty Crackers: Take a piece of well-risen light bread dough about the size of a half-pint cup. Work into it a piece of fresh butter the size of a walnut. When it is all worked in, break the dough into bits as large as a nutmeg. Flour the board well and roll very thin. Prick with a fork all over and bake quickly a pale brown. Do not scorch them in the least. These crackers are entirely different from those made with unrisen dough, and are especially nice for an invalid who has wearied of the taste of other bread.—Ladies' Home Journal.

—To relieve cramp when in the calf of the leg draw up the foot with as great an effort as possible toward the shin bone, and in a few seconds the cramp will disappear. When a cramp is in the thigh or arm tie a towel, cord or handkerchief around the limb just above the cramped part, and then rub this part with the naked hand alone, or using some stimulating liniment like spirits of camphor or red-peppered whisky. These preparations may also be rubbed upon the neck when cramps attack this part. Cramps in the stomach may be checked by first strongly rubbing and kneading over the stomach a mixture of equal parts of sweet (or linseed) oil, essence of peppermint, laudanum and spirits of camphor.—Detroit Free Press.

AN IDEAL WIFE.

The Value of Cultivating One's Own Society.

There is no greater blessing can be fall a thinker than a union with a woman who is at least his peer in her appreciations; and it must be remembered that Balzac claimed that "appreciation is complete equality." A woman worldly enough to protect a thinker from the world, and unworldly enough to live with him in the world of his thought and imagination, is the ideal wife for the man of high aims, and with such a woman a man can live serenely in the most desirable society. Emerson aptly puts it thus: "When a man meets his accurate mate society begins and life is delicious." The italicization is mine. In an atmosphere of love and sympathy one lives more vividly: there is a spur in every meeting, an inspiration in every absence. Life itself begins with such a union; the old adage that "he lives twice who lives well" has more meaning when it is twisted to read "he lives twice who loves well, and wisely." The man who is rich in himself, his sympathies, his various magnetisms and reciprocations, is the truly rich man; his store does not tempt the vulgar to robbery or excite the envy of his neighbors, for to them this world of the imagination is nothing; and granting all possible human separations and afflictions such a store will last a life time. These are the riches to accumulate. One's own society is the society to cultivate; and to make it attractive to one's self and to others, one must cultivate one's self. This is the secret of true greatness, true gentleness, true manners and true morality.—W. B. Harte, in New England Magazine.

KITCHEN POINTERS.

It is said that clusters of clover, if hung in a room and left to dry and shed their perfume through the air, will drive away more flies than all the fly traps and sticky fly papers can collect.—Detroit Free Press.

Roll Jelly Cake.—Four eggs, one cup sugar, one cup flour, one teaspoon baking powder, flavor to taste. Bake in a quick oven; turn out on a cloth, spread with jelly. Roll by keeping cloth between cake and hand. One-half receipt can be used.—Home.

To Boil Rice.—Wash clean two cupfuls of rice; put it into a pot with two quarts of water, and boil it quite tender; turn it into a colander to drain, but do not stir it. Let it stand before the fire to dry about ten minutes. Every kernel of rice will be separate, dry and look very white.—Boston Budget.

Barberries are never considered fit for use, like the persimmon of the south, until they have been touched by the frost. They then make a delicious jelly, an excellent preserve or pickle, while the juice when canned makes a delightfully cooling drink, mixed with water, for feverish invalids.—N. Y. Tribune.

Calf's Liver Saute.—Slice the liver. Throw boiling water over it for a minute. Have some butter very hot in a frying-pan, and lay the slices in, turning until cooked firm; place on a hot dish. Squeeze lemon juice and sprinkle parsley over the top. Add the butter in which the liver was cooked and serve.—Food.

LAW BREAKERS.

Berlin complains of the enforcement of the Sunday laws under which no one is permitted to work more than five hours during the day.

To illustrate the execrableness of German law, a cavalry officer was discharged for reaching from his saddle and saving the life of a little girl who was about to be run over.

One Moses Lull was fined twenty-five dollars the other day in a Lynn (Mass.) court for cruelty to a horse. The full weight of his punishment may be estimated when it is explained that he had bought the horse for seventy-five cents.

Two English women fought, made up their quarrel and kissed. Then one of them caused the arrest of the other for assault and battery. Thereupon the claim was made that the kiss had canceled the grievance and there could be no cause for action.

A French artist recently evaded very cleverly the law requiring dogs to be muzzled by painting a muzzle on his Fido. So realistic was it that the deception might never have been known if the dog had not foolishly bitten a policeman one day and so betrayed his fond master.

RUMBLINGS ON THE RAILS.

Trains in Russia run twenty-two miles an hour.

Great Britain is reported to have 16,860 locomotives.

On several of the railroads in Russia iron telegraph poles are to be substituted for wooden ones.

Mexico has 22,500 miles of telegraph and 6,600 of railroad. A district messenger service will soon be introduced.

The life of a locomotive crank pin, which is almost the first thing about an engine to wear out, is 60,000 miles, and the life of a 33-inch wheel is 66,733 miles.

The Japanese government contemplates the construction of six lines of railway, aggregating 800 miles in length. The purchase of the private railways by the state is also projected.

On foggy winter days English railways employ thousands of extra hands to place detonating signals on rails, the ordinary semaphores being invisible. A new method of signalling is by an electric bell on the locomotive, a contact device causing each signal station to sound automatically the number of beats required to tell whether to stop or proceed.

THE WORLD'S ODD CORNERS.

The deepest mining shaft in Africa has recently been opened at Kimberly. It goes down 1,000 feet.

Several autograph letters of Luther and Melancthon have been discovered in the library of an obscure town in the Prussian province of Saxony.

The longest canal in the world is the one which extends from the frontier of China to St. Petersburg. It measures in all 4,472 miles.

The most powerful naphtha spring on record was recently opened in Baku on the Taggiell grant. If it continues at its original force it will be the richest naphtha fountain in the world.

It is likely that Tampico, Mexico, will become one of the deep-water ports of the world. The soundings now measure more than twenty feet over the bar, the greatest depth ever attained. The bar is wearing away.

Complete statistics of the great fire at St. John's, Newfoundland, have just been issued. The number of houses destroyed was 1,550, the number of families burned out 1,874, and the total number of persons burned out 10,234.

WAYS OF SATAN.

The devil's best time to make hay is when Christians are not busy.

The devil never puts on mourning when a stingy man joins the church.

The devil has to work extra hard to get hold of children who have good mothers.

As long as the devil can make an outsider believe he is as good as a church member he has a sure hold on him.

The devil is not much afraid of the preacher who measures a service to God by the amount of money in it for himself.—Ram's Horn.

Cold Wave Coming.

Weather reports from all extreme stations announce the early advent of cold waves. In anticipation, thousands of people are completing arrangements to spend the winter in the South. Of all south bound roads, the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad offers the best advantages to the traveler. It is the shortest line from Chicago to Florida and Gulf Coast resorts. Its trains reach destination six hours in advance of any other line. Its equipment is unsurpassed. Its popular fast train, the "Chicago & Nashville Limited," which leaves Dearborn Station, Chicago, 4 p. m. every day in the year, connects with all through trains from the West and Northwest, is vestibuled from end to end, heated by steam, lighted by gas, is composed of Pullman sleepers, Pullman Ladies' and Day coaches, and a superb dining car.

Official.

It is our earnest desire to impress upon the minds of the public the superiority of the service offered by the Wisconsin Central Lines to Milwaukee, Chicago and all points East and South. Two fast trains leave St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth daily, equipped with Pullman Vestibuled Drawing Room Sleepers, Dining Cars and Coaches of the latest design. Its Dining Car Service is unsurpassed, which accounts, to a great degree, for the popularity of this line. The Wisconsin Central Lines, in connection with Northern Pacific R. R., is the only line from Pacific Coast points over which both Pullman Vestibuled, first class, and Pullman Tourist Cars are operated via St. Paul without change to Chicago.

Milk Cans, pans, churns, bottles, everything which is used for milk, even down to the baby's bottle—these are things for which you need Pearline. ROGER WILLIAMS.

Roger Williams the founder of Rhode Island and the very first man to preach toleration of all religious creeds was buried in a private burying ground in the State that he had founded. Some years ago when the State resolved to erect a monument to his memory the place was searched but no remains could be found. Near the grave stood an apple tree. It had sent down a large root which had pushed its way down to the precise spot occupied by the skull of Roger Williams; had made a turn around it and followed the direction of the back bone to the hips. Here it divided into two branches sending one along each leg to the heel where both turned upward to the toes. One of these formed a sligth crook at the knee which made the whole bear a wonderful resemblance to a human being. Roger Williams had become part and parcel of the apple tree. So our bodies are continually changing. If we ward off disease we can enjoy life but if weallow ourselves to contract pulmonary trouble and neglect it we are simply laying the foundation for a diseased condition that will steadily grow worse and worse. In this case and when attacked by pulmonary trouble of any sort, get a bottle of Reid's German Cough and Kidney Cure and take it freely. John Steffes, an old citizen of Delano, died this afternoon.

The Halloween Sociable at Leon Krasee's on Monday evening was a success

Rev. Soares, of Minneapolis, will preach at 10:30, on Sunday at the Presbyterian church.

Clerk of Court John O'Leary was in town on Monday and made citizens of several of our fellow townmen.

Mrs. C. J. Buckley and children arrived home from a visit to Minneapolis for a couple of weeks, this A. M.

Mrs. C. G. Halgren, of Watertown, on her return from the cities, was met at the train this morning by her son, Harry.

Mr. H. C. Bull, Democratic candidate for the Legislature. was here to look after his political interests on Thursday night.

Mr. A. J. Whitaker, Democratic candidate for Auditor, was looking after his political interests in Delano last Wednesday morning.

Sam. Pape has gone to Cokato to relieve Agent Whitaker while he spends the time until election campaigning for county auditor.

Several of our citizens visited Watertown, on Wednesday evening and heard Daniel W. Lawler speak. They came home satisfied that he would make a good governor.

Mr. and Mrs. John Klich rejoices over the advent of another son on Sunday, Oct. 23. Although quite young in appearance they have a family of six boys and three girls.

Delano Democrats are getting hungry for a rally. if none comes before they will be on hand election day, bright and early to deposit their ballots for equal rights to all men.

The Board of Registration met on Tuesday, at the city hall. We understand the list was enlarged to about 200 names. Those not registered can vote under certain circumstances. Come and try.

The Town of Franklin holds its election this year in Cramer's hall. Voters who have neglected to get registered can, we understand, manage to vote if they are acquainted with the judges and are entitled to vote at this precinct.

A Political oyster supper was held at the city hall, last Friday evening where a vote was had on choice for President, the vote stood at the close:

Lawler, 209	Nelson, 175
Donnelly, 15	Dean 13.

Receipts, $44.00 for Presbyterian church.

Rev. Davies is quietly waiting for that first marriage ceremony to come off. He says it is customary for a new minister to hand the first marriage fee received back to the bride and hopes it will not be so large he will regret to abide by the precident established by his predecessors.

46 friends of Mr. and Mrs. William Hawker called at their residence, on Friday evening, the 18th, inst, and presented Mrs. H. with a fine rocking chair much to her surprise and satisfaction. The party brought their lunch along, and a good time was had. Charles was home, on a visit and enjoyed the suprise with his parents.

On Tuesday morning our village presented to the view of early risers the appearance of seme of the pictures of villages in India or seme other place than America. In front of the largest hotel stood a bar and complete outfit. Wagons were placed in front of the bank and one loaded with creeks at the door of Ed. Stewart's harness shop, August Berneck had a wheelborrow and a sewing machine at his front door an effigy of straw had charge of John Lohmiller's wagon and outfit on the bridge and things presented a very strange appearance generally. All owing to Holleween night. We are glad to say that though the boys had lots of fun we noticed no serious harm to property.

We will furnish the BUFFALO GAZETTE and the papers mentioned below for one year for the prices named:

Fred Chancellor's barn burned Wednesday night, one horse perished and another was considerably searched.

Today, Nov. 4, is the 78th anniversary of the union of Norway and Sweden under the existing form of government

Dr. Flannigan, formerly of Waverly, died in Minneapolis, this week. His remains were taken to Howard Lake, for burial.

George Carpenter publishes in the Eagle and other papers a denial of the story that he had made certain untruthful statements about his opponent Mr. Eppel being 80 years old and using walking sticks, etc.

Rev Davies preached a political sermon to his congregations last Sunday. He takes the view that religious people should not neglect voting when opportunity presents. It is a duty they owe to their government.

County Cullings.

The Eagle has one of her usual tirades against Nugent, Wendell and Quinn. They are not running for offices with the exception of Quinn, who is up for a Cleveland elector, and as likely as not to be elected. Why don't you let them alone, Eagle, when they are not candidates?

Cutting and Culkin seem to do most of the jawing this campaign. The Eagle speaks of Cutting as a coward. Her editors certainly have not heard his speeches. He publicly defends his record on the stump. And claims that for the first time in the history of the county sheriff's bills are itemized.

Superintendent Lindsley handed us the following which may interest some of the Wright Co. teachers: If there are any teachers of Wright county who have not succeeded in finding a winter term, they might find a position in Lyon Co., Minn., as there are ten or more schools of that county that have no teachers. Any teacher desiring a position there should write County sup't. S. L. Wait, Marshall, Minn.

Dr. Catlin has distributed his share of electioneering documents during the short time he has been before the people as a candidate, having been placed on the ticket instead of Mr. Rennie who declined on account of ill health to run, he has had to forego the pleasure of meeting with many of the voters, but he is well-know over the county and will doubtless suffer no particular loss of votes on this account.

Candidate Collins.

MAPLE LAKE:---Mr. Collins is one of the candidates that the voters of this county should place in office, as his election will be a guarantee that the schools of the county will be visited and that none will be neglected. The people in this part of the county desire to have their schools visited in a more satisfactory way than has been done heretofore. TAX PAYER.

I hope Mr. Collins will be elected, so that the schools may not be neglected as they have been in the past, in this section of this county. District, No. 16, has been sadly neglected, the same as others in the vicinity.

Nov. 1st. 92. A VOTER.
Silver Creek.

Superintendent Schools.

MAPLE LAKE:---John F. Collins, the Democratic and People's Party candidate for Superintendent of Schools, was born in Dane county, Wisconsin, and is about 30 years of age. He worked on his father's farm, and attended the common school of Verona until his sixteenth year. He then took one year's course in the Northwestern Business college, at Madison, Wis. He next attended the University of Wisconsin, and continued there until he graduated with his brothers, E. J. and W. G. in 1883. Soon after his graduation Mr. Collins came to this state, locating at Jordan, Scott Co., where he was principal of the Jordan graded schools. He was subsequently principal of the Delano school. He taught the village school here, and gave perfect satisfaction. At present he is teaching the Smith Lake village school. Mr. Collins was admitted to the bar in this county, and passed a brilliant examination displaying a more extensive knowledge of law than is usual with young aspirants to the legal profession. He practiced law at Waverly. He instituted a Literary society here last winter, in order to stimulate and promote the intellectual life of the young people of the community. In his participation in the exercises it was readily seen that he is possesser of a large treasury of knowledge. He is a good logician, and a pleasing speaker. He showed great ability in impromptu eloquence by a masterly discussion of questions adopted at the time, and winning the laurels of victory. His fourth of July oration here, was the most scholary and eloquent of the like in the history of this community. Mr. Collins is highly spoken of here. He is a young man of studious habits and good moral character. By natural mental tendency and discipline he is adopted to educational work. John F. Collins has all the moral and intellectual qualifications requisite to eminently fit him for Superintendent of schools. And he deserves to be elected by a triumphant majority. THEMIS.

Politic's Once Again.

INDEPENDENCE, Nov. 1:---This is late in the evening of the political campaign of 1892, the time is drawing near when each political campaign from president down to alderman of some country village will know his destiny and as this is the last chance your correspondent will have before election to say any thing in the columns of your paper, would remind the voters of Independence and in fact all the voters of the 34th Legislative District in Hennepin county that B. F. Christlieb of Long Lake is again on the ticket for legislative honors, and the voters of this district can not do better than to vote for him. He is a man well respected by all who know him and also by all political parties and is well calculated to the position.

Would also remind the voters of Hennepin county that Mr. Lewis, of Long Lake, the present county superintendent of schools for Hennepin county is again up for that office. We believe it is generally conceded by all that Mr. Lewis is an efficient officer and filled the position of superintendent of schools to his credit.

Now last but least if I am allowed to digress and jump the boundary line between Hennepin and Wright counties would also mention our old time friend Dr. T. J. Catlin who is running for the legislature on Democratic ticket in Wright county. Mr. Catlin has lived in Wright county for a good many years, is a live and energetic man. One who will stand by what he thinks to be right, no matter who it hits also has a character and reputation that is unimpeachable but before leaving the candidates of Wright Co. would not fail to make mention of another old time friend Mr. Valentine Eppel. Hundreds of people in Wright county and the western part of Hennepin county made his acquaintance while he was buying wheat at the round elevator in Delano, and we have yet to hear the first farmer say that Uncle Valentine took a pound of wheat. You can not do better than to vote for Mr. Eppel for sheriff of Wright county. And there is Mr. C. Bugbee for county commissioner in Wright county a man will calculated to fill that office.

Now Mr. Editor thinks I hear you say I have gone far enough in Wright county and I expect I have. But before closing up this communication would say I am somewhat interested in the named candidates and hope they may be elected, but should defeat come take it not to heart but up and at it again and next time victory may be yours. It is expected that Independence this fall will poll nearly a full vote. The town is considerably divided up on politics though, all four parties will be represented by the ballot. This fall's campaign or election reminds me of ancient history I read first many years ago it was about building the town of Babble where all the language became confused and so in our politics we are all confusion. The lillies of the field they toil not neither do they spin yet Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like unto a first class, No. one, buncombe politican.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO. Chicago, Ill

Grover Cleveland Elected.

TARIFF IS A TAX.

The People Say so at The Polls.

For the third time the voters have decided this question in the affirmative. And now in a very decided manner by giving Grover Cleveland a good majority of the electoral college. The McKinley bill did the business.

THIS morning's St. Paul Daily Globe gives the Minnesota Congressmen elected as follows:

First District.—J. A. Tawney, Rep.
Second District—J. T. McCleary, Rep.
Third District—O. M. Hall, Dem.
Fourth District—A. R. Kiefer, Rep.
Fifth District—Loren Fletcher, Rep.
Sixth District—M. R. Baldwin, Dem.
Seventh District—H. E. Boen, Peo.

THE McKinley bill pressed the pearl button and the voters done the rest.

THE table of Presidential electors on the other side of this paper was made too soon or by somebody reluctant to admit that old Grover is elected. Ohio and Indiana must be put into the Democratic column. Latest advices say that Cleveland will have 299 votes in the electoral college, Harrison 125. Weaver, 20.

TARIFF IS A TAX!

Again the people have spoke as they did four years ago, and as they did two years ago on this great national issue. And their decision is even more emphatic now than it was on former occasions. Four years ago in a political speech at Adrian, Mich., James G. Blaine was reported as saying that:

"I repeat that the question at issue in 1888 must be decided one way or the other for the generation. If the protective tariff is lost in this section do not any one of you who are careless as to your votes flatter yourself that it may be caught up next year after. You will not have an opportunity for many years to reverse your verdict of this year." "The Democrats, who are assailing the tariff, well known that, if they lose this year and the cause of the protection triumphs, they are beaten finally and for this generation. It is a joining of issues for a final combat such as has not occurred in this country on that question since 1833; and every voter within the hearing of my voice may take my word for it that whichever party triumphs this year triumphs for the whole time for which they will be actors on the political stage. See that the effect of your votes now is not confined to this year or the next, but will, in all probability, be felt for all the time throughout which you may take part in political affairs."

How prophetic his words have been proven to be by occurrences since then. At that election a popular vote of the people announced its verdict against protection by giving to Grover Cleveland 95,000 more votes than his opponent who favored protective tariff. Two years ago they again spoke by placing in the Lower House of Congress an overwhelming majority of Democrats, and now, true to their belief, and in accord with the prophecies of that Statesman James G. Blaine, who, when defeated on the issue in the first instance sought to stem the tide of popular opinion by adopting a Reciprocity clause in the McKinley bill, and whose advice was disregarded by his party, in adopting that bill, which, he said, "would not open the markets for a bushel of wheat nor a barrel of pork," they have in thunder tones, to be heard round the world, demanded, by their ballots, the administration of public affairs should be placed in the hands of that great leader in tariff reform, Grover Cleveland, and those who believe with him on this question. And as Mr. Blaine said four years ago, the question that was settled that year has for the third time been settled, and now in so decisive a manner, as, probably, to remain settled for a few years at least. For four years Grover Cleveland administered the affairs of Government before, and now will administer them for four years more in a manner becoming the President of the United States, and do all he can for the best interests of one of the grandest countries under the sun. Let all aid and not hinder him in his noble efforts to discharge his duties as the chief executive of our country to the best of his ability.

FOR the most part the campaign just closed has been an unusually clean one. As compared with former years but little "mud slinging" was indged in. This is a thing to be commended by all well meaning citizens. Most men are known for about what they are, in the communities in which they live. If a man is continually breaking laws and committing wrong acts, wherever his name goes these things are apt to be known. If a man is an honest, upright citizen wherever his name is known it is almost synonomous with these terms. For a time evil disposed persons may succeed in leading others to believe a man to be other than he is, but the time will come, when, if the honest upright christian course is persisted in, people will know for themselves, and not rely on others statements and evil disposed acts for their information concerning their neighbors. People now-a days read and talk on the topics of the day more than formerly and use their own judgment to a greater extent than was the case in years gone by; they read county papers and are familiar with men and matters pertaining to public affairs and know for themselves what is right. That is where they are not too prejudiced from taking but one side of the story and that in an exaggerated form, by partisan papers and partizan orators. In order to decide a case in court the judge and jury must hear the evidence on both sides. So in political questions of interest to every citizen of the country the voters should read and hear arguments on both sides before concluding how to vote. And the day is here when this is being done. And instead of voting as they are told by some interested person they are beginning to listen to both sides and to all sides. As a consequence many changes have been noted this year, in political views, in different parts of the country. Times are not always the same, and things look different to people, occasionally from what they had previously and as more light is obtained they are led to look with less abhorrence on the views of other parties than their own, and begin to see where their own views are not the best and to become favorably impressed with the ideas of some advanced thinker, hence the changes to reform parties and reform measures, and to men of honest purpose, and who will fearlessly administer the government as did Grover Cleveland during his last term, and as he will again for the next four years.

NOW is the time for Wright county Democrats to pull themselves together and start in to redeem the county in 1894. This way of waiting, and allowing every thing to be gobbled up by something else, kills off the party. Indifference is the thing that does the business Things are quiet until a few days before election when some little local matter is brought up and a campaign made on that, by a few. The people are made, by the abundance of literature and speeches placed in their hands, to believe that Democrats are anything that is bad, and nothing that is good, and they, instead of joining in with the party that is in accord with their convictions, often, are led into other parties, and the ranks of the Democracy are depleted. Now is the time, when all are inspired by hope, on account of the overwhelming victory of Grover Cleveland and tariff reform to begin the next campaign. Let each Democrat take some good Democratic papers and keep posted on the political and other events of the times. Let him be able to defend himself against the attacks made by others on the party of his faith and let him keep up with the history made by different men in the United States, in his own state, and especially in his own county and then he will always be ready and even anxious to cast a ballot for the right cause, and for the right man, and will not, as some did this year. remain at home and not exercise the privilege inherited by them from their forefathers who so gallantly earned it. We do not mean by this that voters should place implicit faith in all they read, but that they should read both sides of the questions and use their own judgments, and be ready at all times to vote intelligently on the principal issues of the day. If you are not already a subscriber to a good Democratic paper become one at once. Don't read only the criticisms and carpings of the opposition to Grover Cleveland, and never a good word for him, in some of our local papers. and at once condemn him for what he does, and many things that he does not do. Begin now and be ready for the next campaign.

Good Roads.

To the average farmer, as well as to people in every walk of life, good roads are very desirable. In some instances, even in our own beautiful, and wealthy county of Wright, good and well-to-do farmers have, for years, lived on as fine farms as can be seen anywhere, within four or five miles of thriving villages, where good schools and churches and other appurtanances of civilization abound, as completely shut off from them, on account of rough, hilly, or muddy, or crooked road as if they were ten or more miles away. They always dread a trip to town and make it as seldom as possible; the women folks perhaps not going to town oftener than three or four times a year when very little work judiciously done on the roads would make the trip instead of half a day's hard work, but a pleasant drive of a few minutes each way. The children could attend school more regularly, the family could go to church every Sunday. And any evening lecture or entertainment could be enjoyed. If a doctor was needed, he could be got in half the time and with less expense than over the present hard road. If in old age you wished to move to town you could drive out and look after the farm almost daily. If the farm is for sale it is much more salable on a good road. A good road convention is to be held at St. Paul, in January Our county commissioners should attend to having delegates appointed to attend and try if Wright county can't do her share towards securing good roads. We are glad to say we note lately that our roads are worked in a much more systematic manner than was the case a few years ago, the stumps are out of the way and ditches on each side of the road prevents water from standing on, or running across the road bed and greatly improves the roads. Let's have our delegation to the Good Roads convention consist of practical men who will understand and profit by their attendance to the advantage of our county.

OUR neighbor, the Eagle, has delayed her flight over the country for 24 hours in order to get complete election returns. Hurrah for Grover!

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

INDEPENDENCE, Nov 8:—The federal head of our state and nation is beginning to wag their heads and say in their hearts, we fear the success of the old Democratic party. Thirty years have elapsed since the first election of a Republican President Abraham Lincoln and to write our nations history from that time till now would consume volumns. In culture improvement and science this nation has had wonderful progress, but to outsiders, at the least, there is a possibility that we may loose some of our dear bought privileges, should strikes riots, and disorderly confusion continue to prevail.

Yesterday's storm was remainder of what shall come after but we hope yet to see some fine weather.

"TRAVELING STONES" have been found in Nevada. They are perfectly round and about the size of a walnut. They are formed of magnetic iron ore.

CANCER among lower animals is by no means as rare as at one time thought to be; but its presence in fish has never been noted until Prof. Scott of the New Zealand institute made the discovery of the disease among some American brook trout kept in one of the New Zealand ponds. Males and females were alike affected, and the diseased fish never recovered.

PEOPLE who like to read of curious coincidences will find this one interesting. A blacksmith of Potsdam was married February 27, 1882, the same day on which the present German emperor was married. Like the emperor he has had six sons, born on the same days as were the emperor's sons. But to make the story still more strange, his wife presented him with a daughter on the day that the little princes was born.

THE rosin weed, a species of silphium, and first cousin to the burdock, is a natural compass. It grows everywhere in the west, and wherever it is found in open ground, that is, in ground not shaded by trees, houses or fences, its leaves point directly north and south. This curious peculiarity has given it several names applied in different localities, and it is variously called the compass plant, the pilot weed and the polar plant.

DR. BROWN, a prominent physician of Florida, cures the worst forms of snake bites, also the bites of any poisonous insects, with the tincture of iodine, colorless, given internally in drop doses, every five minutes for the first hour; every fifteen minutes for the second hour, and then hourly doses till the patient is out of danger. He also treats all animals in the same manner, and almost invariably effects a cure, if called within four or five hours after they have been bitten. Dr. Brown also advises the same treatment for dog bites.

IN the library of Congress, which has over 650,000 bound volumes, the books will hereafter be handled almost entirely by machinery. Orders will be sent to the book stacks and books brought from them to the desk for distribution by trays suspended from endless chains, the latter being made to travel by means of an engine in the basement. The mechanism will be noiseless and invisible also, the carriers going beneath the floor of the great central reading room to and fro between the librarian's desk and the book stacks.

THE funny cashier of the First National bank of St. John, Kas., did not believe that girls could walk much except on Brussels carpet, so he offered as a bluff to wager $15 that Misses Minnie Benfore, Rose Woolley and Minnie Potter could not walk from Stafford to St. John, a distance of ten miles, in four hours. The girls accepted, rode to Stafford on the cars and walked back, escorted by the Stafford brass band, and were received at home by the St. John band with time to spare. The cashier paid the girls in silver dollars and gave them a grand banquet in the bargain.

Summary of the States.

The following is the Chicago Tribune's summary of the result in various states from returns received up to 3 a. m:

Indiana—Returns are too meager to base any estimate of the result upon. Gains are reported for Harrison in Marion county, but the state is in doubt upon all questions involved.

Connecticut is in doubt. The democrats claim the state by 2,000 and the republicans make no claims.

Iowa is republican by about 10,000 plurality. Democrats do not claim the state. No figures are received from congressional districts.

Wisconsin is reported to have gone for Cleveland by 10,000 plurality.

The result in Kansas is quite uncertain, with indications pointing to the success of the Weaver electoral ticket. Republicans claim the state, however, and it will require the complete returns to decide. Simpson has probably been defeated. Other congressional results are in doubt.

Vermont gives Harrison a plurality. The vote on both sides has fallen off.

California election judges found difficulty in supplying enough ballot boxes to supply the demand.

Colorado, while casting a close vote, has probably chosen Harrison electors, as also have Montana and Oregon.

Maine will give Harrison a plurality of about 14,000.

Idaho is close, with both fusionists and republicans claiming a victory.

Illinois—The indications are that Cleveland will have a plurality in Cook county of 25,000 to 30,000 and Altgeld about the same. The country returns, however, generally indicate republican gains and democratic losses. The state is in doubt, with the chances in favor of Cleveland and Altgeld. The large counties have not reported yet.

Michigan—Indications are that the republicans will elect four presidential electors at large.

Missouri is democratic by at least 30,000. Stone, dem., for governor, beats Warner, rep., about 17,000. Fourteen out of fifteen democratic congressmen are elected.

New Jersey's plurality for Cleveland is about 7,000. The gubernatorial contest is in doubt.

Ohio has gone republican by a plurality slightly less than the 21,511 given Gov. McKinley. The state ticket has received about the same support. Congressional returns indicate the election of 14 republicans and 7 democrats.

New York gives Cleveland a plurality of 85,000. The democrats made gains over 1888 in the country districts as well as in New York and Kings county. The assembly, which elects a United States senator, is believed to favor the republicans.

Rhode Island cast the largest vote in its history, giving Harrison 2,500 plurality. The new state loan is approved.

South Dakota's electoral vote is claimed for Weaver. The republican state ticket is probably elected.

North Dakota has probably chosen Harrison electors by 1,000 and the republican state ticket is elected by small pluralities.

Washington has probably chosen Harrison electors, but the chances are that Snively, dem., is elected governor.

Nevada was swept by the Weaver electors, the silverites carrying everything before them, including the legislature.

Oregon has chosen Harrison electors if the present ratio in the count continues.

Massachusetts has reelected Gov. William Russell, dem., by a plurality of 3,000. The rest of the republican state ticket has been elected. Henry Cabot Lodge is having a close run for congress.

Pennsylvania has given Harrison 65,000 plurality, and the congressional districts are nearly all republican by a large majority.

Kentucky went democratic by about 25,000. Nine democrats are returned to congress. The 10th district is in doubt; a republican was elected in the 11th district.

Florida was carried by the democrats. The people's party did not cut much of a figure. Both congressional districts elected democrats.

Georgia elected a full democratic congressional delegation.

New York.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—Cleveland has swept New York. The only question now is what his plurality in the state will be. At midnight the democratic national committee was claiming over 25,000 plurality. This is based upon the belief that New York city will give 70,000 plurality in round numbers and Kings county about 18,000. The steady reports of the republican loss throughout the state indicate that outside of these two counties the republican plurality will be reduced to at least 65,000, thus making the democratic majority in that state at least 23,000. It may be more and it may be less, but the fact of Cleveland's victory in New York is no longer in dispute. Tammany proved itself loyal and made a wonderful fight. Kings county rolled up a majority as large as any democrat expected—an increase of 6,000 over 1888.

The whole democratic county ticket has been elected by pluralities ranging from 60,000 upward. In many doubtful districts the republican candidates for congress and assembly have been defeated by the same methods that were resorted to in order to roll up the unprecedented vote for Cleveland.

Kings county (Brooklyn) has gone democratic by 30,000 plurality. The organization was in complete charge of the polls and of the entire election machinery. The largest democratic claim was 20,000. The result surprised both parties.

The democratic counties of New York, Kings, Queens and Richmond, south of the Harlem, give Cleveland 112,000. Deducting Suffolk's 700 for Harrison leaves 111,000. The most extravagant democratic claim was 100,000. The decrease in the republican pluralities above the Harlem from 85,000 in 1888 to 57,000 Tuesday completed the rout, leaving Cleveland nearly 55,000 plurality in the state.

The democrats carry every congressional district south of the Harlem, although the republicans gain 3 in the entire state.

The democratic landslide extended to the assembly. The majority in the lower house is so large that a democrat will succeed Frank Hiscock in the United States senate. Thus for the first time in many years New York will have two democratic senators in the higher branch of congress.

New York's Congressman.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—The following congressmen are probably elected in this state: First district, James W. Covert; 2d, John W. Clancy; 3d, Joseph H. Hendrix; 4th, William J. Coombs; 5th, John H. Graham; 6th, Thomas M. Magner; 7th, Franklin Bartlett; 8th, Edward J. Dunphy; 9th, T. J. Campbell; 10th, Daniel E. Sickles; 11th, Amos J. Cummings; 12th, Bourke Cockran; 13th, J. Dewitt Warner; 14, John R. Fellows; 15th, Ashbel Fitch; 16th, William Ryan; 17th, Henry Racon; 18th, Isaac N. Cox; 19th, Charles D. Haines; 20th, Charles Tracy, all democrats; 21st, Erastus T. Beadle, rep.; 22d, Newton M. Curtis, rep.; 23d, John M. Weaver, rep., 24th, Charles A. Chickering, rep.; 25th, Henry W. Bentley, dem.; 26th, George W. Ray, rep.; 27th, James J. Belden, rep.; 28th, Sereno E. Payne, rep.; 29th, Charles W. Gillette, rep.; 30th, James W. Wadsworth, rep.; 31st, John Van Voorhis, rep.; 32d, Daniel N. Lockwood, dem.; 33d, Charles Daniels, rep.; 34th, Warren B. Hooker, dem.

Illinois.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—At 2 o'clock this morning returns had been received from 513 of the 693 precincts of the city of Chicago. The aggregate vote was: Cleveland, 96,506; Harrison, 75,188; Cleveland's plurality, 21,318. A smaller number of precincts give Altgeld 87,833; Fifer, 69,289; Altgeld's plurality, 18,549.

At 10 o'clock Tuesday evening Ben T. Cable sent out telegrams to the chairmen of the different state committees that Cleveland had carried Illinois by 10,000 plurality. The large gains of Cleveland in the city and Cook county probably insure him the electoral vote of the state. There is hardly a possibility for Gov. Fifer and the candidates for state officers to pull through.

The chances are somewhat better for the candidates for congressmen at large but they are not hopeful. It is probable that the democrats have elected congressmen in the 2d, 3d and 4th districts. J. Frank Aldrich is probably elected in the 1st district. The reports from the other districts of the state are too meager at this time to base any calculations on.

Reports from all parts of the state indicate that the democrats will control both branches of the legislature. There is no reason to doubt that the democrats have elected all their county officers, except the five commissioners from the country towns. They have also elected their candidates for judges of the superior and of the circuit courts. The majority of the head of the ticket is so large that scratching in favor of individual republican candidates will hardly save any of them.

The Germans throughout the state, as well as in Chicago, voted for Cleveland and for Altgeld.

As far as can be ascertained at this writing the consultutional amendment providing that the legislature may submit two amendments to the state constitution to a vote of the people at the same election is probably beaten because of the failure of the voters to express themselves on that question by marking their tickets.

Indiana Very Close.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 9, 3 a. m.—The reports are not so encouraging for the republicans as they were early in the night. Their ratio of gains has dropped from seven to five. This county (Marion) is claimed by the democrats by 2,700. If their estimate is anywhere near correct Harrison cannot possibly carry the state.

Returns up to midninht show seventy precincts out of 2,999 outside of the city gave Harrison 7,247; Cleveland, 6,396. The same precincts in 1890 gave Trussler—rep., 6,404; Matthews, dem., 9,537, a republican gain of 467. The result is regarded as close.

The first reports were wholly encouraging to the democrats, but after the vote by precincts began to come in regularly it showed a gain of a little less than 7 to the precinct for Harrison. The comparison is made with the vote of 1890, when the democrats carried the state by 19,579. This comparison is necessary because the precincts throughout the state have been changed since 1888. There are in the state 2,925 precincts, and a gain for Harrison of 7 to the precinct will give him the state by 896 plurality.

Chairman Taggart says that he will not concede the state to the republicans. He says that basing estimates on figures he has received he thinks Cleveland will have a plurality of 2,500 in the state. The indications are that the race is so nearly even that it will take almost a complete vote to tell who has carried the state. The republicans claim to have gained a congressman in the 10th district. Only scattering figures as to the legislative ticket have been received, but it looks as though the democrats will have the body by a reduced majority.

Ohio Strongly Republican.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 9.—The returns up to midnight indicate the election of the entire republican state ticket by a majority over the democrats of not less than 30,000, according to the claims of the republican committee, and of 20,000, according to the concessions of the democrats.

The following state ticket is elected: Secretary of state, S. M. Taylor; judges of supreme court, William T. Spear and Jacob F. Burket; clerk of supreme court, Josiah B. Allen; member board of public works, Edwin L. Lybarger.

It appears that the republican congressional gerrymander has gone through, though toward the close of the campaign there was a fright in two or three of the districts. In the 1st Congressman Bellamy Storer was scratched on account of the Catholic question. His wife is a late convert to Catholicism, and through her influence, it is said, Mr. Storer was induced to interview to the effect that he would encourage appropriations for Catholic Indian schools. The open support of some of the Catholic priests of this city also came into the canvass. However, it counted both ways, and he was elected. In the 21st district O. J. Hodge was threatened by opposition from workingmen and the popularity of the present representative, Tom Johnson. There was a good deal of democratic talk of reelecting Congressman M. D. Harter in the 14th district, but the Foraker candidate, E. G. Johnson, has no doubt pulled through. In Hamilton county Harrison and the state ticket has about 5,000 majority, while the Foraker-Cox county ticket seems to have gone through by about one-half that majority, except that the democratic candidates for auditor and coroner are elected by small majorities.

Few Figures from Iowa.

DES MOINES, Ia., Nov. 9.—The State Register claims Harrison will have a plurality of 25,000 in Iowa, and that the republicans will elect nine or ten of the eleven congressmen and entire state ticket. Chairman Blythe feels confident the republicans will carry the state by a good plurality, but gives no figures.

Weaver Ahead in Nebraska.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 9.—At 1 a. m. returns from less than 200 voting precincts in Nebraska out of 1,633 indicate the success of Weaver electors by 3,500 plurality in a total vote of about 220,000. Crounse, rep., for governor is probably elected. The balance of the state ticket is divided between republicans and independents. The republicans probably get only one out of six congressmen. The legislature is probably equally divided between the three parties.

Michigan.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 9.—A heavy vote has been polled throughout Michigan. The latest returns indicate the election of four Cleveland electors and of Rich, republican candidate for governor, the latter by a majority of 20,000.

Particular interest centered in the election in Michigan from the fact that for the first time presidential electors were chosen there by districts instead of by the vote of the entire state. The electors at large were selected by districts formed by splitting the state into east and west halves, and the remaining electors by congressional districts. This plan was the outcome of the democratic and patrons of industry landside two years ago, by which the combined forces gave the Michigan republicans their first complete defeat in a generation.

Other interesting features of the Wolverine election were the use for the first time in the entire state of the Australian ballot for a presidential election, and the vote on the proposition of calling a constitutional convention.

Missouri.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 9.—The democrats have carried Missouri for Cleveland by 30,000, although sanguine republicans are claiming the state for Warner, rep., for governor by a bare plurality. Stone, dem., will probably have a plurality of 10,000. St. Louis is republican by a majority of 10,000 and Kansas City is democratic. The congressmen elected are: First district, Hatch, dem.; 2d, Hall, dem.; 3d, Dockery, dem.; 4th, Barnes, dem.; 5th, Tarsney, dem.; 6th, De Armond, dem.; 7th, Heard, dem.; 8th, Bland, dem.; 9th, Clark, dem., probably by a small majority over Morsey, rep.; 10th, Barthold, rep.; 11th, O'Neil, dem.; 12th, Cobb, dem.; 13th, Ryan, dem.; 14th, Arnold, dem.; 15th, Morgan, dem. There is no doubt about the selection of 13 democrats in Missouri out of 15. Morsey, rep., has a chance in the 9th and Barthold is sure of the 10th in St. Louis. The legislature will be clearly democratic, with slight republican gains.

In Wisconsin.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 9, 2 a. m.—This state will give Benjamin Harrison and John C. Spooner from 5,000 to 7,000 plurality, according to the latest returns and on a most conservative estimate. Over 70 towns in the state have been heard from, and they show a net democratic gain over the vote of 1888 of 521. If this is not increased on the remaining towns the republicans would carry the state by 15,000. Allowing for a larger increase, it is very probable that the republican plurality will not fall below 6,000. The towns heard from are widely scattered and embrace all sections. John C. Spooner was up with his ticket, even in the Lutheran localities, and Peck was behind in many precincts. Cleveland's total vote will exceed that of Peck.

Chairman Ed C. Wall still claims the state for Cleveland and Peck by 13,000. Henry C. Payne claims it by from 6,000 to 10,000 for the republicans. Returns coming in very slowly. The democrats doubtless get all the congressmen except in the 1st, 3d and 10th districts, though G. B. Shaw, rep., of the Eau Claire district, may get in.

Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 9.—While the official count is progressing slowly throughout the city, owing to the complicated nature of the ballot under the new system, there is every indication that the Baker ballot law has met with a decided by favorable reception. The vote polled is unusually heavy and the republicans carry everything by the usual majority. On the state ticket it is generally conceded that Gen. William A. Lilly and Maj. Alexander McDowell, republican candidates for congressmen at large, and John Dean, for supreme court, will be given a heavy majority in this city. Comparatively little cutting was done in most districts, as voters found that a straight ticket was easier to prepare under the "reform" law.

In the five congressional districts to which Philadelphia is divided it is conceded that the republicans have elected four of their candidates, as follows: First district, H. H. Bingham, reelected; 2d district, Charles O'Neill, reelected; 4th district, John E. Reyburn, reelected; 5th district, A. C. Harmer, reelected. It was in the 3d district, formerly represented by Samuel J. Randall, that the greatest interest centered. Though democratic in the ratio of 5 to 1, it is acknowledged that the regular democratic nominee, Capt. W. W. Ker, has been defeated by the present incumbent, Congressmen William McAleer, who, after being defeated for the democratic renomination, was placed on an independent ticket and also nominated by the republicans.

Looks Like Weaver.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 9.—The Times' Topeka (Kan.) bulletin says that Kansas has given a majority for the Weaver electors, but that the republicans have saved their state ticket.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 9.—Partial returns from the 7th congressional district, now represented by Jerry Simpson, indicate that he has been defeated for reelection. The cities of Wichita, Newton, Wellington and Nickerson have given majorities for Long, rep.

Returns from other congressional districts are too meager even for an estimate. The republicans at the central committee headquarters claim that the legislative ticket is in doubt, but admit that, with the people's party holdovers, the people's party will probably have a majority on joint ballot.

Kentucky.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 9.—The democratic victory in Kentucky was a most sweeping one. The weather was crisp, with sunshine the whole day, and a heavy vote was polled. Owing to the secret ballot law, which went into effect in this state Tuesday, the returns are coming in slowly. It is estimated that Cleveland will have 35,000 majority.

Kentucky sends 10 democrats to congress and 1 republican—in the 5th district. Caruth, dem., was reelected by 5,000 majority over Wilson, rep. In the 2d district Ellis, dem., was reelected over Pettit, populist, by a majority of about 2,000. In the 11th district Silas Adams, rep., defeated J. R. Hindman, dem., by about 2,000, a democratic gain of about 1,500.

The other successful candidates—all democrats—are: First district, Stone reelected; 3d district, Goodnight reelected; 4th district, Montgomery reelected; 6th district, Asberry, successor to Dickerson; 7th district, Breckenridge reelected; 8th district, McCreary reelected; 9th district, Paynter reelected; 10th district, M. C1ist successor to Kendall.

In Massachusetts.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 8.—The indications at midnight are that Cleveland has carried Rhode Island by 1,200 and New Hampshire by 1,000. The returns from Massachusetts cities and towns are coming in very slowly and at a late hour, with two-thirds of Boston's precincts in and less than one-eighth of the towns heard from, Russell is elected by 2,000 majority. He has run away ahead of his ticket and without question the republicans have carried the other state offices. The democrats at this hour are assured of four congressmen, with favorable reports in three other districts. Harrison's plurality has been cut down to less than half in the state, and on the ratio of returns in it will not exceed 10,000. Lodge, rep., has been reelected to congress, but his plurality is figured at 3,000, which is 2,000 less than two years ago.

Connecticut.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 9.—Clinton B. Davis, chairman democratic state committee, claims Cleveland has carried the state by 3,000, that the state is democratic and the house divided, while the gubernatorial vote is doubtful.

South Dakota.

PIERRE, S. D., Nov. 9.—The ballot in this state is two yards long, and it will be noon today before anything definite is known. The democrats in this and adjoining counties voted for the Weaver electors, and it is apparent that the populists have carried the state by from 3,000 to 5,000. John A. Pickler, rep., and William Lardner, populists, are apparently elected representatives. Otto Poemiller, chairman of the democratic committee, concedes the election of the republican state ticket by 8,000 plurality, but claims the state for Weaver by 5,000 plurality.

Heavy Vote in Colorado.

DENVER, Col., Nov. 9.—The clear, cold weather brought an unusually heavy vote in the residence portions of the city, while the vote in the business sections was correspondingly light. Indications are that the republicans will have a small plurality on electors, while the state and county and legislative tickets will have from 3,000 to 5,000 plurality.

Arkansas.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 9.—The election in this state as far as heard from passed off quietly and a large vote was polled. The increase in this city over the September election is at least 20 per cent. The combination electoral ticket in opposition to the democrats was unmercifully scratched in this city. A large number of populists refused to vote for the 4 republican electors. Among this class of voters can be mentioned Charles E. Cunningham, who ran for vice president with Streeter four years ago. The republicans supported the ticket to a man and have probably carried the county. The September democratic majority will be greatly reduced in the state.

Alabama.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 9.—Alabama is safe for Cleveland by 25,000 plurality. The indications are that the democrats have carried all the congressional districts.

Louisiana.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 9.—Enough returns are in to show that Cleveland has carried the state by 50,000 majority. All the democratic congressional candidates are elected.

Virginia.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 9.—The state democratic committee claims from 40,000 to 50,000 majority in Virginia, and according to returns from one-half of the state its estimate is probably nearly correct. The vote is not as large as in 1888. The republicans remained away from the polls in large numbers. Weaver gets about 5,000 in the state and Bidwell about 3,000. The democrats appear to have elected all their candidates for congress.

Tennessee.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 9.—The democrats elect eight of the ten congressmen in this state. The vote will fall 50,000 short of 1888, owing to the Australian ballot system, the law requiring payment of poll tax as a prerequisite for voting.

Maryland.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 9.—Maryland is sure for Cleveland. The count of the votes only remains to give the plurality for the democratic candidate and his majority over all. The republicans have redeemed the 6th congressional district—Wellington, rep., having a plurality of about 500. The returns also indicate a decreased plurality for the democratic candidates in the 1st and 5th districts. Maryland's congressional delegation will stand: Democrats, 5; republicans, 1.

Mississippi.

JACKSON, Miss. Nov. 9.—Reports from every district in Mississippi have been received in sufficient number to assure beyond a shadow of doubt that a full democratic delegation will be returned to congress and by majorities that are unexpectedly large. It is claimed here that Cleveland electors will receive 50,000 over the republicans, populists and prohibitionists.

Texas.

GALVESTON, Tex., Nov. 9.—The democratic vote will probably not exceed that of 1888, when Cleveland's plurality was 180,000.

Nevada.

RENO, Nev., Nov. 9.—It is conceded by all parties that Weaver carries Nevada by 1,500.

Washington.

TACOMA, Wash., Nov. 9.—There is no chance of forming a definite estimate how the state of Washington will cast its vote, as practically no returns will be received before Wednesday. Republican presidential electors are probably chosen, but it looks as if Snively, dem., will be the next governor.

Montana.

HELENA, Mont., Nov. 9.—The Australian system makes the count slow. The weather has been fine, with a heavy vote. Indications are that Harrison has carried the state by a small plurality. Richards, governor; Botkin, lieutenant governor, and Rotwill, secretary of state, on the republican ticket are elected. The legislature is safely republican and will elect a republican senator. Helena and Butte lead in the capital contest.

Georgia.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Nov. 9.—Richmond county will give Black, dem., nearly 9,000 majority over Tom Watson of "Where-am-I-at" celebrity. Returns from other districts indicate that the democrats will carry every district, and that Georgia will send a solid democratic delegation to the next congress. Third-party candidates were run in every district but were snowed under. Speaker Crisp is reelected by an increased majority.

Virginia.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 9.—Official and semi-official returns from thirty-two counties and cities, including Petersburg, Norfolk, Lynchburg and Alexandria, show democratic gains of about 12,000. Cleveland's majority in the state in 1888 was 1,553. The city of Petersburg gives Cleveland a majority of 1,512, a democratic gain of 1,673.

South Carolina.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Nov. 8.—With the possible exception of the 7th district, South Carolina returns a solid democratic delegation to congress, and chooses nine Cleveland electors. The congressional delegation will stand as follows: First, W. H. Brawley, reelected; 2d, W. J. Talbert; 3d, A. C. Latimer; 4th, George W. Shell, reelected; 5th, T. J. Strait; 6th, John L. McLaurir. In the 7th district the candidates are Gen. E. W. Moise, dem., and G. W. Murray (colored), rep.

North Carolina.

WILMINGTON, N. C., Nov. 9.—The result of the election in this state shows a sweeping democratic victory on both state and national tickets. The state ticket ran ahead, but Cleveland's majority will be very large. S. B. Alexander, dem., is reelected to congress from this (the 6th) district, by an overwhelming majority over Maynard, the third party candidate.

Florida.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 9.—The state democratic executive committee says that Cleveland's majority in Florida will be between 25,000 and 30,000. Both congressional districts are democratic by large majorities.

New Jersey.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Nov. 9.—Throughout the state of New Jersey the poll of votes was very heavy and the amount of scratching was unprecedented. The voters of both parties, as a rule, voted the head of their ticket straight, but for governor and other candidates the vote was mixed and confusing. The electoral vote is conceded to be for Cleveland.

Oregon.

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 9. — Seventy-three precincts in Oregon give Harrison 6,108; Cleveland, 1,596; Weaver, 1,340. If this ratio is maintained throughout the state Harrison's plurality will reach 8,000.

North Dakota.

BISMARCK, N. D., Nov. 9.—North Dakota for the first time voted under the Australian system and it has made returns exceedingly slow to get in. Returns from counties so far indicate that the Harrison electors have at least 1,000 majority. Johnson, rep., is returned to congress and on joint ballot the republicans will have the legislature. The republican state ticket has won by a small majority.

Wyoming.

LARAMIE, Wyo., Nov. 9.—The republican state central committee concedes the state to the democrats.

Idaho.

BOISE, Idaho, Nov. 9.—Both fusionists and republicans claim the state. Returns are meager. The delay is on account of the Australian ballot. Sweet, rep., is elected to congress without a doubt.

Maine's Plurality.

AUGUSTA, Me., Nov. 9.—At 11:30 returns indicate a republican plurality of 14,000. The plurality in 1888 was 23,358.

Minnesota.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 9.—Returns received up to 1 o'clock are too fragmentary to give the reliable result. They come from petty precincts in all parts of the state. It is safe to assume that the state has gone for Harrison and that Nelson is elected governor by the republicans. The populists' vote is estimated at 40,000.

LOST IN THE ARCTIC.

A Whaling Vessel Crushed by an Ice Floe and Thirty-Five of Her Crew Killed or Drowned.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 8.—The whaling bark Helen Mar, while at work in the Arctic, was crushed by an ice floe October 6 and thirty-five of her crew, including Capt. Thaxter, were either killed by the ice or drowned. News of the disaster was brought to this port Sunday by the steam whaler Beluga, which aided in rescuing the only survivors, five in number, including Fifth Mate Ward, a boat steerer, the cook Ocey Kershaw, and two sailors.

The Mar had taken five whales before October 6, a catch considered fair. On the morning of the 6th a seventh was captured and the bark drawn alongside for the purpose of cutting up the catch. The men were all engaged and did not notice the grinding of an ice floe to the east of them. A moment after the disaster came with a rush, overturning the bark upon the whale and the men at work on it. Vessel and boats were crushed into splinters, and the men who were thrown under the ship were either drowned or killed. The survivors managed to grasp portions of the main mast and were carried over on the ice floe as it passed the vessel, the fragments of which, with the dead sailors, were buried under tons of ice. The half-frozen sailors clung to their support for forty-eight hours before they could attract aid. Finally their signals were seen by the steam whaler Oeca, which sent a crew to their rescue. They were removed from the floe only after heroic exertions.

ODESSA, Nov. 8.—Furious storms have been raging during the last week over the Black sea. Eight vessels have been lost and the crews of three steamers drowned. Such stormy weather has not been seen on the Black sea for many months and much distress has been occasioned among sailors and fishermen, both on account of the loss of life and the number of vessels afraid to venture out to sea.

BROKE THROUGH A TRESTLE.

One Man Killed and Several Injured in a Train Accident.

HAZLETON, Pa., Nov. 8.—A terrible accident occurred at Honeybrook Monday by which one man was instantly killed, two fatally injured and four others dangerously wounded. The men were employed by Crawford & Dugan and were engaged on the "stripping" at No. 10 colliery. At noon the men left their work, intending to eat dinner. A train of loaded cars was passing and they boarded it. The road runs over a trestle which spans a deep ravine, and when the train reached the middle of it the timbers gave way, precipitating the cars and men to the bottom. The loud roaring noise of cracking timbers attracted the attention of other workmen, who set to work rescuing the unfortunate men. Michael Korko was dead when found. His body had been terribly crushed and every bone was broken. The other victims were wedged between the cars and debris, but after hard work all were extricated.

EDUCATING THE NEGROES.

Work of the Freedman's Aid and Southern Education Society.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 8.—An important meeting of distinguished Methodist divines, comprising eighteen bishops and others of the general committee of the Freedman's Aid and Southern Education society of the denomination, is being held in Grace church. The reports of the year show the receipts to have been $367,751 and the expenditures $363,613, leaving a balance of $4,138. The society has an indebtedness of $164,580. Under the society's direction there are in the south 44 schools, 345 teachers, 9,065 students and property valued at $1,895,893. Manual training and domestic economy are features of the work. Since 1865 the society has expended

A PHILOSOPHER.

Zack Bumsted uster flosserfize
About the ocean and the skies;
An' gab an' gas fum morn till noon
About the other side the moon;
An' 'bout the natur of the place
Ten miles be-end the end of space.
An' if his wife sh'd ask the crank
Ef he wouldn' kinder try to yank
Hisself out doors an' get some wood
To make her kitchen fire good,
So she o'd bake her beans an' pies,
He'd say: "I've gotter flosserfize."

An' then he'd set an' flosserfize
About the natur an' the size
Of angels' wings, an' think, an' gawp,
An' wonder how they made 'em flop.
He wondered ef you bored a hole
Right through the yerth fum pole to pole,
An' then sh'd trip an' stumble through,
The best thing you had oughter do.
He'd calkerlate how long a skid
'Twould take to move the sun, he did,
An' if the skid wuz strong an' prime,
It couldn' be moved to supper time.
An', w'en his wife 'ud ask the lout
Ef he wouldn' kinder waltz about
An' take a rag an' shoo the flies.
He'd say: "I've gotter flosserfize."

An' then he'd set an flosserfize
'Bout schemes for fencing in the skies,
Then lettin' out the lots to rent
So's he o'd make an honest cent,
An' ef he'd find it pooty tough
To burry cash fer fencin' stuff;
An' if 'twere best to take his wealth
An' go to Europe for his health,
Or save his cash till he'd enough

Then, ef his wife sh'd ask the gump
Ef he wouldn't kinder try to hump

So she o'd come an' sweep the floor,
He'd look at her with mournful eyes
An' say: "I've gotter flosserfize."

An' so he'd set an' flosserfize,

He'd never move nor lift his laigs
An' never stir nor try to rise
But say: "I gotter flosserfize."

An' so he'd set an' flosserfize

Then, ef his wife sh'd ask the gawk
Ef he wouldn' kinder try to walk

The Clew That Led to a Big Criminal's Arrest.

How a Louisville Detective Aided English Officers in Catching a Bank Robber —He Jumped His Bail in America for Larger Game Abroad.

The release recently of McDonnell and Hill, who were the accomplices of the famous Bidwell in robbing the Bank of England of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, has a local interest, says the Louisville Courier-Journal. McDonnell was once in this city, and he will never cease regretting that visit, for it was by his trip to Louisville that he and his partners in that one hundred and fifty thousand dollar transaction were traced and arrested.

One day in the spring of 1871, "Yankee" Bligh, then chief of detectives, was notified that a bank in this city had been robbed of one thousand dollars by a raised check. Capt. Bligh went to work on the case himself. He first went to the bank and asked to see the check. One glance at the slip of paper and he was immensely interested in the case. It was a beautiful piece of work from the detective's point of view, one that showed the difference between the true criminal artist and the clumsy novice. Capt. Bligh secured an accurate description of the man who had taken the check to the bank. He was soon looking for a tall, elegant gentleman with an eastern accent and the manner of a man of the world. The man whom he wanted could speak French, Spanish and Italian, was an accomplished musician, was devoted to the arts, found great enjoyment in the dead languages and, above all and beyond everything, was of an intensely benevolent turn of mind. Detective Bligh hunted high and low for his accomplished stranger, and finally caught him. His culture found him out. The man said he was Mr. McDonnell, of New York city. He was living in a small room near the heart of the city. He protested in words of three syllables against the detective's blunt accusation, but was marched off to jail, nevertheless. He said it was all a cruel mistake, but Capt. Bligh soon had as good a case as he wanted against the "suspect."

Hardly had the doors of the jail closed behind McDonnell than he sent out for lawyers. He engaged the late Martin Bijur and W. L. Jackson, Jr. He told them he had plenty of money in New York city. Telegraphic communications with that city showed that this was true. His friends sent word to spare no expense in getting McDonnell out. The case came up in court in a few days, and the cultured stranger, whose injured air seemed born of innocence, was held over for the rather low bond of one thousand dollars. The money was furnished right away and the court issued an order to release the man.

"Yankee" Bligh saw through the scheme with the quickness of a flash. McDonnell was going to jump his bail. Liberty for $1,000 was as cheap as dirt. The detective had already shrewdly gathered an idea that McDonnell was a great criminal, who was "wanted" in many places. He felt pretty certain that the check raiser's presence was desired in Cincinnati. He asked McDonnell to remain over until the next evening at eight o'clock, so that Detective Larry Hazen, of Cincinnati, could come down and have a look at him. This he of the culture, many languages, and proneness to raise checks agreed to do. He said he wanted to dispel all suspicion, to face every charge against his honesty. While he was waiting for the arrival of the Cincinnati detective Capt. Bligh took his photograph. McDonnell thought this was carrying the vigilance of the law to excess, but still his objection did not go beyond that calm, hurt air.

McDonnell had been placed in the old First street station, which was where the Wayfarers' Rest now is, to await the arrival of the detective. Just before eight o'clock the next evening Mr. Bijur arrived at the station, and preparations for McDonnell's departure were made. But instead of the Cincinnati detective a dispatch came. Mr. Hazen wired that he could not be here until the next day. Capt. Bligh tried in every way he could to get the prisoner to stay over until next day. But Mr. Bijur produced the order of the court, said his client had already been too obliging, and insisted on the prisoner's release. So the door of the cell was opened, and Mr. Bijur and McDonnell walked out of the station house. They had not gone a half a square until McDonnell stopped suddenly with the exclamation:

"I forgot something."

"You had better not go back there," said the cautious lawyer.

"But I must," rejoined the check raiser. "I want to make a little girl who brought me my food, a present."

"Let me have your present and I will give it to the child," suggested Mr. Bijur.

"Well, that will do," was the answer. "Hand her this ten-dollar bill with my compliments. Tell her Mr. McDonnell will never forget her kindness. I do love little children. Their honest simplicity charms me." This is told because it gives a perfect illustration of McDonnell's style of generosity.

The two men walked over to Fourth and Market streets. There Mr. Bijur left his client, who boarded a car for the Fourteenth street station. A square below the car halted, and a minute later the burly form of a large man dropped into the seat beside McDonnell. He was Detective Bligh.

"I am going to take you back," said Bligh.

"But, my dear sir," somewhat warmly replied McDonnell, "you impose on good nature. I am a free man until my case is called."

"Come along," was Capt. Bligh's answer, as he pulled the car bell and helped the man off. He took McDonnell by dark streets back to the station, where he remained until Hazen arrived. The Cincinnati man did not recognize the check raiser as anyone that he wanted, so Capt. Bligh had to let the man go, though he did it very reluctantly. McDonnell left the city, and, of course, never returned.

Capt. Bligh was very anxious to keep trace of McDonnell. He soon found a way. The check raiser had left his trunk behind. The detective knew it would be sent for and resolved to keep a close eye on it. True enough, in a week or two an order come that the trunk be shipped by the Adams express to New York city. Mr. Bligh sent the number of the package and a description of the trunk to the Pinkertons, in New York city. "Find who receives this trunk and where it goes," he ordered. The Pinkertons "spotted" the trunk, and found that it was taken by a man who did not answer McDonnell's description from the office of the express company to a steamer bound for England. Capt. Bligh was notified of these facts. The he knew that McDonnell was in England.

He had a number of McDonnell's photographs made, and sent them to England. One he directed to Scotland Yard.

As Capt. Bligh afterward stated, he felt by intuition that McDonnell was an extraordinary criminal, and it was from this feeling that he took such precautions. None of the English detectives even sent a "thank you" for the photographs and the warning.

About two years afterward the whole world was startled by the announcement that the Bank of England had been robbed of an immense sum of money. Who were the guilty men? Hundreds of detectives were put to work on the case. For a time no progress was made. One day a Scotland Yard detective happened to recall the photograph which some "backwoods sleuthhound," as he put it, had sent to the office. The picture had been carelessly thrown aside, after probably being the butt of some heavy English joke. By rare good luck the photograph was found. It was taken by the detective, who thought, however, that he would not be paid for his pains, to the cashier who had paid out the money on the forged checks.

"That is the man," exclaimed the Bank of England official when he saw the photograph. Then the world was flooded with those photographs. McDonnell and his "partners" were captured. McDonnell was caught through the photographs and Capt. Bligh's accurate description of his person and his habits, and the check raiser's arrest led to that of his "pals." Singularly enough, they were caught in different parts of the world, having separated as soon as the crime was committed.

The Bank of England, when it learned of Capt. Bligh's part in the case, sent him a check—not one of McDonnell's—for fifty pounds and a letter of thanks. The detective prized this letter very highly, and his family still have it in their possession. Capt. Bligh regarded McDonnell as the "smoothest," shrewdest criminal he ever came in contact with. And "Yankee" met a good many in his lifetime.

HE KNEW WHEN TO QUIT.

Pat, as Usual, Was Equal to the Occasion.

A farmer in Greene county, Pennsylvania, hired as his assistant during a busy season a recent importation from the Emerald Isle.

The young man was engaged one evening and at the breakfast table next morning his employer said:

"Well, Pat, have you had enough breakfast?"

"Oi have, sorr," replied Pat.

"Then now pitch in and eat your dinner," said the farmer, "for we are going to work to-day at the far end of the farm, and we won't have time to come to the house to eat dinner."

Pat resumed his eating, and when he stopped his employer asked:

"Have you had enough dinner?"

"Yis, sorr."

"Well, we must put in a good long day to-day. So you had better eat your supper, too, before we start."

Pat went to work again at the eatables, and finally laid down his knife and fork.

"Had enough supper?" asked the farmer.

"Yis."

"Then now we will go to work."

"Worruk, is it?" said Pat, with well feigned surprise.

"Of course," replied his employer.

"O, no," replied Pat, with a shake of his head. "Where I kim from we never worruk after supper, sorr."—William Henry Siviter, in Life.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

THE FARM WORKSHOP.

Valuable Hints and Suggestions on an Important Subject.

No farmer who has not a good workshop has any idea of the service one would render him. There is no use trying to keep tools if you have no place to put them. When they are scattered around barn, wood-house or driving-shed, they soon become spoiled from rust. It does not require an expert blacksmith to do much of the blacksmithing, or a carpenter to do many of the jobs about the farm. I would not advise any person to lay out very much money in a workshop, but I think every progressive farmer ought to have something of the sort.

The accompanying diagram illustrates in a rough way the shop we have on our farm. It is a substantial though inexpensive structure. We did all of the building ourselves in a slack time of the year hence we did not lay out much money on it. It is built of concrete wall 11 inches thick and 6½ feet high. It has eight sides, therefore it is very near round. The advantages of having it octagonal shape are there is no waste room in it from square corners; besides the roof you will have on it is the strongest that you can build, and it requires no girths or stays in any way, as it is braced in itself, and it is impossible for it to spread, as the sheeting makes it impossible, besides the wall is much stronger and will do much thinner, it being braced or bound all around. The sides are each 10 feet long on the outside, and being 11 inches thick, makes it 22 feet from side to opposite side (diameter) inside. The main expense is the roof, which requires six squares of shingles.

Fig. 1 represents the floor of the shop; D, the door; W, windows; 1, carpenter's bench; 2, blacksmith's bench; 3, carpenter's vise; 4, blacksmith's vise; 5, the bellows; 6, the fireplace, which is built of solid masonry 3 feet square, with a hollow in the top; 7 is the anvil.

one. R and A are scantlings, 2x6, bolted on the rafters at the top. B is a scantling 2x4, 6 feet long, running into R, which has a hole mortised through it 2 inches from the bottom. There is a bolt running through the ends of R and B. There is a long groove cut in A, which B passes through, so that B can be pushed up and down. C is a ¾ inch rod through the end of B and down into F. F is a scantling 2x2 and 4 feet long. G is a stake driven into the ground with a staple and ring in the top of it into which the end of F is put. H is the ground or floor. I is the bench. E is the iron blacksmith's vise. D is the augur made out of shafting steel ⅝ inch thick. There is a piece of iron fastened on the under side of B, where the auger strikes it, with a hole counter sunk in it for the top end of the auger (which is tapered) to rest in.

By putting your foot on the end of F and pressing, it will easily be seen that you have a great pressure on a drill bit.

The article you wish to drill a hole in you put in the vise, or if it be too big put a block of wood in the vise, and the thing you wish to drill on top.—John Taylor, Jr., in Ohio Farmer.

AGRICULTURAL NOTES.

THE cows should not be eating while being milked, but stand with eyes closed chewing their cuds and thinking of nothing but letting the milk come full head.

TO PRESERVE the wagon wheels so they need not be taken to the shop, heat linseed oil to the boiling point and pour it in a trough. Having enough to cover the felloes, turn the wheel slowly through this boiling oil.

WHEN the pasture begins to fail it is best to commence cutting off and feeding a green crop. The second growth of clover, the crop of millet, sorghum, sown corn or rice, can be used to a good advantage for this purpose.

HENRY TALCOTT, dairy commissioner of Ohio, says: "I can make from $50 to $75 per cow easier in winter dairying than I can from $25 to $40 in summer; consequently, I have my cows come in in October, November and December."

THE most productive market gardens in the neighborhood of Paris are where the gardeners hire the right to put soil upon a piece of barren land; providing in their lease for the right to take away the soil when they give up the occupancy.

EXPERIMENTS at the Wisconsin station show that the gooseberry mildew is one of the easiest fungi to destroy. The disease yields readily to copper solutions, which should be applied till the fruit is half grown; after that the use of potassium sulphide is more desirable.

DO NOT put more cows on your hired men's hands than they can milk without physical discomfort. Some men can milk twelve cows comfortably, where others would have tired hands and arms at the eighth animal. Tired human muscles cannot properly drain the milk from the cow's udder.

Light Color of Yolks.

When grass fails there may be a liability of the coloring matter of the food being insufficient to give the much desired deep color of the yolks. The lack of color, however, does not indicate a lack of quality in the eggs, as the color depends largely on the food, the deeper color being obtained where there is an abundance of a variety of green food.

BUILDING CELLARS.

One of the First Things to Be Sought Is Perfect Drainage.

During the sultry summer months farmers who do not enjoy the luxury of an icehouse are in a position to appreciate a good cool cellar. And even where ice is to be obtained the cellar will only make it possible to obtain the greater benefit from ice. But perhaps not one in every dozen cellars made is cool in summer and warm in winter, unless it possesses some fault such as excessive moisture or lack of ventilation. In either case it is likely to be of little use and perhaps a serious menace to the healthfulness of the family.

One of the first things to be sought in the location is thorough drainage. No cellar is fit for use in which water accumulates or stands until everything becomes injured to a more or less extent. Neither is a house fit for habitation which stands over a cellar of this description. To be effective, the drain should be a few inches lower than the cellar floor, and if it extends entirely around the outer edge it is all the better.

Next to drainage, the location in regard to the building must be considered unless it is to be beneath the entire building. The worst possible place is beneath the southwest corner of the building, while the best location is in the center, with the northeast corner as second choice. The walls, floor and counters should be cemented to insure cleanliness, freedom from insects and solid surfaces. Our first cellar has a brick floor, but no one could induce me to put in a brick floor again. It is more difficult to sweep or scrub, and when cleaned does not present a respectable appearance. And the tendency to excessive moisture is increased.

The cellar beneath the dwelling is 12x28 inside measurement, extends from north to south beneath the center of the building. Ventilation is provided by means of two windows, one in each end; that in the south being shaded. The windows are provided with glass and screen sash, either of which is readily opened. A counter eighteen inches high and three feet wide occupies one side and the two ends. This saved excavation and stone foundation and is all the more convenient. It is walled with brick and nicely cemented. It is dry, cool and clean. The temperature in winter ranges from 35 to 40, and in midsummer from 60 to 65. Fruit and vegetables kept to perfection, the early winter varieties of apples keeping till April and May. Last spring the tulpehockens kept nicely until May 20. —John L. Shawver, in Farm and Fireside.

COMBINATION RACK.

The combined hay and grain rack for sheep shown in Fig. 1 is recommended in the Farm Journal by Mr. Henry Willard, of Ripon, Wis. The grain rack in front is pivoted by bolts passing through the extended end of the rack into two upright scantling. When the grain ration is eaten, the rack can be raised and fastened up out of the way as shown by the dotted lines. This being done, the sheep have access to the hay-rack. The front edge of the hay-rack floor is 2 feet from the ground, and the front pickets 2 feet long, 2 inches wide and 3 inches apart. At the top of these front pickets is a shelf or screen, shown in cut, fastened to the scantling, and to which the pickets are secured. The front edge of the pickets are rounded off smooth. The advantages claimed for this rack are: 1. Economy of floor space; 2. Economy of food—no waste; 3. Protects wool from dust; 4. Does not wear off wool; 5. Safe for the animals; 6. Cleanliness of grain trough.

The rack illustrated by Fig. 2 is a simpler affair, to be constructed against the side of the sheep shed. The feed trough is 9 inches from the floor, 11 inches wide and 6 inches deep. The pickets of the rack are 2 feet 9 inches long and 3½ inches apart. A foot-wide board is nailed along the top of rack.

GRAPES AND PEARS.

How to Keep Them Sound Until Long After the Holidays.

By exercising care in selecting and handling the fruit, both grapes and pears can be kept for a long time, at least until after the holidays. The most important item is to use only sound specimens. There is no advantage gained in using bruised or partially decayed fruit, for it will cause the sound to decay more quickly. Select the largest bunches of grapes and lay them out separately for a day or so, to partially cure, cutting away any berries that are in the least damaged. Use sawdust for packing, putting a layer first, then a layer of grapes, followed by another of sawdust and so on until the box is full. Set the boxes where they will keep very cool but not freeze. A great deal depends upon even temperature.

Pears will keep in a much warmer place, but like the grapes the temperature must be uniform. Take perfectly sound pears, not too ripe, for even quite green ones will ripen nicely in this way. Spread them out one layer deep in shallow boxes or drawers. Wrapping each separately in paper will help to preserve them. Keep dark, but above all keep the temperature even. The constant changing from warm to cold and vice versa is the main cause of decaying.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Feed for Pigs and Shoats.

The saying that work well done is twice done will apply to the feeding of swine. They should be fed just what they need and no more, if they are to be kept healthy and in good condition. On no account should any food be allowed to be left over in the trough. Pigs and shoats should be fed for growth and not for fat. Grass, green sweet corn cut up when old enough to boil, together with bran, middlings and oats, with what milk the dairy affords is the kind of feed for growing pigs. For winter feed nothing is better or cheaper than sugar beets with a few ears of corn to deep the growing pig in a healthy condition. For fatting cornmeal with a small quantity of oil, uncooked, should furnish two-thirds of their rations.—Smith Harding in Farm and Home.

Abraham Lincoln

When leaving his home at Springfield, Ill., to be inaugurated president of the United States, made a farewell address to his old friends and neighbors, in which he said, "NEIGHBORS, GIVE YOUR BOYS A CHANCE." These words come with as much force today as they did thirty years ago.

How give them this chance?

Up in the Northwest is a great empire waiting for young and sturdy fellows to come and develop it and "grow up with the country." All over this broad land are the young fellows, the boys that Lincoln referred to, seeking to better their condition and get on in life.

The country referred to lies along the Northern Pacific R. R. Here you can find pretty much anything you want. In Minnesota, and in the Red River Valley of North Dakota, the finest of prairie lands fitted for wheat and grain, or as well for diversified farming. In Western North Dakota, and Montana, are stock ranges limitless in extent, clothed with the most nutritious of grasses.

If a fruit farming region is wanted, there is the whole state of Washington to select from.

As for scenic delights the Northern Pacific Railroad passes through a country unparalleled. In crossing the Rocky, Bitter Root and Cascade mountains, the greatest mountain scenery to be seen in the United States from car windows is found. The wonderful bad lands, wonderful in graceful form and glowing color, are a poem. Lakes Pend d'Oreille and Coeur d'Alene are alone worthy of a trans-continental trip, while they are the fisherman's Ultima Thule. The ride along Clark's Fork to the Columbia river is a daylight dream. To cap the climax, this is the only way to reach the far-famed Yellowstone Park.

To reach and see all this, the Northern Pacific Railroad furnish trains and service of unsurpassed excellence. The most approved and comfortable Palace Sleeping cars; the best Dining cars that can be made; Pullman Tourist cars, good for both first and second class passengers; easy riding Day coaches, with Baggage, Express and Postal cars, all drawn by powerful Baldwin locomotives, make a train fit for royalty itself.

Those seeking for new homes should take this train and go and spy out the land. To be prepared, write to CHAS. S. FEE, G. T. & T. A., ST. PAUL, MINN.

COMMERCIAL transactions are growing juicy. Peach pulp and wood pulp are now well known commodities.

Cold Wave Coming.

Weather reports from all extreme stations announce the early advent of cold waves. In anticipation, thousands of people are completing arrangements to spend the winter in the South. Of all south bound roads, the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad offers the best advantages to the traveler. It is the shortest line from Chicago to Florida and Gulf Coast resorts. Its trains reach destination six hours in advance of any other line. Its equipment is unsurpassed. Its popular fast train, the "Chicago & Nashville Limited," which leaves Dearborn Station, Chicago, 4 p. m. every day in the year, connects with all through trains from the West and Northwest, is vestibuled from end to end, heated by steam, lighted by gas, is composed of Pullman sleepers, Pullman Ladies' and Day coaches, and a superb dining car.

Beware of Poison.

The Druggists' Circular and Chemical Gazette is one of the best papers of its class in the United States. In arguing the question of poison in the household it cites the following case: "A gentleman in Indiana placed on his bureau two bottles, of similar appearance, one containing cough mixture and the other a liniment. Early in the morning, being troubled with a cough, he arose and took, as he supposed, a dose of the mixture prepared for his relief, but by mistake he took the liniment. It was said to contain aconite and death resulted from the error." Do not take medicine containing poison. Many cough remedies contain opium in such quantities that when the second dose is taken, death is likely to ensue. Children are particularly liable to accident from this cause. Reid's German Cough and Kidney Cure contains no poison in any form, neither opiates nor narcotics. It is impossible to take an overdose. Get it of any dealer. DELANO DIARY

—John Sleight, of Rockford, came over to see how Delanoites vote.

—John Renswick is re-shingling his dwelling house on Franklin Ave.

—Baker Maynard has moved to Litchfield where he will continue his avocation.

—Miss Mossberg, of Willmar, is the guest of Mrs. A. W. Wittman for a few days.

—Homer Dorman, of Greenwood, was up Tuesday and took lessons in the kangaroo system.

—The first snowstorm of the season occurried on Monday, Nov. 7th, one day before election.

—Adam Horsch has leveled off the ground near his mill, on the west side and is putting in a stock of lumber.

—Good maple wood is worth $4.25 per cord, on the track we hear. Why don't some of our friends tell us it is due to the McKinley bill.

—Mrs. George Goetzman, of Lester Prairie, made the GAZETTE a pleasant call on Wednesday. She has been spending the week in town.

—George Bolton is quite proud of that horse and fine robe that friends recently presented to him. And with his family enjoys many a fine ride.

—The Starspangled banner was floated from the top of the Democratic liberty pole, on Wednesday, in honor of the election of Grover Cleveland.

—Brandon and Jacobs is a wide awake livery firm and their teams make good time and are to be seen in almost any part of the country, daily.

—Summer goods were relegated to the back shelves and stored beneath the counters to make room for woolens, caps, mittens and arctic shoes on Monday.

—Notice the change this week in George P. Schaffer's ad. Mr. Schaffer is one of Delano's live merchants and keeps good goods and pleases his customers.

—The Delano Furniture Co. are putting the finishing touches on to their new place of business. This is now one of the finest furniture emporiums in the county.

—"Duke" has raised a new pole on Charley Eppel's corner and the Cleveland and Stevenson banner and the stars and stripes float gracefully and harmoniously to the breezes.

—E. J. Swedeback has purchased the old Van Eman property, on 2nd street and is rasing it up and repairing it in good shape. It will add much to the appearance of that part of town when done.

—Only about half as many ladies voted this year in Delano for superintendent for schools as did last year. Somehow voting don't appear to be a favorite amusement with the ladies hereabouts.

—Rev. Davies and wife are visiting friends in Meeker county this week. Mr. D. will preach at Litchfield, on Sunday, Rev. Blackhurst, of that place, exchanging pulpits with him for the occasion.

—Rev. Davies acted on his advice to his flock to vote, and was on hand and cast the first ballot in Delano under the Australian system. Rev. Zawodzki agreed with him, and later in the day cast his first ballot in this county.

—P. E. O'Loughlin, of Maple Lake, John F. Collins, of Smith Lake, and Charles Bugbee, of Rockford were among candidates present at the Delano polls on Tuesday.

—Mr. Weigand, of Watertown, has been filling the position of night man at the depot and Mr. Haines has been day operator during Sam Pape's absence at Cokato, holding down A. J. Whitaker's job while he canvassed the county as a candidate for County Auditor.

—Some new hitching posts have been set in front of the M. E. church property by the extraordinary exertions of the pastor, while, through the kindness of Mrs. Joe. Lindsley, a nice light is thrown on the walk in front of the church, which is a great convenience on dark nights.

—As a matter of course everybody is blaming someone else for the loss of votes at the township polls. Had the voters taken the advice of the GAZETTE and got hold of a sample ballot and come to the polls early prepared to vote as quickly as possible some of the rush would have been obviated.

—Geo. Cunningham, of Watertown, was in town, Thursday.

—Read the National election news on the inside of this paper.

—Alex. Rutherford, of Greenwood, was in town on business yesterday.

—Charles. O'Hara, of Woodland, was a passenger for the cities yesterday evening.

—Peter Campbell, of Watertown, was quite jubilant over election yesterday while in town.

—Rev. Mr. Bacon will hold Episcopal services at 3 p. m., on Sunday, at the Presbyterian church.

—Some of our local politicians were away off in their calculations as to how near they could come to carrying Delano.

—John H. McGary, of Independence, was a GAZETTE caller yesterday. His smiles were visible from a long distance.

—John O'Leary, of Rockford, moved back to Delano yesterday. He occupies his mother's house on South Third street.

—Dr. Shrader, J. A. Brasie and others intend going on a hunting expedition. Dr. S. has promised us a piece of venison.

—The Democrats have raised a fund for a grand parade and barbecue to take place next Thursday, in Delano. Every body invited.

—Sheriff Nugent and Deputy Herman Anderson were in town on business connected with the Ernest Zierman estate last evening.

—County Attorney Cutting passed through town Wednesday evening on his way to Buffalo. He thinks he has been beaten in the race for re-election.

—A meeting of the Cleveland Club will be held at M. A. O'Hair's office, on Saturday evening at 8 o'clock for the purpose of perfecting arrangements for the ox-roast.

—I. P. Harvey, of Rockford, was a GAZETTE caller, on Thursday. He is tickled to learn that Ohio, his old home has got onto the right side, and that old Grover is to be president for another four years.

—To-morrow, Nov. 12. will be the regular DELANO FAIR DAY. It is the time of year when Minnesota farmers are anxious to dispose of their surplus stock before winter comes on and, doubtless, many sales will be effected.

—Most of our Republican friends are submitting gracefully to the inevitable and wishing the Democrats may have everything so they can make some Democratic laws once. If they do as they should they will make some good ones.

—Charley Cunningham who is working for a Minneapolis firm, at his trade steam fitting returned to the city from Litchfield where he has been doing some work, on Monday evening. He expects to go to Sioux city for a few weeks, soon.

—Mrs. Deller, and son from St. Paul; Mrs. Zeryis and husband, Chrystal station; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Brushaber and Mr. and Mrs. Crawley, Mr. and Mrs. Jake Steffes, Joe Steffes and two daughters, Mrs. Nick Steffes and Miss Maggie Steffes all of Minneapolis attended the funeral services of John Steffes at this place on Sunday.

—Prof. Dewey seems to have struck on a plan of interesting the boys at school, one evening last week he dissected a poor forlorn member of the feline race, much to the entertainment and instruction of the pupils. A football has, also, been procured and sprained ankles, bruised shins, etc. are quite fashionable among the attendants at the public school.

—Election day passed off in quite an orderly manner last Tuesday. The village election was held at the city hall, and probably, no better conducted polls could be found in the county. 199 men and 53 women voted. The town of Franklin election was held at Cramer's hall, which proved inadequate for the rush. The stairway was jammed, as was the small hall for several hours, about the middle of the day. And although eight booths were used the voting was done so slowly that many tired of standing in line in the cold and went away without casting a ballot. We are informed that Auditor Heath had advised having two polling places in the town, advice that should have been followed. Had those present waited until 4 o'clock they could have voted as there was plenty of chance after that time. Where possible, provision should be made to allow the voters to come in one door and pass out at another in order to avoid collisions.

Flag.

To the GAZETTE:—It will occur to your readers that shortly after the nomination of Presidents the Eagle stated that a certain River street Democrat tried to hoist a flag and streamer with Cleveland and Stevenson's name thereon and declared that they would not float or harmonize together. Any person in doubt will please cast their eye to corner bridge and River street and be convinced that the Eagle, Terry and Billings were mistaken.

Nov. 9th, 1892. DUKE.

County Cullings.

Ratification meetings are being held in different parts of the country. What's the matter with Delano having one.

Wright County went republican, so far as heard, except Treasurer and Register of Deeds and Charley Bugbee, for County Commissioner.

If people do not forget the experience of this campaign before the next election rolls round we predict that things will go more smoothly at some of the polling places in Wright county.

Our Republican county politicians succeded in having our voters send four men to the SENATOR DAVIS ELECTORIAL COLLEGE, that being their main issue, and now they will have to put up with some other man, so far as the GAZETTE is able to see, for United States Senator.

Many of our county politicians, we believe, are much given to exaggeration in their accounts of the evil doings of their opponents in political warefare. Cowards only use weapons beyond the acquisition of their foe, except in extreme cases. Misrepresentation of the character of a rival is as unfair as a stab in the back.

With the change of administration goes the appointive offices. Look out now and be careful to sign no petitions to have somebody appointed to some office unless you think they are proper persons to satisfactorily fill the positions they seek, or you may have old Grover tell you as he did one fellow who complained of one of his appointees being a poor choice. "I saw your name on his petition and thought he would suit you."

One of the Populist candidates tells a good story on Superintendent Lindsley while electioneering, it is said, he called on a prosperous farmer who was engaged in driving his cows into the pen for the night. Mr. L. kindly assisted him, when they were herded, the candidate softly broached the object of his visit by saying, "Now I have assisted you in herding your cows. I hope you will aid me in the race for the superintendency," whereupon the prosperous farmer promptly responded as follows: "Oh! Mr. Collins is coming over to milk them."

Developments of the campaign just ended reveal the fact that people are misrepresented or do not vote their own ideas. For instance a town noted for its temperance proclivites gave the man on the Democratic and Republican tickets, respectively, that were best known, of any, for total abstainers, the smallest vote, while so-called whiskey towns gave them the largest. This would look as if their votes had been solicited by some very attractive method. In some cases, we believe, this is not a fact, however, but rather that voters acted on the plan of natural selection, we read about, and chose the most opposite from themselves to vote for. It's a fact and not a theory at any rate.

To Our Friends.

We thank our friends for the good vote they gave us for the Legislature.

Card of Thanks.

We wish hereby to extend our thanks to the friends and neighbors who have shown many kindnesses to us during the sickness and death of our departed husband and father.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

THE populists of Kansas elected to Congress one man who is a quarter blood Indian, and another who was a colonel in the Confederate army. Politics in Kansas is no respector of persons.—Weeping Water Republican.

Minnesota Republicans are accused of electing Knute Nelson, Governor of Minnesota because he was born in Norway.

THE SIXTH Congressional District extending from Delano to Duluth, will be ably represented by Major Baldwin, a Democrat, in a Democratic House with a Democratic President, and altogether likely her interests will receive fully as much attention as if Judge Searle had secured that election which last week his newspaper friends said was so sure that he only wanted one more vote to make his majority larger.

THE Democratic party is a Free Trade party or it is nothing; only Free Trade is not what the Republicans say it is. Protection is the vilest fraud that ever sought to impose upon the credulity of ignorant people. Protectionism has robbed the people of billions. The rotten fabric goes down in ignominy. It will be replaced by the sound timbers of a Free Trade fabric; and then all men will be free and equal.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

LORD CHIEF JUSTICE HALE was perhaps the first judge to call attention to inebriety as a cause of crime, requiring special study and attention. In 1870 he is reported as saying:

"If the murders and manslaughters, the burglaries and robberies, the riots and tumults, and other enormities committed during the last twenty years, were divided into five parts, four of them would be found to have been the issue and product of drinking.—Scientific American.

FROM present appearances Adlai E. Steyenson is destined to become one of the greatest men in modern history. It seems he is to hold the balance of power in the United States Senate. That the senate will be evenly balanced, and a tie the frequent occurrence. Vice President Steyenson in his capacity as President of the United States Senate, can, alone say, then, whether we will or whether we won't pass certain measures. His veto power appears to be almost or quite equal, under the circumstances, to that of President Cleveland himself.

FROM telegraph reports to the New York Press bearing date, Nov. 13. We learn that the Fostoria Shade Lamp company, the largest manufacturers of lamp shades in the United States have put their men on half time. That the Fall River, Mass., cotton workers received an advance of 7 per cent in wages some days ago, and plans to enlarge the plants were made, which, now, will not be followed out. And the same kind of a story comes from Providence, R. I. The simple prospect of a Democratic administration operates very quickly on these fellows. Much more rapidly that Republicans would have us believe the McKinley bill could. If these people have been getting a raise in wages, and the proprietors contemplated enlarging their business, how does it happen they did not make it public in time to be of service along with a lot of similar stuff in controlling votes? People in this country have heard such things for years. They heard it eight years ago when the same man was elected President. They had donged in their ears, and beheld it in their papers and periodicals, not only in plain type but in pictures, and hieroglyphics four years ago when they succeeded in landing their man in the white house by a minority popular vote. They heard it two years ago, and denounced it as a humbug, and plainly said they took no stock in such stories by sending a large majority of Democrats to congress, and electing Democratic governors in states where such a thing had become almost an impossibility, in the minds of many. They have had all these horrible predictions paraded before them for the past few months by orators of every shade of ability. They have read of all the evil consequences of placing a democrat in the Presidential chair, in their dailies, weeklies, educational Agricultural, Scientific and religious journals, for weeks. They have also beheld the lengthening list of judicial minds, of Gresham, Cooley, Lake, Rea and Ex-attorney General McVeagh and others who following in the wake of their leaders came to the brink, when the McKinley bill became a law. And gazing down the corridors of time beheld the consequences of a continuance of the Republican theory and practice of protective tariff which, with each change, made by its friends, but drew its tightening coils the closer about its victims while it made possible the building up of trusts and monopolies defying the very authorities of the government itself in their security, and on the 8th, of this month they again rendered their verdict against protective tariff by electing to the Presidency of our country Grover Cleveland.

After Election.

Election is over. For four years the policy of our nation has been fixed. The voters have spoken at the polls in favor of tariff reform. Democratic principles have triumphed for the third time at the hands of the popular majority in this country. This time in so decisive a manner as not to be disregarded. In case the United States Senate is in the hands of the dominant party, as it is likely to be, raw materials must go on the free list. Tariffs must be adjusted with a view to revenue sufficient to run the government, economically. The infant industries a century old must begin to straighten themselves up and learn to walk alone. They must be weaned from the public crib through which they have been extracting a large amount of adipose tissue tending to make them all the less self-reliant, and at the expense, and to the detriment of the average citizen, in the various walks of life, throughout our country, and all under the guise of a protective tariff. Every business must stand on its merits, must live or die as it is or is not needed. Manufacturers like other people must make what they can make, profitably. The rebate system must be changed so that we are not paying a bounty to men to run machinery in this country to make wares for other countries cheaper than they can sell them here. We do not look for the great revolution in business that was predicted before election by our western politicians. We learn from returns that the voters in the Eastern states are perfectly willing try it at all events. That the majority of the people in the states centrally located are, also, willing to give it a test and we think things will move along as smoothly as ever. Of course our Republican friends in the west may be a little slow to give in that Democrats can run the goverment as well as themselves, and in case there is a business failure or a strike cry out that Democracy is to blame. But the voters will not soon forget the riots, strikes, Pinkertons, death and other things of the past year, before the change of administration was so forcibly called for, and will not expect all things to be made perfect in a minute. As they said about the McKinley bill you must give time to see the effect. We hope the change may meet the expectations of those who voted for it to a much greater extent than has the McKinley bill sustained its repulation with its originators and supporters. Hurrah for Grover Cleveland, and good government.

RAILROAD CONTINUED.

MEDINA.

In 1886, the Minneapolis & Pacific R. R. Co. built its line (now the Soo) through the town of Medina, on which two Railroad stations were established within that town, viz, Hamel and Loretto.

Hamel had an existence as a village for several years previous, but the construction of Railroad gave the place new life. J. O. Hamel has long been identified with enterprises at the village, amongst which may be named merchandising and milling: Wm. Hamel, Peter Moran, Eugene Ruilliot and other parties by the name of Pammeleau, Gorham are associated in business enterprises of the village. The Catholic society and church previously mentioned as being organized and erected at Hamel is still in existence.

The village of Loretto was laid out on land of Peter Lerch opposite the railroad station. Peter M. Tautges began merchandising. He was succeeded by Nicholas Miller. Philip Lerch built a hotel. The business of the village at present is represented as follows: Joseph and Felix Barbeau, saw mill; Franz Becker, shoemaker; Peter Becker, hay and feed; John Burg, hotel; Nicholas Miller, general store; Fred Smith, blacksmith.

GREENWOOD.

In 1886, the Minneapolis & Pacific R. R. was constructed along the northerly shore of Lake Sarah by the Forks of Crow River, passing through the historic townsite of Greenwood. The latter after having various names (none of which was Greenwood) bestowed upon it by the R. R. Company is now known as Rockford station.

About 1862, a German Lutheran society was organized in the northern part of the town of Greenwood, with which the names of Hohenstein, Schnappauf, Vielhaber, Schindel, Sipe, Reich and others were associated. The regular religious services then inaugurated by that society have continued up to present. Amongst the Germans of the same locality were a few members of the Evangelical society, in 1863, the Presbyterian church was also represented in Greenwood, at that time, being part of the Rockford Presbyterian Congregation. And likewise Universalists, Adventists and other denominations were to be found in Greenwood, Rockford and Independence at that early day.

HON. EDWARD EGAN.

Have You Heard His Eagle Scream.

Sup't. James A. Lewis Probably Re-elected.

Mrs. Beede Ran Ahead of Her Ticket.

Hurrah for Egan! After a hard fought contest he is elected, as I predicted, by a handsome majority, to represent the 5th commissioner district on the Hennepin county board of county commissioners.

It will require the official count to determine who is elected school superintendent; but Republicans generally concede the election of Prof. James A. Lewis. Good Mrs. Beede ran away ahead of her ticket, despite the many unkind things said of her in the campaign. Mrs. Beede is beyond doubt the most gifted and popular lady in Hennepin county, and it is the opinion of nearly everybody, whose opinion is worth anything, that the unkind things said of her eminated from some silly women who are insanely jealous of her because she is smarter than they are and can command the respect and admiration of intelligent men everywhere. If she would trace these things and quarrel with their silly authors, they would rejoice with joy unspeakable. But Mrs. Beede is too sensible a woman for that. She has no time for such females. They are too contemptible to claim from her a moments thought. Accepting the Prohibition nomination was Mrs. Beede's great mistake. Had she ran independently, she would have swept the county. But she will be heard from again a little more than a year hence, when she will be nominated by the Democracy, without opposition. Mark my word.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

On Tuesday of last week, the 8th, of the present month was general election, and the results of said election are known to all the people, and now the thing we have to do, is to think about something else and get down to business. It is true the Democrats got about everything except Chinese, but my sympathy is always for the under dog in the fight. It must be remembered that no political party carries the United States in their vest pocket.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Nov. 11, 1892.

The Democratic cyclone which swept the country last Tuesday left this town canopied with the most gorgeous collection of rainbows ever seen in the political firmament, rainbows which, instead of the fabled pots of gold, have at their ends the means of giving the country what it so loudly but ineffectually demanded two years ago—relief from unnecessary taxation. No wonder every Democrat feels shoutingly jubilant. Few such victories have been won in the past, the usual experience of political parties having been to advance step by step towards the control of all branches of the Government while with one bound, as it were, the Democratic party has jumped into the control of the Presidency the Senate and the House of Representatives. True, the Senate will not probably have an actual majority of Democrats, but inasmuch as the Peoples party senators will act with the Democrats on tariff matters it will practically be a Democratic majority, and it may be set down as one of the certain results of the Democratic victory that the Fifty-third Congress will reform the inequalities of the iniquitous McKinley tariff law, and further that it will do so without injury to any class of American wage-earners and with benefit to the entire country.

The election returns from congressional districts show the extreme absurdity of the anti-election claims made by Republicans and Peoples party men as to the next House of Representatives. The Republicans have elected a few more members to the next House than they have in the present—it was hardly possible for them to have elected fewer—, but the Democrats will have an overwhelming majority in the next just as they have in this House. The Peoples party claim that it would elect enough members to hold the balance of power between the Democrats and Republicans in the next House was, in view of the news a few weeks ago from the Southern and Northwestern States, so plausible that it was accepted by many even by a few Democrats. Now look at the result. Instead of holding the balance of power the Peoples party has even failed to hold its own in the next House, which means in unmistake language the exit of the p. p. as a factor in National politics.

Commendations of Senator Hill and Tammany for their excellent work in the campaign are heard on all sides and no Democrat can study the magnificent vote brought out in New York without agreeing that the commendations are fully deserved; they have taken New York permanently out of the doubtful column and made it as certainly Democratic as Texas. Hon. Benjamin Cable, who was in charge of the Chicago headquarters, is also highly commended, as he deserves to be, for the result of his work.

Senator Gorman is one of the happiest men seen in Washington lately. Every prediction he made when he returned home two days before election and announced that the work of the National committee was done and that Cleveland's election was assured has been fulfilled. For the first time in twelve years he voted at a National election last Tuesday. In the '84 and '88 campaigns he was afraid to leave National headquarters in New York on election day.

Mr. Blaine will not talk about the election for publication, but he cannot hide the look of satisfaction which is now seen on his face for the first time since that warm day on which he so hurriedly left the cabinet.

Mr. Harrison also refuses to talk, but it is whispered in inside republican circles that he accuses Quay, Clarkson and other Blaine members of the Republican National committee with having hoodwinded Carter and betrayed the ticket in New York and Illinois. It is significant in this connection that not one single message was sent from any member of the National committee to Mr. Harrison, either on election day or the day following. Of course the reason for this may have been shame, which these men must certainly have felt after their anti-election boasting.

If Whitelaw Reid has one single friend in the world he should hasten to extend his sympathy, for he certainly needs it. The Republicans have by general consent made him the scapegoat upon which to vent their wrath and cures loud and deep are certain to follow the mention of his name in the presence of a profane Republican, and all of the worst things said about him when he was first put on the ticket are now being repeated by Republicans.

The Toledo Weekly Blade.

The most popular and best known weekly newspaper printed in this country is the Toledo Blade. For more than twenty years it has had a circulation of 100,000 or 200,000, going regularly into every state and territory of the Union. From fifteen to twenty-five tons of print paper is consumed in each week's edition, and it is regularly mailed to more than half the post-office of the United States. It is a peculiar fact that the Blade is the only weekly newspaper published that has regular subscribers in all parts of the United States. It is edited with special reference to the wants of all people in all sections. It is also made to interest every member of the family. Besides all the news of the world, it has Serial and Short Stories, Wit and Humor, Poetry, Campfire, Farm, Sunday School Lessons, Young Folks, Poultry, Puzzles, Household, Answers to Correspondents, Etc., Etc. As a special feature for 1893, Mr. Robinson Locke, editor and proprietor of the Blade, has just sailed for Japan, and will contribute a series of illustrated letters on the manners and customs of that peculiar country and its people. These articles will be commenced sometime in February or March, and will be worth to the readers of the Blade many times the sudscription price. Every reader of this paper is invited to send for a specimen copy. The publishers of the Blade would be glad to send a specimen copy to every reader in this country. Subscription price of the Blade, one dollar a year. Five dollars in cash will be paid to any person sending in a small club of subscribers. Write for agents' terms, giving particulars. IT seems surprising to learn the fact that twenty years ago 4,000,000 pounds of snuff per annum were consumed in this country. Much more astonishing is the circumstance that during the fiscal year ended July 1, 1892, 10,000,000 pounds of snuff were used in the United States. Yet how rarely is it that one sees a pinch of snuff taken.

WILLIAM II. is at present the richest sovereign of Europe. As emperor of Germany he does not receive a thaler toward his expenses. The reichstag, however, votes him every year a sum of 2,600,000 marks under the heading: "Funds placed at the disposition of the emperor for distribution." Of this amount and according to minute calculations, which have been submitted to the reichstag, 2,467,000 marks are given to invalids who did not receive state pensions after the war of 1870.

FOR a rush of blood to the head try to get some of it down to the feet. Even in sitting you can use the same device as that which prevents cold feet in a church or horsecar; rest the weight of the leg on the toe of each foot. Make as though you were about to walk on tiptoe. This diverts the blood from an apoplectic head, and is found to relieve giddiness or swimming of the head in a few minutes. Perhaps the resolution to send the blood to the toes has something to do with it, as well as the attitude.

THE untaught heathen is sometimes wiser than we give him credit for being. So is the mother of his children. One of these mothers has recently expressed her opinion to a woman missionary, and the missionary's reply is not given. He created you to get married, and he will punish you. You should repent and get married at once. Then, perhaps, you will be forgiven, and you may come and teach us to read and write."

THE secret service division of the treasury department has discovered a counterfeit of the new issue of the two-dollar silver certificate, 1886, check letter B 2235, W. S. Rosecrans, register, James W. Hyatt, treasurer. The most marked difference between this note and the genuine, a difference which will result in the detection of the counterfeit at a glance, is that the upper loop of the J in James in the signature James W. Hyatt points directly between the D. C. after Washington in the genuine, while in the counterfeit it is about ⅛ of an inch to the left of or immediately under the letter D.

COALBURG, a village in Georgia, was visited by a shower recently and with the rain fell a large number of live eels. The largest of them were a foot in length, but most of them were only a few inches long. They were so plentiful that farmers gathered them up, put them in carts and hauled them off for the purpose of applying them to the land for the purpose of enriching it. These eels are said to belong to a variety only found in Mexico and South America and their falling from a cloud may explain why certain strange kinds of fish are found in some lakes and not in others only a few miles off.

Jack Chinn Shot by an Officer.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 15.—Col. Jack Chinn, the starter of the East St. Louis race track, and one of the best known turfmen in the West, was shot and dangerously wounded at the track this afternoon by Capt. D. Anthony, who has charge of the police force at that place. Chinn was removed to St. Mary's hospital, and the ball was removed from the fleshy part of the neck, where it had lodged.

The shooting was the result of Chinn's anger upon being served with a notice by Secretary Sinclair that his services as a starter would be dispensed with. Chinn grasped Sinclair by the coat, pulling him toward him, and with his disengaged hand pulled a vicious looking knife and was about to wreak his wrath upon the secretary, when Capt. Anthony, who was near, sprang forward, put his revolver in Chinn's face and fired.

Col. Chinn is 52 years of age, a giant in strength and build, and while pleasant and genteel when sober, when in his cups is a bad man to deal with.

HIS DEFEAT.

Reported Interview with President Harrison Regarding the Causes Which Brought About the Result at the Polls.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—President Harrison talked freely Friday about the recent defeat of his party and the causes which brought it about, says a dispatch from Washington to the Herald. Friday afternoon he discussed not only the recent election, but the gravity of the situation which now confronts the republican party. The overwhelming defeat of the republican party, the president said, was due mainly to the position of the party on the tariff question. The republicans had forced this issue to an extreme which did not meet with the approval of the people.

There was another important element, the president said, which had much to do with the defeat of the republicans last Tuesday and its force was felt at the north as well as at the south. There was a popular belief that the force bill issue kept the solid south within the old lines, but in the president's estimation it did more than that, for it brought to the support of the democratic ticket many votes in the north.

The verdict of last Tuesday, the president continued, could be construed in but one way. It meant a condemnation of the extreme high-tariff policy of the republicans. The inevitable result, if the party was to hope for a renewal of power, was a modification of this position, but not a renunciation altogether of the protective-tariff policy, which had been the keynote of every republican campaign for many years past.

President Harrison has very decided views as to the conduct of the campaign. He does not think very much of Chairman Carter, of the republican national committee. He consented to Carter's appointment only when it became evident that no more acceptable man could be secured. He said the campaign had been mismanaged and that much better results would have been secured but for the "rainbow chasing" schemes to which Mr. Carter gave countenance and assistance.

The president is particularly chagrined at the result in his native state, and believes it was largely due to the lack of good generalship. What he wanted to do, he said, and what he endeavored to impress upon them, was the absolute necessity of keeping the republican states in line and carrying New York.

The president said that he had realized for some time past that the drift of public sentiment was against him and his party and it was this that led him to force this advice upon the party leaders. The disregard of this advice had much to do with the result of last Tuesday. The president realized before any of the election returns came in Tuesday that he was a defeated man. He hoped for success until the last hour, but admitted he had not expected it. One of the reasons for the president's doubt as to his election was the well-known dissaffection of a number of the prominent leaders of his party.

SETTLED.

The Strike at New Orleans Declared Off—Terms of the Settlement.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 12.—The strike was declared off Friday. The amalgamated council virtually surrendered. They abandoned the demand for recognition of the union and agree to arbitrate the questions of time and wages and to allow the merchants to retain the men employed. They ask, however, that union men be not discriminated against in the future. After some haggling the merchants agreed to this. The parties to this agreement declare that they will use their best endeavors to adjust any differences which may result or may have resulted from any strike made in sympathy with the strike hereinabove referred to, in accordance with the above terms. The arbitration clause is to be effected within the next forty-eight hours.

There is intense indignation among a large number of the workingmen over the manner in which the strike was settled, and the committee of five representing the interests of the laborers is openly denounced and charged with treachery and having sold out the labor element.

The street car companies have about broken up the car drivers' union and the contract that was broken will undoubtedly remain so. The companies will employ new union and non-union men indiscriminately. All the ringleaders on the street car lines have been discharged and the unions are so badly disorganized that they cannot do anything about the matter.

Business is gradually being resumed. None of the non-union men are being discharged. The colossal failure of the strike means that the backbone of the unions is broken and that the American Federation of Labor is out of business in this state.

Only One Store Left.

CAMDEN, Me., Nov. 12.—As a result of Thursday's fire there is but one grocery store left in town. All drug stores, boot and shoe stores, millinery and dry goods stores, jewelry shops and furniture stores, the post office and telegraph office were wiped out. Twenty families are rendered homeless. The loss is estimated at from $350,000 to $500,000—about two-thirds covered by insurance. It is thought that brick buildings will be erected in place of the frames burned.

Favors a Protectorate.

WASHINGTON Nov. 12.—The announcement that Paul Newman, formerly attorney general of the queen's cabinet, is en route to Washington on a secret mission for the queen is not a surprise to the state department. The department not only knows that he is coming but also what he is coming for. It is well known to naval officers here, who have a personal acquaintance with Mr. Newman, that he is strongly in favor of the United States assuming a protectorate over the Hawaiian islands, and there can be no doubt that the object of his mission here at the present time is to bring about such a result.

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 12.—A destructive fire broke out in the large peanut factory of the Merchants' and Farmers' Company, spreading on the west to the Ætna works and jumping over the street to the Gwaltney Bunkly Peanut Company, totally destroying the buildings. BLOWN TO ATOMS.

A Powder House at Niagara Falls Demolished by an Explosion—One Man Killed and Several Hurt.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Nov. 14. — A fearful explosion startled this city shortly before 10 a. m. Saturday. Houses, business blocks and hotels were swayed and windows shattered. The powder house of Douglas & Johnson, the canal and tunnel contractors, had exploded, killing John Hoban, master mechanic of all the immense works of the contractors. William Weir, an engineer, and Sherman Dismuth (colored), a fireman, were badly cut about the face, head and body. Search was made in the ruins for the bodies, which it was feared were to be found there, but none was discovered, and it was believed that all of the other men at work escaped.

Hoban was found lifeless at the foot of a large pile of rocks with a fearful gash in his throat. He had started to run from the boiler house when the explosion occurred and was picked up and hurled some 50 feet. It is thought his throat was torn by a sharp piece of rock. The other men, Weir and Dismuth, were fleeing for their lives when struck by flying pieces of timber and rock. Their condition is serious, but not necessarily fatal.

How the accident happened no one knows. Weir, the engineer, happened to look out of the engine house window and saw smoke issuing from the east side of the powder house. He turned to Hoban and excitedly exclaimed: "The powder house is on fire." The men made a dash for the open air, giving the alarm as they ran. The explosion took place as they fled, those who were in the various buildings on the canal escaping injury except from the terrible shock.

For the distance of 1 mile around windows, sashes and all, were blown out. Dishes on shelves were scattered, and in one house a baby was rendered unconscious from the shock. The employes in and about the canal and tunnel works had many narrow escapes. W. C. Johnson, one of the contractors, says that there was only 100 pounds of blasting powder in the house. This was 45 per cent. dynamite. The damage to buildings and houses is extensive and will foot up into thousands. All the windows on the west side of the Niagara Falls Paper Company's plant were torn out. The fronts of stores and houses on Buffalo street were badly shattered.

OHIO.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 14.—When the republican quarters closed Saturday night they had received official information from all the counties, Hamilton county being the last, which showed a plurality in the state for Taylor (rep.) of 1,054, and Danford, the head of the electoral ticket, 8,728. Danford runs several thousand ahead of the other republican electors, and Seward, the head of the democratic electors, runs four to five thousand ahead of his colleagues on the ticket. The general opinion is that Seward will be elected by defeating the elector who receives the smallest number of votes on the republican ticket. The figures received up to date undoubtedly show that the republicans will save their state ticket, elect twenty-two of the twenty-three electors and ten of the twenty-one congressmen. The democratic committee is doing nothing, but claim the official count will show who is elected or defeated.

ROASTED ALIVE BY A TRAMP.

A Pail of Coal Oil Poured on a Boy and His Clothes Set on Fire.

BRADFORD, Pa., Nov. 14.—Sunday afternoon a tramp, giving his name as Anthony Hanton or Quinn, took shelter in a small shanty on the bank of the Tuna creek, near the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh railroad shops, used by the small boys in the neighborhood as a playhouse. A number of boys were playing round the shanty and requested the tramp to get out. This enraged the tramp, who seized a pail of crude oil and threw it on John Leggett, aged 14. It is alleged that he then set fire to the boy's clothes. Young Leggett was frightfully burned all over the body, his face and head being literally cooked. The villain was captured and handed over to the police and is now in the lock-up. Young Leggett died after lingering four hours in great agony.

THE INAUGURATION.

Preparations Being Made Already for the Great Event of March 4 Next.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Already preparations are under way for the inauguration of Mr. Cleveland on March 4 next. It is the intention of democratic organizations in the larger cities to make it more notable than any similar event that has preceded it. Tammany Hall of New York, the Harrity club of Philadelphia, Iroquois club of Chicago and other similar organizations have already sent representatives to Washington to secure accommodations for their members who will be present and participate in the event. Estimates are heard fixing the number of marchers in the procession to celebrate the return of the democratic party to power at 50,000.

Dr. Jackson's death was caused by apoplexy, with which he was stricken ten days ago. DAVID C. COOK.

The Pioneer Publisher of Sunday School Literature.

David C. Cook, of Chicago, the widely-known publisher of Sunday-school literature, was born in East Worcester, New York, in 1850, a son of E. S. Cook, a Methodist minister, and from a child a member of the church and Sunday-school. He began working in the Sunday-school in Chicago at the age of seventeen, teaching in his own church school and at the same time in one, and much of the time two, mission schools meeting at different hours.

DAVID C. COOK.

In 1871, after the great fire, he left home and with three other young men, whom he persuaded to join him, rented rooms in one of the poorest and roughest parts of the burnt district of North Chicago, and gave himself to relief and mission work. Here he started "Everybody's Mission," in a German beerhall and theater, afterwards removed to a building of its own. This mission, with an attendance of 350 to 450, made up of some of the worst elements, he sustained for five years without financial aid from any church or society. He has since organized and superintended North Avenue Mission, Lake View Mission, and Lake View Union Schools in Chicago, and Grace Sunday School, Elgin, besides several smaller enterprises.

His first publications were prepared only for his own schools; then, to cheapen expense, he solicited orders from others. This was the beginning of a wonderful growth and popularity, which, in sixteen years, has made his name a household word.

THE FIRST WOODEN LEGS.

Who first invented wooden legs? It is impossible to give an exact and definite answer to the question; but there is some evidence to show that in the sixteenth century a wooden leg was regarded as somewhat of a novelty. One of the most famous surgeons France has ever produced was Ambroise Pare. He was surgeon to several of the French kings, and when, as a protestant, his life was in danger at the time of the St. Bartholomew massacre, the king, Charles the ninth, saved him by shutting him up in his own closet. His works, filling a great folio, were published towards the end of the sixteenth century, and went through many editions. In the fifth edition, published at Paris in 1598, there is figured a wooden leg which is practically the same as the article in use at the present time, and Pare gives such a very minute description of it that it is only reasonable to conclude that such a contrivance was then an unfamiliar object.

The one discovery above all others that has made Pare famous for all time was the plan, which he was the first to suggest, or tying the arteries after the surgical removal of a limb. In one part of his writings he gives a curious account of a case of successful amputation, in which he appears to have anticipated one of the latest of modern fads and to have used music as medicine. The patient had been wounded in battle. The famous surgeon took him in hand, successfully amputated the limb, using his new plan of tying the arteries, and when the sufferer began to mend, prescribed what the quaint English of the translation describes as "a consort of violins and a jester to make him merry." In a month the patient was able to hold himself up in a chair, and was carried down to the gate of his castle to see the people pass by.

A successful issue to such an operation must have been of rare occurrence, for we are told that "the country people of two or three leagues about, knowing they could see him, came the first day, male and female, to sing and dance pell-mell in joy of his amendment, all being very glad to see him, which was not done without good laughing and drinking."

"The camp being broken up," concludes Pare, "I returned to Paris with my gentleman, whose leg I cut off. I dressed him and God cured him. I sent him to his house merry with his wounded leg, and was content, saying that he had escaped good cheap not to have been miserably burned."

The success of Pare's comparatively simple and safe mode of procedure, as compared with the barbarous methods formerly in use, which inflicted horrible agony on the sufferer and too often ended in failure, must have led to a considerable growth in the demand for artificial limbs; and the wooden leg, which if not invented by the great French surgeon must certainly have been greatly improved by him, became a more frequent adornment of the wounded heroes of those fighting days.—All the Year Round.

Milk Cans, pans, churns, bottles, everything which is used for milk, even down to the baby's bottle—these are things for which you need Pearline. With Pearline, they're cleansed more easily, more quickly, more economically, and more thoroughly, than with anything else known. The people who know most about milk say just that. We can't afford to print all the testimonials we hold. They're free expressions of opinion—in conventions, in papers, everywhere where milk folks have a voice. Their enthusiasm about Pearline is genuine. And it's natural. For all kinds of washing and cleaning, nothing equals Pearline.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, if your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back. 881 JAMES PYLE, New York.

A CRIMINAL CRANK.

He Is Known in Washington as the "Treasury Hoodoo."

How He Produces Counterfeit Goverament Bills—Clever Game Worked on a Boston Merchant by a Woman—Bogus Government Bonds.

[Special Washington Letter.]

"Maybe our hoodoo is dead," said a prominent treasury department official to-day. 'We have not heard from him now for nearly a year," he continued, "and it may be that he is out of the country, seriously ill, or dead. When his hand is at rest, nobody will be able to duplicate his work."

We had been conversing about counterfeiters, and the means of detecting and punishing those criminals, when my friend referred to the "treasury hoodoo" in the words quoted above. It seems that, while the criminals who imitate the national currency are usually found out and punished, there is one man who has been counterfeiting for years, and has eluded the sharp, shrewd detectives who are constantly in the employ of Uncle Sam. This one man, however, is a sort of monomaniac, and is comparatively harmless. He produces only one counterfeit every six months, and it is usually only a fifty or a twenty-dollar bill. The department officials regard him rather as a crank than a criminal. He does his work with a pen, and it must take very nearly all of his time, for six months, to complete one of his imitations. The professional counterfeiters make plates and dies, whereby they can produce many thousands of dollars of their spurious goods, while this man, fortunately, can make but one at a time; and he usually makes only two in each year. The professional counterfeiters are all well known to the detectives and inspectors, and their number is very limited. Detection is certain, and the penitentiary receives them.

This one individual who has eluded detection is believed to be making nothing out of his work, and he apparently tries to make restitution, too. After executing and passing his counterfeit, a good note of the same value is inclosed in an envelope and sent to the treasury department, from the same town in which the counterfeit is made. This is evidently intended to pay back to the government the amount of the counterfeit; but the crank, whoever he is, does not make proper restitution. The good money sent to the treasury department is deposited in the "conscience fund;" but the last holder of the note loses the amount. The government loses nothing, for it rejects the counterfeit every time it turns up. These pen and ink imitations come to the department from different cities; and it is presumed that the "hoodoo" leaves as soon as he passes his note, and then goes to work upon another one in some other locality. Moreover, the note which he issues and passes may remain in circulation for some time before it reaches the treasury. Consequently, although nothing has been heard of from that source for nearly a year, one of the notes may now be in circulation. If so it will ultimately turn up at the treasury department, where it will be rejected and destroyed.

The work of this criminal crank is remarkably well done, and it takes a professional expert to detect one of his bills. He uses his pen very cleverly, reproducing exact imitations of the steel plate engravings of the distinguished men whose busts adorn the currency, and with ink of the exact tint which is used by the plate printers in the government bureau of engraving and printing. All of the fine lines are reproduced accurately, and the lettering is done most skillfully. The numbering, in red ink, is exactly the same size and tint as appears upon an original genuine note. Who he is, where he lives, why he continues this practice, are interesting questions which the secret service bureau has been unable to answer thus far; and the regular appearance of the notes exasperates and annoys the officers who are charged with the detection of crime. He may be wealthy; indeed, he must have some source of income, for his work brings him scarcely enough revenue to pay for the materials used by him. He may reside in Washington, or in California. He may have gone through the treasury some day as a visitor, and it is possible that one of the treasury guides has pointed out to him the two specimens of his handiwork which are preserved as curiosities in the museum.

TRACING A BOGUS NOTE TO ITS AUTHOR.

It would amaze you to spend an afternoon in the secret service bureau. Of course the officials cannot tell you one-hundredth part of what they know, nor exhibit to anyone more than a small portion of the evidences of counterfeiting in their possession. You will see, however, sufficient to show you what a dangerous business counterfeiting is. Those secret service experts can trace a bogus note to its author invariably; and the courts speedily place such criminals where they can do no more harm. The only notorious criminal undetected is the pen and ink hoodoo; and he is comparatively harmless. In reply to an inquiry as to why this criminal may not as well produce a $100 bill with his skillful pen, as well as a twenty or fifty, an official said: "He could undoubtedly produce one of that denomination, or even a $10,000 note. We wish that he would. Before any man would accept a hundred dollar note, or one of higher denomination, he would scrutinize it more closely, and he would also scrutinize the man who tendered it. As soon as this man produces a note of higher denomination, we will be able trace him, for we will know pretty soon where the bill was issued, and by whom. As it is, these counterfeits are so well made that almost any storekeeper would accept one of them pass it to a customer, who would in turn pass it to another business man, and so on through a hundred or more hands, so that we cannot trace it back to its author. If he will only produce a bigger note, we will have him in our custody."

One of the many instances of passing counterfeit bills is the following: A woman entered a store in Boston, purchased an expensive shawl and tendered a $1,000 bill. She waited quite awhile for her change, and finally, when the clerk brought it to her, she inquired what had caused the long delay. The clerk politely informed her that the bill was so large that he had gone to a bank near by to have it examined before he accepted it. Having found that it was a good bill, he brought her the change. She became very indignant at having her honesty questioned, refused to take the shawl, and started to leave the store with her $1,000 bill. Suddenly changing her mind, however, she came back and said that she would take the shawl rather than go hunting another, as that one just suited her. The clerk wrapped it up for her, took the bill, gave her the change, and away she went. An hour later, when the store sent its money to the bank, for the day's business, the note was declared to be a counterfeit. The chief of police was notified, detectives were sent to all the depots and wharves to watch for the woman, and she was captured as she was boarding a train. She had a good $1,000 bill in her pocket; and that was the one originally offered to the clerk. She had ten other bills, each of them of the $1,000 denomination, and they were counterfeits. She was going to New York to work the same scheme. She is now in the penitentiary. Moreover, the forger who made the bills is serving his sentence. These criminals cannot long keep out of the clutches of the law.

The museum of the secret service contains not only specimens of the work of this class of criminals, but the photographs of many of them—a rogues' gallery. The attendants and guides explain many things which would otherwise be passed unnoticed. For example, if you were to see an imitation five-dollar note, with an advertisement of a hair tonic on one end of it, you would not suppose that that was intended to be a counterfeit; and probably it was not originally so intended. But that advertisement has been passing among ignorant negroes in the south as a genuine five-dollar bill until it is nearly worn out. It was first given to the public in Chicago as a genuine advertisement, but some rascals gathered up a number of copies, took them south, and passed them as good money. Another very singular thing is the Chicago baseball bank note. It has a picture of Manager Spalding on the front, and the pictures of the baseball team on the back. That advertisement, which is an imitation of a gold certificate, was used as good money among ignorant people until it had to be suppressed. Yet when it was issued no harm was intended.

My attention was called to a $1,000 government bond which was counterfeit, and yet it is exactly like the good bonds of the government. Many years ago a certain bank in New York was given an order for a plate for a $1,000 bond. An expert engraver was put to work and faithfully executed the design which was furnished him. He worked all day on the plate for the government, and then he worked at night at home on a similar plate. Both were finished together. The government accepted the plate and paid for the work. Immediately after the government bonds were issued this engraver printed over $200,000 of similar bonds from his duplicate plate. It was as clever a crime as ever was committed. But before a single one of those counterfeits was issued the treasury detectives arrested the man who carried them to Chicago, and he is now in the penitentiary. From this you can judge how closely these detectives watch suspected men and how promptly they detect them. The law never shows any mercy to a counterfeiter.

THE VALUE OF DUST.

Its Particles Form Free Surfaces for the Collection of Vapor.

How can invisible particles be brought within the range of our vision? That was one of the first of the many marvelous discoveries of John Aitken, F. R. S., Falkirk, a distinguished physicist, whose remarkable work has revolutionized a branch of meteorology. He showed that without dust in the air there could be no fogs, no mist, no cloud, and probably no rain. The particles of dust are the free surfaces which, under certain conditions, attract the water vapor of the atmosphere to form fog. Invisible before, they become visible when clothed all over with the moisture; unseen as dust, they become distinct as fog particles.

This can be easily verified. If ordinary air be forced through a filter of cotton-wool into a glass receiver, it is deprived of all its dust particles. Let steam be introduced into this receiver from a boiler, no change will be observed, the vessel is quite transparent. but if a jet of steam be introduced into a smaller vessel containing ordinary air, it will be seen raising in a dense cloud; then a beautiful fog will be formed, so dense that it can not be seen through. In the former case, when there was no dust in suspension, the air remained clear; in the latter case, when the ordinary atmospheric dust was in the vessel, fog at once appeared. The invisible dust, then, is detected by the introduction of water vapor.

Until very lately it was thought that particles of water vapor combined with each other to form a cloud particle. But it is now found that some solid body, however small, is required for this formation. In fact, when there are no dust particles on which the water vapor at a proper temperature and pressure can condense, there is at present no knowledge as to the point at which the change will take place. But the fine particles of dust in the air act as free surfaces on which the water vapor condenses into fog. When there is abundance of dust in the air and little vapor present, there is an overproduction of dust particles, and the fog particles are in consequence closely packed, but light in form and small in size, and take the lighter appearance of fog. Accordingly, if the dust is increased in the air, there is a proportionate increase of fog.

But, on the other hand, if the dust particles are fewer in proportion to the number of molecules of water vapor each particle soon gets weighted, springs into visible existence as if by a creative hand, and falls in mist or rain. If the water vapor had no dust on which to settle it would use the objects on the surface of the ground for the same end, as the grass, leaves, tree branches or house projections. Moisture would then be ever dripping. The occasional genial rain, though at times lashed up to a biting storm of sleet, would require to give place to a constant wetness on the roads and grass. Umbrellas would not be needed, but india rubber protectors for the feet and legs would be in constant requisition. Even the irritable housekeeper, ever annoyed at the unaccountable appearance of dust in the rooms which she left for clean, would prefer the old necessary evil in this dry-dust form than see the walls dripping and the floor wet.

THE RIGHT POSITION.

My Lady Spinster's Attitude Toward the Marriage Question.

The healthiest attitude for the single woman to assume toward the marriage question is also the happiest. She may and should consider that a true, pure love is the greatest earthly blessing that the Creator has to bestow on her sex—the one gift not lost in Paradise. But to think constantly and with discontent of this one blessing, when for any cause it is either delayed or denied, is the surest possible way to unfit one's self for giving or receiving happiness.

Frankly grant to yourself and to your friends, if you like, that some day you hope to meet a man whom you can love and respect, but let discussion end there. Anything more unwomanly and revolting than a cold calculation of possibilities, taking an inventory of the eligible men in one's circle of acquaintance, or deliberately planning to attract or win another by assuming to be what one is not, can hardly be imagined. What true woman could for a moment enjoy that affection which she had deliberately plotted to win by deceit or misrepresentation?

Having acknowledged her natural desire for the common lot of her sex, the single sister goes bravely and happily on her way, taking up the duty that is nearest, and living a perfectly natural life, wasting no time in laying plots, in idle complaining or wicked envy. To the married friend who boasts of her home and family she accords fullest liberty, but claims that she also has great cause for happiness in freedom and golden opportunities. Her vacation days are not dependent on the school calendar or the demands of any man's business cares. She is free to elect where she will go, who shall be her companion, and how long she will stay. The sail or excursion party from which her married sister is debarred by an untoward attack of measles or whooping-cough in the nursery is possible to her. Her dresses may be light or dark, high or low, grave or gay. She has no quarrel to settle with the neighbor's children, no piles of little trousers and stockings to mend. She may sit down in her easy chair when evening comes with a volume of Scott or Browning. She would like the little faces at her hearth, the little homely cares, much better than Scott or Browning very likely; but since she has them not, she has a right to be happy in the ways that naturally suggest themselves to a woman living alone.

If marriage never comes, if her heart never responds to any demand for its affection, she may without bitterness assert that for her a single life has been best, since it is the one chosen for her by a wiser One than herself. The unmarried woman who allows herself to live in an atmosphere of unrest, envy and discontent, because she is not provided with home and husband, can ever learn the secret of happy living. If, instead of taking a sensible view of the matter, she constantly wears the willow and longs for what has not been vouchsafed her, she not only unfits herself for present duties, but for a happy married life, if the opportunity is offered.—Harper's Bazar.

—The Corn crop in this vicinity, is the best farmers have had for years.

—Butter and eggs are scarce and command good prices with our local merchants.

—Some of as fine hogs as can be seen anywhere are being sold, live weight in the Delano market, almost every day.

—A Thanksgiving Dance is announced to take place at the city hall, on Thursday evening, Nov. 24, under the auspices of the Delano Cornet Band.

—Dr. Cassel returned home from Europe where he has spent several months in medical studies in time to increase the Democratic vote of Cokato by one vote.

—Ig. Murphy threatens to have one of the costliest champagne suppers he can conceive of in a few days, at the expense of the editor-in-chief of the Eagle, because Cleveland got elected.

—Quite a lot of sorghum was manufactured in Wright county this year. This is one of the most profitable crops where properly cared for, and the season is favorable, that can be raised on a small scale.

—Louis Borell, of Woodland, while on the hay scales, weighing some hogs allowed his team to get away from him. They indulged in a short but lively runaway. Damage about $3.00 to Pat. Haverty's buggy which happened to be in the road.

—Sam Pape, who has been depot agent for a couple of weeks at Cokato has again taken up his abode in Delano. He gives the most glowing accounts of the late election in Cokato and Stockholm, and says he can tell a "blind pig" as far as the next one.

—A lively runaway took place, on Monday about noon on R.R. Ave. Provision for tying teams should be made at the elevators and lumber yard so that when the trains come in, horses from the country that are not used to such sights may be kept from running away.

—Among improvements going on in town we notice a foundation for house and barn near L. M. Maxfield's residence. A new walk to the front door of the M. E. parsonage, new sidewalk at Ri. Dyer's. Some new boards on the depot platform, and a foundation for J. E. Steward's new house on third street.

—Rev. Jabez Blackhurst, of Litchfield, preached to a large audience of his former hearers, at this place, on Sunday evening. His old friends were pleased to hear him and think he retains his powers as a preacher and even adds to them. Mrs. B. accompanied him and they spent a couple of days visiting in town before returning home.

—The Montrose News says: "It is an interesting fact to us that every candidate in the county that read the News was successful." Didn't the News find out we were running for office, or does it think the county doesn't extend beyond the village limits of Montrose, or does it count those elected to stay at home, also. We read the News and find it quite fair and spicy.

—D. K. Carlton, one of Greenwood's democrats was in town a few days before election and made strenious efforts to obtain bets on the presidential outcome, he backing Cleveland. We understand he succeeded in getting Gutzwiller to put up 50 cts., and several, more enthusiastic supporters of Harrison, larger amounts. While several flatly refused to bet after all their bluffs.

—William Gent, of Greenwood, was a GAZETTE caller one day this week. He informs us that he raised an acre of corn for Northrop, Broslan & Goodwin Co., Minneapolis, this summer; they furnished seed, charging him 12 cents and one bag, 20 cts., freight to Minneapolis was $5.11, making an outlay of $5.43. He raised from the acre of new ground, 58 13-100 Dakota dent corn which he got 45 cts per bushel, making $26.10 deducting the expenses of $5.43 leaves $20.67, for his trouble. Louis Strauch also shipped the product of 1¼ acres, 95 bushels, to the same firm. $20. per acre for corn looks like profit to the farmer.

for the BUFFALO GAZETTE.

—The trial of John Haffteen is in progress today in Esq. Billings' court. County Att'y. Cutting and M. A. O'Hair have charge of the case on opposite sides.

—The speech made by Mr. Smith, of Minneapolis, at the Delano barbecue was pronounced by all, a first class ratification oration. He complimented, as all do, the noble character of Grover Cleveland, and dealt no spiteful blows at the opposition.

—The Democaatic Barbecue and Ratification meeting held last night was a grand success. The town was crowded with people. The parade was good except there was nothing like enough torches to go around. Hanseman & Co's. boat was hauled around with a representation of Ben. Harrison on his salt river voyage. Several very suggestive and appropriate transparencies were born aloft by enthusiastic citizens. Sam Pape being among the foremost in that direction. While the Delano Cornet Band discoursed fine strains the people paraded the streets. Messrs. Smith and Quist, of Minneapolis, and Cutting and Wendell, of Buffalo, furnished the oratorial works. The ox was discussed till there was but the bones remaining. The ladies furnished supper for many at the hall, and everybody went home apparently satisfied that the country would continue to prosper under four years of Democratic rule.

IN MEMORIAM

Of Brother John Steffes of Washington Grove No. 9, U. A. O. D.

It has pleased the Supreme Architect of the Universe to summon from his labors on earth our beloved Brother John Steffes, calling him by his omnipotent will to that judgment which awaits all who are toiling in this earthly temple. By his demise the Druids fraternity has lost a true Druid and a worthy brother and the community an honorable and respected citizen.

In his youth a pioneer in the state and county, a volunteer in the same and defender of the Union in the civil and Indian war. He was a member and Vice Arch of our United Order of Druids. As in the Grove a true and upright Druid, skilled in the work of Druidism, he was before the world a man of good report, a citizen and friend to any neighbor.

He was stricken down in the meridian of his life after but a few months of sickness a man of strength and vigor, with the prospect of many years of usefulness to his family and friends, and now the Druidic ties which have so long bound us in mutal friendship and enjoyment to our departed brother are severed no more to be united until the day when the grave shall yield up its dead, but although Brother John Steffes will not meet, act and part with us any more the United Ancient Order of Druids sincerely realize the loss of our brother to his family, and earnestly sympathize with the bereaved widow and children, relatives and friends and would point them to that consolation alone attainable from above which the world can neither give or take away.

County Cullings.

D. R. Topping, of Minneapolis, who has been assisting at the Waverly Tribune office through the campaign now assumes control, editors Tanner and Quinn retiring. May success attend your efforts brother, in giving the people a clean democratic paper.

The Buffalo Gazette for one while carried the picture of Thomas Wilson as the next governor of Minnesota but had to lay it away. Then it sported the picture of the man who said he belonged to nobody and wore no collars, as the next governor of this state, now the editor will, most likely have to take down that picture and lay it away tenderly amongst the relics of his sanctum. So mote it be.—Buffalo Journal.

It was not our intention to indulge in twitting our neighbors on their defeats, but, as the able Senatorial editor, at Buffalo has seen fit to allude to our preferences in this way we will say we are tenderly caring for the cuts of Hon. Thomas Wilson and Hon. Daniel W. Lawler and will, doubtless, haye occasion at some future time to again place them in our columns. They are two men democrats, and the citizens of Minnesota may well be proud of Either of them would represent our state in the United States senate in an honest and dignified manner, or either of them could, doubtless, be elected governor of Minnesota two years from, now when the senator, whose term of office then expires, will, more than likely, fail to secure even a renomination for his present position and when he can add to his stock of cuts of defeated candidates consisting of James. G. Blaine, Benjamin Harrison, Senator Davis, Congressman Searle, his own senatorial likeness, or melt them up for "slugs" at which business he is an expert. He might also re-mould those long editorials that appeared in all the county Republican papers, concerning "Deep water ways." "A desirable candidate," etc., etc., ending up with eulogies on Judge Searle. Taking all into consideration we are of opinion that the Journal lacks nothing for pictures of defeated candidates. And we are sure ours will compare favorably with theirs in any manner, the senator sees fit to examine them. We stand ready to defend ours against any and all aspersions or insinuations of the gentleman from Buffalo at all times and on all occasions. Now wade in or wade out. None of your poking fun at us or at our candidates.

To be Successful Is Duty.

It is the duty of every one to be as successful in life as he honestly can. Success is a part of the symmetry, the wholeness, the grace of life. One has no more right to ruin or harm his own prospects than he has to ruin or harm the prospects of another; and is it not plain that anything which mars the wholeness, the grace, which is the birthright every one should claim lessens in a greater or less degress his chances of success.

Now does someone say that material success is not especially to be coveted? If you declare, my dear girl, that success in spiritual things, in one's efforts to be white-hearted, clean-handed, noble-souled, is far more to be desired than success in material things, we shall certainly agree; but it is to the white-hearted, clean-handed, noble-souled, that "all things" are to be "added." And what is more natural and right than that one with strong heart and clear brain, and a mind open to all the leadings of life, should be successful? There is nothing praiseworthy, nay, I believe there is something blameworthy, in being poor when one can worthily be rich, or have a modest and comfortable fortune. The atmosphere in which we live is a great formative factor in our lives; and whatever ennobles and refines that atmosphere should be highly prized and duly appreciated. Good surroundings help to make good souls, and beautiful things cause beautiful thoughts. There is a gospel of THINGS, and it is a most potent gospel. "Whatever makes us happier, makes us better," says George Eliot; and whatever keeps the mind at peace, and the body comfortable, that enable us to make sad faces and gloomy places glad, must make us happier, and, accordingly, better. A competence helps towards the wholeness, the symmetry, the gracefulness of life.—From "Our Girls," in Demorest's Family Magazine for December.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.
The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.
The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.
And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault.

ONE GOOD FEELING.

What's a fair or noble face
If the mind ignoble be?
What though beauty in each grace
May her own resemblance see!
Eyes may catch from heaven their spell,
Lips the ruby light recall;
In the home for love to dwell,
One Good feeling's worth them all.

Give me virtue's rose to trace
Honor's kindling glance and mien;
Howsoever plain the face
Beauty is where these are seen!
Raven ringlets o'er the snow
Of the whitest neck may fall;
In the home for love we know
One good feeling's worth them all.

WHEN it becomes necessary for men in order to get work whereby to earn their daily bread, and procure food for their families to so far surrender their rights as American citizens, as to be obliged to sign a contract that they will or that they will not belong to certain societies, whether of labor or of politics or religion or what not, it seems to us they are taking a step backward. It looks to us as if they were striding on towards slavery. It appears to us as if they were placing their necks in what will soon become a galling yoke. When before a man can procure a day's work to keep the wolf from his door, he must sign a paper saying he will not be a member of any labor society it seems to us he is doing a thing he will sooner or later regret. Although it may not be necessary to be a member it is a pretty hard state of affairs to be obliged to contract not to join if you should see fit. And yet we have recently read that this very thing was required of all men engaging to work for an eastern firm in our own boasted free country. Why, when it has become customary to pledge to belong to no labor union, or society, it is but a step to oblige the applicant for work to contract to go to no church where the boss does not give his permission, to listen to no sermon, to attend no lecture without first obtaining a pass from the boss. To affiliate with no political party not in accord with the wishes of the boss. At this rate how long would it be before every laboring man would be a slave to the employee, bound faster than ever the negroes of the south in anti-belum days to the wishes of the masters? Would not a breach of contract at any time throw him out of employment? Would not he be completely at the mercy of his hirer? Would he not be bound in time to give up much that is dear to him, and to his family, dear to every American citizen? Can not other means than these be found for settling the questions between employer and employe?

SEVERAL of our local Republicans, mostly Uncle Sam's P. M's. and those who were so certain of the g. o. p,s. triumph at the late election as to have risked and lost money are very much worried to know what the Democrats are going to do, now they are in power?

THE National Convention of the Farmers' Alliance in session at Memphis, last week adopted a set of resolutions antogonistic to the International Monetary Conference, and complaining that this move would not be in accord with the Monroe doctrine, and says the Constitution makes it the duty of Congress to coin money and regulate the value of the same.

IT is claimed that at the meeting of Catholic archbishops in New York, last week, Archbisp Ireland's views on the school question prevailed and that resolutions were passed that all Catholic scholars should be provided with parish school facilities as far as possible. Those not provided for should be provided with Sunday schools and other means of instruction in Catholic beliefs.

COUNTRY millers complain that the products of their mills cannot be sold in Minneapolis. That the retailers of flour in the mill city dare not handle the country brands or they will be boycotted by city people. This ought not to be the case. If the city mills cannot compete with country mills in the city, how can they afford to sell city brands in country places for less than the country price?

CONGRESSMAN WILSON, of West Va. favors an extra session of Congress and a thorough overhauling of the tariff laws at once, so that people may see the effects of so-called free trade, in time to know its benefits before the next election rolls round, and the Democrats not get caught as Republicans claim to with their McKinley bill and have to submit to a defeat with the same excuse. This would be good politics.

REPUBLICAN United States Senatorial candidates appear as previously predicted to be plenty, and becoming more and more so every day. William R. Merriam has shied his castor into the ring in a two column article in the dailies, on the political situation. Dwight M. Sabine is reported as being on a still hunt at which he is said, by good judges, to be an expert and sure enough C. K. Davis is the most anxious man in Minnesota and liable to be until the legislature decides the matter and makes its choice of a man to represent us at Washington. United States Senatorial Electorial colleges are not so certain in their action as even the Presidential electorial college is. "There is many a slip betwixt the cup and the lip."

Tariff Pictures.

In Rockerville, Conn., there are several large worsted mills, where men receive

—New York Press.

And in the face of the Press and other Republican papers desperate efforts to make people believe this was a better state of affairs for the people, and due to the beneficial effects of protective tariff. Conn., cast her vote with the big majority of the people and helped elect Grover Cleveland and denounced the McKinley bill. The uncommon work done in Minnesota saved the state, by a plurality to the g. o. p. Through sympathy for the poor downtrodden laborer in the east, the western farmers were made to believe the best thing to do was to vote for protection to home industries, even if they were century old infants, and save the country. The down east working men have been investigating for themselves for several years past and concluded to try the other way, for a while at least and outvoted the folks. Consequently we are led to infer that those most interested in and who know most about the needs of the manufacturers employes take no stock in such tariff pictures as the above.

Tariff Is a Tax.

Prophesies Its Disruption.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 21.—Dr. C. W. He said: "The Alliance is simply a party machine, and will continue so for at least one year.—St. Paul Globe.

Will See Stars.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 22.—Dr. James E. Sullivan, city chemist and astronomer of some note, in the discussion of some promised celestial phenomena in connection with the Bielas comet, said that the stars would probably fall on the night of the 27th instant. There are men living now, he said, who remember the years two generations ago when the stars "fell." It was the most brilliant meteoric shower recorded in history. He says the comet's appearance at the time set for the display of meteors in the constellation Lee every thirty-three years will add to the phenomena exhibited in that quarter.—The St. Paul Daily News.

Dr. Depew Outlines the Future Policy of the Republicans.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—The World this morning prints an interview with Chauncey M. Depew, in which he outlines what he believes will be the futnre policy of the Republican party. He says that there will be no reconstruction, and it will continue to be the party of progress. Reverses will simply stimulate its energies to renewed efforts and renewed triumphs. The first plank in the Republican platform for 1896, Mr. Depew declares, will be for a protective tariff. It will not be the McKinley bill, but the protective policy will be resorted to.

The policy of the party on immigration, Mr. Depew further declares, will be to place additional restriction about it, but the force bill issue will be put aside. Mr. Depew added that there were no new leaders in sight, and that Mr. Harrison would fill the place left vacant by Mr. Cleveland's promotion to the presidency and greatly enlarge it. He will be for the next four years the one private citizen whose very appearance will command the attention of the whole country.

Serious Car Famine.

ABERDEN S. D., Nov. 21.—A complete grain blockade exists at Langford, Pierpoint and other towns on the Milwaukee line east of here, and considerable demoralization is felt all over the system in this part of the West. The shortage of cars was never so great before, and farmers and shippers are in the dumps badly. In the little town of Pierpoint alone there are 40,000 or 50,000 bushels of wheat awaiting shippment. The elevators and all the vacant buildings are full to bursting and there are scores of heavily loaded wagons standing around, the owners of which have returned home without making a sale. Many farmers who came to town with loads were forced to return with them. The situation at Langford and other towns is much the same, and considerable annoyance is felt. There is not a station that is not hampered in greater or less degree. Farmers have been improving the fine weather by getting their grain to market, and now, in a great many instances, find that it is impossible to make a sale at any price. Relief cannot come in full in a good many weeks. —St. Paul Globe.

Campaign Funds.

An appeal from Chairman Carter, of the Republican national committee has found its way into print. He wants $225,000 to meet a deficit of that size which exists in the Republican campaign fund. Perhaps he might get some subscriptions if he would take the public into his confidence and tell them to what uses the enormous sums he had under his control were put. The public would pay something for this information.

But there is that which will never be known any more than will the avenues along which the campaign fund of the Minnesota Republican state central committee was disbursed this year. The Democracy has offered to throw its books open to general inspection, and account for every dollar it recieved, if the Republicans will do the same thing. But the Republicans have declined the challenge. Chairman Jamison says that the proposition is absurd.

But, if it is absurd, why not do it? It is the part of the patriotic to amuse the dear people. This really is no excuse. The only excuse the Republicans can have for their refusal is that some of their expenditures were not legitimate. The GLOBE hopes that the next legislature will pass a corrupt practice act, making the completest publicity in these matters imperative. We have need of such a law in Minnesota.—The St. Paul Globe.

Some Sound Talk.

The Christian Association building at the State University was crowded beyond its seating capacity at the Sunday afternoon meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association by students who came to hear President Northrop discourse upon "The Best Use of Time in College,"

There was but one longing he had impossible of satisfaction, the president said, and that was that he might be young again, to play a part in settling the questions which those before him would meet.

"I believe in football, provided it does not become brutal. I want every student who has come to this institution to go out with as good health as he brings, and better if possible. Nevertheless, it is well to remember that you do not come to college to play ball. Nor do you come here primarily to practice Christianity. You come here for learning and culture."

In speaking of fidelity in study stress was laid upon the necessity of learning to acquire quickly. It can be done. The president does not want his students to neglect the social side of their nature.

"When you tell me this is an age of unbelief I take no stock in it whatever. It may be that some man doubts this or that dogna; or some scientist makes a discovery which has bearing on a disputed question. But when you tell me that our young men are out of range of religious influence I don't believe it. The questions of when shall I go, and where, and how shall it be with me are alive in every heart. Thank God the battle is not to be fought in the old style, but you are to proclaim a Christianity that is faith in God and that is brotherhood. To the misery that is in the world you are to qualify to carry comfort. If you are to have an inspiration for future years you must have it now."

The president closed with an eloquent touch of American history and an appeal for a life in the present. After referring to the struggle for emancipation, he said no one could write a history of that period for him for he had lived it.

"You should live in things that are passing; you should partake in the struggle of labor and capital and in the settlement of the disturbing questions of faith. I do not want you to go out from here puny and hot house plants without a knowledge of out side force. —The Evening Tribune.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Nov. 18, 1892.

"President-elect Cleveland will not call an extra session of Congress, unless the republican Senate shall at the coming session by hanging up or defeating some necessary appropriation or measure compel him to do so." The speaker of the above is a democrat who took a prominent part in the campaign, and who has just returned from New York where he had a number of conferences with the president-elect. He is opposed to an extra session of Congress, believing that it would be bad business as well as bad politics, as indeed do many other democrats who were at first inclined to think it good policy to hold an extra session for tariff legislation. Unless the prominent republicans who have turned up in Washington since the election are mistaken an attempt is to be made in Senate to make an extra session necessary by leaving undone things that ought to be done. This is not to be done openly, but by parliamentary chicanery at which the republican Senators are adepts.

Senator Carlisle, who is regarded by many as the next secretary of state, thinks Mr. Cleveland's little speech at his banquet of the New York Chamber of Commerce will have a happy effect in counteracting the causeless business scare which the Republicans are trying so hard to extend over the country. The sensible men of the country know full well that the prosperity of this country is in no danger at the hands of the Democratic party, but if they had been ever so uneasy these words from Democracy's chosen leader and president would be sufficient to reassure them. "We are all interested as Americans in a common pursuit. Our purpose is, or ought to be, in our several spheres, to add to the general fund of national prosperity. From this fund we are all entitled to draw, perhaps not equally, but justly, each receiving a fair portion of individual prosperity. Let us avoid trampling on each other in our anxiety to be first in the distribution of shares, and let us not attempt to appropriate the share of another." Is this the language of a conspirator against the country's welfare, or of a patriotic citizen who believes in every man being given a chance to enjoy the greatest attainable prosperity?

Senator Carlisle, who only stopped in Washington a few hours, on his way to see his family, said of an extra session question: "It will depend upon conditions at this time undeveloped, and which only time will develop. If there is an extra session it will probably not meet until late in the fall. The tariff alone will not furnish sufficient reason for an extra session. The financial affairs of the government may be such as to make an extra session imperative. It appears probable that we shall find that there is not enough money in the treasury for the needs of the Government. There is a situation in treasury which every thoughtful man who has considered the matter has long foreseen. There is an accumulation of deficiencies and obligations that have been contracted and will come over to us. It may be that this situation will furnish reason enough why an extra session should be called. We shall have to see what is done at this session of congress. If the Sherman silver law be not repealed, and other action such as the situation demands taken we may be swamped. Upon these things depend the calling of an extra session."

Representative Wilson, of West Virgina, who presided over the convention which nominated Cleveland and Stevenson, and who has now gone to New York upon the invitation of Mr. Cleveland (many believe that he can have a place in the cabinet, if he desires it) is one of the strongest advocates for the holding of an extra session of congress as soon as practicable after the inauguration, and following are his reasons: "The time worth and value of a tariff bill cannot be tested in a short time, and the first effects appear to be sometimes what they really are not. I think it would be most impolitic to place a new tariff bill before the country just previous to the elections of 1894. For this reason I favor the extra session idea and think the sooner the prosposed tariff changes go into effect the better will the final result be for our party."

Democratic organizations intending to come to the inauguration would better "get a move on their application for quarters or they may have to sleep in tents so rapidly are rooms being already booked. The same chairman who made such a magnificient success of the first Cleveland inauguration has been put at the head of the citizen's inaugural committee and the perliminary arrangements are already well under way.

The crocodile tears now being shed by Secretary Noble and Superintendent Porter, because two Census bureau employes have been detected in crooked work, one trying to steal votes in New York and the other furnishing the Government false reports on Alaska, for use before the Behring Sea Court of Arbitration, are odd to say the least, when the record of the Bureau is called to mind.

There are to-day more than 200,000 women in the United States earning a living in the practice of law and medicine, the teaching of music and art, literature and science, and in clerical work of different kinds in government and other official places, to say nothing of those employed at mechanical labor in shops.

WHEN you see "genuine attar of roses" offered on the "bargain counter" for 25 cents a half-pint, you are justified in suspecting that article, remarks the Buffalo Commercial. The real "attar" comes in copper canteens which weigh about twenty ounces. They are valued at $100 apiece. The present supply of attar is chiefly derived from a small tract of country on the southern side of the Balkan mountains, in the Turkish province of Roumania. The principal seat of the trade is in the town of Kizanlik. It takes 7,500 pounds of damask roses to produce 2¼ pounds of pure attar.

LATER NEWS.

Killed by Carelessness.

GRAND ISLAND, Neb., Nov. 23.—Not in several years has a more serious and distressing accident occurred on the Union Pacific road than the one which took place this morning at 6:30 o'clock at Alda siding, eight miles west of Grand Island, when express train No. 8, going at a rate of forty-five miles an hour, crashed into an extra freight train standing on the track. The passenger train which was due here at 5 o'clock and at Omaha at 10:40 was nearly an hour and a half late. The engineer, McDonald, of the passenger train, determining to make up some of the time, pulled the throttle open with the result stated.

The men killed were: J. W. Keller, conductor of the freight, Grand Island; leaves a wife and two children. Barney McDonald, engineer of the passenger, North Platte; leaves a wife but no children. A TRIPLE TRAGEDY.

A Milwaukeean Loses His Mind Through Fear of Being Thrown Out of Work—While Crazed He Murders His Wife and Child and Commits Suicide.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 22.—William R. Binder, bookkeeper for the Liedersdorf Tobacco Company, shot and killed his wife, his 5-year-old daughter, and himself. The affair occurred at the home of the family, 876 Cambridge avenue. The hired girl employed by the Binder family is the only person who knows anything about the way the tragedy occurred. She arose, she said, at about 5:30 or 5:45 o'clock, and she heard Mr. Binder stirring in the bathroom. She went downstairs, and finding that the fire had gone out in the furnace, she relighted it and started to do her regular household duties, preparatory to breakfast. While at work she heard reports which sounded like explosions, but she paid no attention to them. Breakfast being ready, she rang the bell, and afterwards went to the bedroom door and knocked loudly on it. Failing to get a response, she opened the door and discovered the horrible tragedy. She summoned a neighbor, who found that Mrs. Binder and the little girl were still alive, but the former died before a physician arrived. The little girl died at noon. All the victims were shot behind the left ear, blowing their brains out. Binder and his wife were found lying on one bed and the child on a smaller bed in the same room. The sight was a horrible one. A consolidation between the Liedersdorf Company and the Merchants' Tobacco works was effected a few days ago, and, it is thought, fear that he would have to accept a subordinate position in the office affected Binder's mind. He was about 38 years of age, his wife 32, and the child 5 years. His parents reside at Saginaw, Mich.

EXPLOSIONS IN A MINE.

Three Persons Killed Outright and Several Others Fatally Hurt.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 22.—Three men were instantly killed, three others fatally and several others badly injured by a terrible explosion Monday afternoon in the Blanche mine at Collier's station, W. Va., on the Pan-Handle railroad. Forty-five men had been working in the mine, but at the time of the explosion only about one-half of them were inside. One of the miners, it is reported, struck a match and had no sooner done it than a terrific explosion of gas followed. The flame from this ignited ten cans of powder standing near the mouth of the mine, and a second and more powerful explosion occurred. The killed are:

The fatally injured are:

John Anderson, colored: Robert Anderson, colored; Lawrence Campbell.

The others hurt are:

Two Italians whose names are not known are reported to be missing. They were in the mine at the time of the explosion and have not been seen since. The force of the explosion was so great that the three Andersons, who were brothers, were blown clear out through the mouth of the mine. Many more of the miners were more or less seriously burned and cut up by the explosion and narrowly escaped suffocation, five of them being rescued from the mine in an apparently lifeless condition, but they were soon revived and removed to their homes.

WANT TO DIVIDE KANSAS.

A Scheme on Foot to Cut the State Into Two Equal Parts.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 22.—A movement has been inaugurated in the Seventh congressional district to divide Kansas into two states, each of which shall have an area of 200 miles square. It is proposed to bring the question up in the legislature, which convenes in January, divide the state with a line running north and south on the western boundary of Jewell county, and request congress to concur. The project has frequently been broached before, but the western half of the state has always protested against it. Now, however, it is the people in the extreme west who demand the division. The demand is based both on political and material grounds.

A MANIAC'S DEED.

Herman Siegler, a Chicagoan, in a Fit of Sudden Jealous Frenzy Kills His Mother-in-Law and Her Husband, Wounds His Wife and Two Others and Is Shot by an Officer in a Struggle to Escape Arrest.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—Herman Siegler, a cabinetmaker living at No. 723 North Paulina street, got up early Sunday morning, went to his brother's house and borrowed a shotgun on the pretext that he wanted to go hunting, returned home, shot and killed his father and mother-in-law, seriously wounded his wife and filled a policeman's nose full of buckshot, he in return getting a bullet in his abdomen from another officer's revolver.

His work of death was done mainly in the house in which he lived, but after policemen were summoned the battle waged between him from the house and the officers from the street. He emptied a doubled-barreled shotgun at them a dozen times and bullets from their revolvers flew in his direction as rapidly as fingers could pull the triggers.

Thousands of people, attracted by the fusillade, swarmed around the house, and when Officer Dan McCarthy finally grappled with and overcame the murderer they fairly howled for his blood. Some one started the cry, "Lynch him!" and it was taken up by excited men and women. Although four patrol wagon loads of officers were on the ground they had a herculean task to prevent the infuriated people from making short shrift of the then cowering murderer. He was finally removed in safety to the East Chicago avenue police station and subsequently to the county hospital.

Until Sunday, so far as can be learned, there had been no trouble between any of the persons in the house. Siegler arose early Sunday morning after a sleepless night and after a hasty breakfast hurried away, making petulent answers to his wife's queries as to where he was going. He went direct to the home of his brother and borrowed a shotgun, ostensibly to go hunting.

On reaching home, shortly after noon, Herman called his 10-year-old son Willie, and cursed him, then ran back to the closet in the rear of the kitchen, where he had placed the shotgun, dragged it out, pulled shells from his pocket and hurriedly loaded both barrels. The son screamed:

"Papa, put down that gun."

Mrs. Siles, the 70-year-old mother-in-law, who was upstairs, hearing the child crying, ran down into the narrow hall and called out: "Herman, what are you doing with that gun?"

He turned on her savagely and muttered: "Judgment day has come. I am God. You must die." Without another word he leveled the gun and fired. The muzzle was but a foot from her and the entire load took effect in her left breast, and with a scream she fell dead at his feet.

Mr. Siles, hearing the shot and the scream of his murdered wife, came running downstairs. Though an old man and frail he tried to grapple with the murderer. Siegler threw him off easily, drew down his gun and shot him. The load of buckshot tore through Siles' right arm and entered his side. He fell prostrate over his murdered wife, but managed to again grapple with Siegler, As they struggled for possession of the gun Mrs. Siegler and her children ran for the front door.

As she threw it open Mr. Siles, weak from loss of blood and unable to continue the fight, made his escape, closely followed by Siegler. Mr. Siles turned again when on the sidewalk and threw up his hand in a deprecating way, when Siegler shot him again in the neck and face and the old man fell over dead.

Turning from this body Siegler saw his wife, babe in arms, running down the street. As she looked back he leveled the gun at her. She screamed: "O, Herman!" as he fired. The shots struck in the back of the shoulder, side of the neck and right arm. She saved the life of her child by changing its position in her arms. Seeing that his wife had escaped Siegler gave a look down the street and then ran into the house.

The quick succession of shots seemingly aroused the entire neighborhood and thousands of people came running from all directions. Some citizens turned in an alarm to the police and the North avenue station patrol wagon came rattling up. Officers Simmonsen and Looby ran up to the house with drawn revolvers. Siegler pushed open the front door, stepped out, and taking deliberate aim at Simmonsen fired, but fortunately missed him. The plucky officer leveled his revolver and fired three shots, the last bullet striking Siegler in the side, and he thereupon retreated into the house.

Officers surrounded the house, and a fusilade of shots were exchanged, during which Officer Donoghue was badly wounded. Finally emerging from the house Siegler advanced on the officers with his gun leveled, when Detective McCarthy ran up from behind, and soon had him safely pinioned. Then followed the exciting scene of his removal to the station, and the attempted lynching by the infuriated crowd, narrated at the beginning of this dispatch. At the station Siegler made a statement. It was short, incoherent and indicative of insanity. He was afterwards taken to a hospital.

SECRETARY RUSK.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The report of the secretary of agriculture has been submitted to the president. The report begins with a comparison of the export trade of the last fiscal year with that of former years, and emphasizes the fact that of the more than $1,000,000,000, representing the exports of our domestic products for the last year, nearly 80 per cent. consisted of agricultural products, thus not only making the United States the creditor of the world for a sum exceeding $200,000,000—the excess of our exports over imports—but relieved our home markets from a surplus product which would otherwise have reduced prices to a point below the cost of production. For a large share in bringing about the conditions which have made these gratifying results possible the secretary claims credit for his department.

In regard to imports he finds encouragement for the farmers in the fact that in spite of an aggregate increase there is a reduction in the proportion of imports consisting of products which compete with our American agriculture, for, while in the fiscal year ended in 1889 54 per cent. of the imports were competing, only 44 per cent. of our imports for the last fiscal year did so compete. He nevertheless regards imports competing with the products of our own soil as still far too great. He instances $40,000,000 worth of animal products, $67,000,000 worth of fibers, $27,000,000 worth of hides, $20,000,000 worth of fruits and wines, as articles of this kind, and cites the imports of raw silk, amounting to $25,000,000 yearly, as an instance of products imported which could with proper encouragement be produced in our own country. He declares these figures to indicate the main ultimate object of the work of the department, which he defines, in brief, as "the closest study of all markets abroad which may be reached by our own agricultural products, accompanied by persistent and intelligent efforts to extend them and the substitution in our own markets of home-grown for foreign-grown products."

The report shows an increase of 40,000,000 pounds of pork sent to countries which formerly excluded American pork, and $40,000,000 value increase in exports of live cattle. All this comes from the increased precautions to secure healthfulness of American food products. The regulations enforced for the prevention of Texas fever alone have saved cattle growers more than three times the cost of running the whole department. And as to the suppression of pleuro-pneumonia, the secretary grows emphatic. Notwithstanding the assertions to the contrary of London newspapers, he again declares that pleuro-pneumonia does not exist in the United States. This result, he claims, has been obtained at a cost less by $100,000 than was paid out by Great Britain during seven years as indemnity for slaughtering cattle alone. He also points out that the total loss to the cattle-growers of Great Britain by this disease in deaths alone has amounted to not less than $500,000,000, and that this is the only country in the world where the disease, having once gained a foothold, has been entirely eradicated.

Secretary Rusk explains why wheat did not realize the big hopes raised by the short crops in various European countries in 1891 by saying that those anticipations of enhanced prices failed to take into account the changed conditions now surrounding the production and marketing of the world's wheat crop. "Taking the world throughout," says the secretary, "the fat crops more than equaled the lean crops of 1891, so that there was actually more wheat grown in that year than in 1890." Even the exports from Russia, where famine existed in so large a section and where exports were for a time prohibited, amounted to 105,000,000 bushels, nearly as much as the average of the last four years, and more than the average for the last ten years. Secretary Rusk says: "The conditions which have at last overwhelmed cotton growers now confront wheat growers." Hence the American farmer must reduce the wheat acreage and so bring production down to the normal demand.

While insisting that southern cotton growers must continue to reduce the acreage of cotton planted, he has some encouragement to offer them in the shape of new varieties of cotton seed. He has undertaken experiments with imported seed to secure the production of a home-grown cotton which will meet all the requirements for which Egyptian and other cottons are now imported. He also wants the United States to raise its own raw silk, instead of sending $25,000,000 a year abroad for the raw material, and he thinks $67,000,000 a year now spent for imported fibers might be saved.

The secretary says of the work of his Indian corn agents in Germany that many difficulties attended the introduction of a new food heretofore generally regarded in Europe as not suitable for human consumption. A mixed corn and rye bread was found necessary to secure keeping qualities in a country where all bread is made and sold by the bakeries, and corn-grinding machinery is now in use in several mills in that country. One result is the maintenance of the price of corn in the face of the largely increased exports, conditions which have heretofore always accompanied a great depreciation in price. The corn exports for 1892, the only year in which they have equaled those of the present year, brought the price down to a fraction under 42 cents a bushel at port of shipment, against a fraction over 55 cents a bushel this year, the difference aggregating on the exports of the last fiscal year not less than $10,000,000.

Secretary Rusk throws cold water on the rainmakers. The experiments are being loyally made, as congress directed, but the facts in his possession do not justify the anticipations formed by the believers in this method of artificial rain making.

The experience of the department in the domestic sugar industry for the last year confirms his former reports and shows that domestic sugar can be produced with profit to the grower of the crop and to the manufacturer, provided that the conditions of culture and manufacture insisted upon by the department are secured.

The secretary expresses his profound appreciation of the cordial sympathy and broad intelligence with which the president has uniformly, throughout his administration, heeded the needs of agriculture, and he predicts that the people of this country will learn to appreciate more and more the fact that the first administration during which the department of agriculture held the rank of an executive department of the government was presided over by a chief executive who never failed to appreciate the importance of agriculture, its dignity and its value to the country at large.

Solicitor Hepburn's Report.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Gen. W. P. Hepburn, solicitor for the treasury, has made a report of the character, amount and results of public litigation conducted under his direction during the fiscal year ended June 30 last. The whole number of suits commenced was 5,152 for the recovery of $2,465,179. Of the whole number of suits brought, 3,157 were decided in favor of the United States, forty-three adversely to the United States, 657 were settled and dismissed, and in eight the penalties were remitted, leaving 1,287 still pending at the beginning of the fiscal year.

To Dig a Ship Canal.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—One of the most important projects of the United States engineers is the excavation of a ship channel 20 and 21 feet deep in the shallows of the connecting waters of the great lakes between Chicago, Duluth and Buffalo. The work is divided into eight sections and must be begun by May 15, 1893, and finished within three working seasons, that is a period of 200 working days between May 15 and Nov. 30. The contracts will be awarded by sections. There is available for commencing the work the sum of $375,000, while congress has limited the cost of the channel to $3,340,000.

Fifty-Third Congress.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—A complete list of representatives in congress elected last week, made up from the returns received by the democratic national committee, and compared with those received by the clerk of the house, agrees substantially with the estimates previously sent out. It shows that the democrats have elected 223 members, the republicans 125, and the populists seven, giving the democrats a majority of ninety. If the democrats carry the election for congressmen in Rhode Island they will have a majority of ninety-two over all opposition.

BLANCHING OF VEGETABLES.

A Culinary Process That is Little Known by American Housekeepers.

The blanching of vegetables is a process which American housekeepers do not generally understand. There are a great many vegetables which have a rank flavor, and this may be removed by blanching. To blanch is not to parboil in water. A delicate vegetable like green peas or sweet corn does not need blanching, but a coarse vegetable like cabbage or onion is very much improved by the process. Cabbage should always be blanched. To do this, pare off the outer leaves and cut the cabbage into four equal pieces. Put them in an abundance of boiling water and let them cook about ten minutes. Then drop them into cold water, and when they are cold complete the cooking. Spinach also is always blanched by our best cooks.

All boiled greens are better for this process of blanching. Brussels sprouts and cauliflower should be blanched in about the same time and manner as cabbage. Spring beans and lima beans should be cooked in boiling water salted for at least an hour, cooled in cold water, and then cooked till done. Turnips should be parboiled ten or fifteen minutes, according to their age, but they should not be cooled in cold water, as this would give them a bitter taste. Drain them while they are hot and finish the cooking. Onions are very much better to be cut off at either end, put in boiling water, cooked for fifteen minutes, then cooled and peeled and cooked again for twenty-five or thirty minutes longer, till they are done.

There is a difference of opinion as to cooking potatoes. They are never cooled after they are cooked the first time, but they are often improved when they are old by cooking them in two waters. At this season old potatoes have a better flavor if they are washed thoroughly "in their jackets," a rim of peeling taken off, and dropped in cold water and cooked for forty-five minutes. Young potatoes should be cooked in boiling water. Delicate vegetables would lose all their flavor if subjected to the process of blanching. The mistake our cooks are apt to make is to apply one general formula of salted boiling water alike to all vegetables, whether delicate or coarse, cooking them all in one way till they are tender. There is no universal rule that will apply to all cooking.—Baltimore News.

ROUGH ON THE DOCTOR.

A Physician's Patient Dreams of an Interview with St. Peter.

The late Dr. Yandell was fond of telling the following on himself:

A lady patient of his, on entering his consultation room one morning greeted him with the remark:

"Doctor, I had such a singular dream about you last night."

"Indeed," said the doctor, "what was it?"

"Why I dreamed that I died and went up to Heaven. I knocked at the golden gate and was answered by St. Peter, who asked my name and address, and told the recording angel to bring his book. He had considerable difficulty in finding my name, and hesitated so long over the entry, when he did find it, that I was terribly afraid something was wrong; but he suddenly looked up and asked:

"'What did you say your name was?'

"I told him again.

"'Why,' said he, 'you've no business here. You're not due these ten or fifteen years yet!'

"'Well,' said I, 'Dr. Yandell said—'

"'Oh, you're one of Yandell's patients, are you? That accounts for it. Come right in! come right in! that man's always upsetting our calculations in some way.'"—Vis Medicatrix.

After Physicians Failed, Hood's Sarsaparilla Perfectly Cured.

Great mental agony is endured by parents who see their children suffering from diseases caused by impure blood, and for which there seems no cure. This is turned to joy when Hood's Sarsaparilla is resorted to, for it expels the foul humors from the blood, and restores the diseased skin to fresh, healthy brightness. Read the following from grateful parents:

"We think Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most valuable medicine on the market for blood and skin diseases. Our two children suffered terribly with the for two years. We had three physicians in that time, but neither of them succeeded in curing them or even in giving them a little relief. At last we tried Hood's Sarsaparilla and in a month both children were perfectly cured. We recommend as a standard family medicine, and would not be without it." MR. and MRS. M. M. SOLLER, 1413 2nd Avenue, Altoona, Pa.

THE DAY'S WORK.

Do thy day's work, my dear,
Though fast and dark the clouds are drifting near,
Though time has little left for hope and very much for fear.

Do thy day's work, though now
The hand must falter and the head must bow,
And star above the failing foot shows the bold mountain brow.

Yet there is left us,
Who on the valley's verge stand trembling thus,
A light that lies far in the west—soft, faint, but luminous.

We can give kindly speech,
And ready helping hands to all and each,
And patience, to the young around, by smiling silence teach.

We can give gentle thought,
And charity, by life's long lesson taught,
And wisdom, from old faults lived down, by toil and failure wrought.

We can give love, unmarred
By selfish snatch of happiness, unjarred
By the keen aims of power or joy that make youth cold and hard.

And if gay hearts reject
The gifts we hold—would fain fare on unchecked
On the bright roads that scarcely yield all that young eyes expect—

Why, do thy day's work still.
The calm, deep founts of love are slow to chill;
And heaven may yet the harvest yield, the work-worn hands to fill.

THE TRANSITORY TRAMP.

Miss Eliza's Queer Visitor and His Sudden Conversion.

Miss Eliza Brown was alone. She sat on her front porch, and now and again cooled her cheek by a nervous jerk of her palmleaf fan. The rockers of her chair gave forth a dismal squeak, as her small but weighty person swayed forward and back. She was much discontented, and very nervous—unstrung, she would have said—and her flushed face and aggrieved eye proved her no liar.

Miss Eliza's character included two very opposite qualities, a quick, high temper and great timidity. We see this combination in men very often, but in women it is rare. Miss Eliza had the arched nose and valiant coloring of England's virgin queen, contradicted by a mild eye, an insignificant mouth and a double chin. Her height was not much to speak of, and her figure was of the down-cushion order, soft and puffy.

Her thoughts just now were troublesome. They hovered persistently about a conversation she had listened to the night before, while taking tea with a neighbor. The subject of this conversation, instead of remaining decently buried in oblivion, haunted her. They were rather a ghastly lot, taking them altogether. The first was set going by a girl who said that there had been more tramps hanging round this summer than ever before as far's she knew. Then followed stories of the bad behavior of these horny-footed and light-fingered gentlemen, tales of the evil deeds of gypsies, thieves and murderers, till everyone's flesh began to creep, and the younger girls giggled hysterically; till Miss Eliza's crimson cheeks faded to a faint heliotrope, and Miss Eliza's niece, who was present, trembled with delicious excitement. After it was over these two found their way home through the gathering gloom, the one with boldness of speech and an eye that shunned shadowy corners, the other thrilling at every rustling leaf and inwardly thirsting for adventure.

Now Miss Eliza was alone. "The girl," Miss Eliza's helpmeet, had gone to visit her mother, and Pauline, Miss Eliza's niece, was spending the afternoon with a friend, about half a mile down the road. The house seemed very empty and isolated, just the place in which to enact a tragedy of the deepest dye. Miss Eliza reflected that in all the tales told the night before the bloodiest misfortunes ever befell the lone woman who lived a half-mile down the road, and could there be a fitter subject for such horrors than herself? She thought, too, that Pauline was not likely to return before sunset, for she had refused to let her take part in some amateur theatricals, and there was a coolness between them.

Miss Eliza rocked uneasily, and scanned timorously the dusty road which ran past the garden gate. After a half-hour of this watching and fearing, she calmed a little, and went into the house for her sewing. What was her dismay when she stepped forth again upon the porch to see a very ragged tramp come toward her up the gravel path and mount the steps. He stopped when he reached the step below her and smiled.

He was a young man, not over twenty-two or three, maybe younger, and rather handsome, but his black brows were very sharply marked, and there were deep shadows under his eyes, which gave him a deadly look, and the smile that now lifted the corners of his mouth brought to Miss Eliza only a more lively idea of how he would look as he gloated over her mangled remains. He stood, silent and smiling, and Miss Eliza felt she must say something. She gave a furtive glance down the road to see if anyone were coming, then she raised herself on tiptoe, pointed a fat forefinger to the gate, and said:

"Go away!"

She wished to trumpet this command in high, peremptory tones, but instead it came forth feebly and with a tremulous, nasal twang.

The tramp shook a little, as though with suppressed laughter, then said, in a deep and hollow voice:

"I'd rather stay here, ma'am, if it's all the same to you."

The voice suited his cadaverous eyes, but there was something incongruous and ghastly in the silent laughter that took hold of him and shook him at intervals.

Miss Eliza took a step backward. "What do you want?" she demanded.

"If yer don't mind sittin' down and listenin' to me for a few minutes, I'll tell yer."

Miss Eliza, being scarcely able to stand, did as was suggested. The tramp also took a chair. He folded his legs and clasped his hands about his knee. His hands were small and well-shaped, but very dirty; his feet were exceedingly large. Somehow the look of those smooth, soft fingers gave Miss Eliza a creepy feeling round the throat. The tramp began to speak in a rather affable manner, but with the same hollow voice:

"Yer ask me, ma'am, what do I want, and I'm a-goin' to tell yer. First, I want the silver spoons and candlesticks and the teaset what's in the dinin'-room; then I want the stuffed hummin' birds in the front parlor and the silver cake basket what stands on the corner table. After that I want yer gold watch and chain and that hair brooch yer a-wearin' and all the other trinkets, ornaminta and jewels what yer keep in the under drawer of yer washstand; and, last but not least, I want all the pie and cake yer was makin' this mornin' and all the gooseberry jam on the top shelf of yer storeroom. And if yer don't care to give it to me," the tramp winked slowly and made a motion as though to draw a revolver from his breast, then repented and went on:

"Yer see I have pervided myself with a place to stow 'em in," and he brought forth from under his coat a large and rather gaudy calico bag. He spread this out before him, then fell to shaking again with his horrid, suppressed laughter.

Miss Eliza was stupefied with terror. As this young but awful man laid bare his sinful plan, and enumerated her dearest household treasures, the blood left her cheeks drop by drop, and her round blue eyes opened too wide for tears. When he finished, she could only gasp feebly. Then she found voice to murmur:

"Please won't you leave the cake basket?"

The tramp ceased to laugh and looked solemnly at her.

"Why, ma'am," he said, "how can you ask it?" His voice had a disagreeable way of running up into the falsetto. "No, I will leave nothin'." He got up and pulled his hat further over his eyes. "My time is yours, ma'am, so come along. Sooner or later, it's all the same."

Miss Eliza could not summon sufficient strength to move, but when the tramp winked at her slowly, then covered his mouth with one of those dreadful little hands of his, and indulged in silent laughter, she jumped to her feet with nervous haste and led the way into the house with rapid though tremulous movements. They went from dining-room to parlor. She shut her eyes as the silver teaspoons, candlesticks, teaset and cake basket were placed in the recesses of the calico bag, and it was scarcely cheering to be told that the "hummin' birds had best be saved till later, and would do to ornament the top." The paper cutter in the parlor and the silver salt cellars were also swallowed up. Then the two wended their way up the narrow stairs.

The tramp became every moment more jubilant, and Miss Eliza more wretched. Miss Eliza fully expected to be elaborately murdered when they reached the second floor. This tramp, with his smiling mouth and hollow eyes, with the smooth, small fingers, the convulsive laughter and the cavernous voice, was surely the kind to torture one to death, and hug himself ecstatically at the sight of one's dying agonies. Wherefore she went up the stairs one step at a time, till the tramp snapped his fingers and begged her to step a little lively. Poor Miss Eliza! in all her plump and peaceful life she had never dreamed of such hideous excitement.

At the head of the stairs was the door that opened into Pauline's room, and to this the tramp motioned her. They entered. It was a pretty place. The sunlight filtered through the apple trees and the ruffled curtains, and lay cool and shining on neat matting and the little white bed that stood in the corner. Watercolor sketches were stuck up in every direction, and on the opposite wall hung a picture of Pauline, done by herself. It was not very good, and for a moment or two the tramp paid no attention to it. Then it caught his eye. He took a long stride forward, and stopped as though spellbound with admiration. Then, clutching at his breast convulsively, and with eyes still riveted upon the picture, he said in his hollow tones:

"Who may yon angel be?"

Miss Eliza had a moment's hope that all this was but a dream, for the tramp's every moment seemed to grow more unreal and like a nightmare. Then her fears redoubled, and she weakly whispered:

"My niece, Pauline."

"Pauline!" repeated the tramp in ecstasy, and again: "Pauline!" Then he let go the bag, fell on one knee, clasped his hands, and raised them toward the picture.

"O, pure and lovely angel!" he exclaimed. "What goodness and what beauty shine from thy heavenly face! How sadly those holy eyes look into my sinful soul!"

Miss Eliza's jaw dropped weakly. Perhaps this was the most astonishing of all the past half hour's experiences. To be sure, Pauline was a pretty girl, but there had never, as far as Miss Eliza knew, been any marked holiness in her expression or conduct.

The tramp now got upon his feet.

"Ma'am," he said, "I am converted, and 'tis all the work of that angelic creature. I am a-goin' to give up my evil life, and you will be the first of the many new leaves I am about to turn over. But remember, it is all her doin'; You will have to thank her that the cake basket remains in the family, and that yer still a-wearin' that hair brooch. Only, there is one condition that I make," his voice grew more hollow, and he laid his hand on his hidden revolver. "Swear that you will treat her like an angel, and that you will refuse nothin' she may ask of yer. Swear! or—"

Miss Eliza swore.

"Farewell, Pauline," said the tramp, with another long gaze at the picture. "I'm agoin', but I'm carryin' yer image with me in my heart."

He left the room, and Miss Eliza heard his footsteps down the stairs, down the gravel walk and down the road till they died away in silence. Then she fell down upon her knees and clasped her desecrated household gods to her ample bosom, murmuring broken thanks.

Half an hour later, and half a mile down the road, two girls were together in an upper room. One, who was small and fair, was sitting on the floor, both feet curled under her, her chin between her hands and her elbows on her knees—an attitude showing enthusiastic interest. The other, who was tall and had fine eyes, stood before the glass. Her hair was a good deal tumbled and her hands were dirty; she was busy rubbing burnt cork off her cheeks and eyebrows.

"Do you really think, Polly, she will let you do it now," asked the little one.

Pauline turned about.

"I'm sure of it?" she said.

Then, as the last traces of burnt cork disappeared, she leaned toward the glass.

"And it's all the doin' of this angelic creature," she laughed.—Harvard Advocate.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

POISONOUS RYE GRASS.

Certain Varieties Are Good in Europe, But Not in America.

Bearded darnel, also known as poison rye grass (Lolium temulentum), is an annual grass introduced from Europe. It is sometimes a very troublesome weed in the old world, especially in wet years. According to an excellent authority, Prof. F. S. Scribner of the Tennessee agricultural experiment station, it sometimes occurs in that state. Another well-known authority on grasses, Dr. Vasey, says: "This species is frequently found in grain fields." I have never found it nor has it ever been sent to me by numerous correspondents. Prof. Scribner says: "It may be recognized by its general resemblance to Lolium Italicum," the Italian rye grass. It has long been considered poisonous. Prof. Hackel says: "The grain, as well as that of the related Lolium remotum, which is frequent in flax fields and distinguished by the shorter and empty glumes, generally contains a narcotic principle, Lolium, soluble in ether, which causes eruptions, trembling, and confusion of sight in man and flesh-eating animals, and very strongly in rabbits, but it does not affect swine, horned cattle or ducks." This grass is therefore of special interest because it is one of the few plants belonging to the grass family which have deleterious properties. Related species of this grass and its varieties are considered very valuable forage plants in Europe, especially the Italian rye grass (Lolium perenne, our Italicum). An English authority says that by proper management the first crop may be cut in April and three more cuttings of after grass during the season. Neither of the grasses have proved very successful in the west. The climate does not seem to be adapted to them. Excessive rains in the south during hot weather causes it to rot, Prof. Phares says "destroying even the roots." It requires calcareous loams and marls and loamy sand. Such soils when manured give a big yield. The perennial rye grass (Lolium perenne) illustrated herewith, has been cultivated for more than two hundred years in England and in that moist, cool climate is an excellent grass, but for our country the Italian is more valuable, yet it is doubtful whether generally so. Prof. Tracy, of Mississippi, states that the rye grasses have proved worthless for that state. "They start readily from seed sown either in spring or autumn, and make a vigorous growth until warm weather comes, after which they dwindle and disappear completely."

POISONOUS RYE GRASS.

HOW OLEO IS MADE.

A trial in Paterson, N. Y., developed the following testimony as reported by the press of that city:

After the state's case rested in the trial of Thomas McCran for maintaining a nuisance at his fat-rendering place in Little Falls township, several witnesses on behalf of the defense testified that they lived near the establishment and did not smell anything that would cause them sickness. The case went over until the other morning, when James Feeney, John Gallagher and others testified that the smell was not so offensive.

Thomas McCran, the defendant, was sworn on his own behalf. He said he had been in the fat business for the past 15 years; eight years of that time at his present location. His business was to collect the bones and meat from the different butchers of the city, all of which were entirely fresh. These were boiled, and the smell that emanated was the same that would arise from the boiling of corned beef, only that it was done on a much larger scale. When the fat was rendered and prepared it was sent to France, where it was manufactured into oleomargarine. The meat is boiled in a closed vat, but the bones in a vat without a cover.

Great Yield of Potatoes.

Some wonderful results with regard to potato culture have been obtained by a gentleman farmer in France. This farmer, who is also a distinguished chemist, has been, according to a recent consular report from Nantes, for some time past conducting experiments with potatoes, with the remarkable result that he has succeeded in securing the enormous return of forty-two tons per acre. The plan he adopts is to carefully select the seed and to use only the best and soundest tubers. The ground is dug or plowed to a great depth and is well manured. Before planting the seed potatoes they are soaked for about twenty-four hours in a mixture composed of saltpetre and sulphate of ammonia, six pounds of each salt to twenty-five gallons of water. After this soaking the tubers are allowed to drain, and they then stand for twenty-four hours longer, in order that the germs may have time to swell.—Chambers' Journal.

How to Break Cattle to Lead.

A cattle breeder says: "Take two animals of about equal size and strength, and tie them together with a strong rope by placing one end around the horns of one animal and the other end around the horns of the other and make them fast, as for leading or tying up, leaving three or four feet of rope between the inner horns; turn them into a field free from trees. Let them run, pull and haul till they are tired of it, and they will walk side by side and feed together. Then take off the rope and they will ever after lead with the docility of a child, even though the first occasion may be years afterwards. It is much easier than for a man to be jerked all around by a wild heifer or steer, and more effectual."

THE CARE OF CATTLE.

Why Every Farmer Should Study the Science of Feeding.

It is not the fault of the scrub cow or steer that she is no better than she or he is. We need to remember that, for if we have been at fault in lessening the value of the scrub, we may lessen the value of better cattle if we ever have them. Fifty years ago, those of us who are old enough to remember, the life of the cow was anything but desirable. Even in summer the pasture was apt to be utterly insufficient for the animal, because the pasture went year after year without having the slightest attention paid to it. In winter time there was the barest apology for a shelter if there was any at all. Such "extravagance" as feeding grain was never thought of, and while the hay was poor the corn fodder was poorer. Anything in the shape of a bull was good enough for service, and if anybody wonders that the scrub is no better than she generally is, he would wonder that fire would burn a house down. The best breed of cattle in the world could not stand such treatment for a hundred years and be a whit better than the scrub is.

We have never known a case in which a farmer, however careless he might have been in caring for common stock, did not take good care of thoroughbreds if he purchased them. One of the great uses of improved breeds of cattle—we always contended—is that they teach men to be more careful in their management of stock. People are not apt to pay a good price for a thing and then abuse it. But there is abuse of cattle other than exposing it to storms and starving it, and if we do not realize it we are in danger of going far wrong. We have seen, and so has every reader of this article seen, show stock that was decorated with the blue ribbon, giving evidence of brutal abuse. It had been overfed. It had been fattened almost to death. Its bones and muscles had been neglected in order to lay on fat that the animal might appear beautiful; and the worst of the whole matter was, people mistook the mountains of fat—of practical disease—for strength and size—often bought these abused animals for breeders, and as a result produced animals that were weak, and, in a measure at least, unsatisfactory.

It is readily to be seen, therefore, that to treat an animal kindly, to take care of it in the most profitable way, we must study the science of feeding and be governed by its principles. It is hardly probable that any reader of this paper does not feed enough. But there may be many who do not feed the right kind of foods. We hope that the time is not far distant when every farmer will recognize the fact that too much corn is injurious and will feed all animals enough of such foods as bran, oats, etc., as will nourish the bony and muscular systems.—Farmers' Voice.

AMONG THE POULTRY.

FEW things will keep hens from laying sooner than feeding exclusively on corn.

GENERALLY a place near the city is the best for an exclusive poultry business.

GEESE should not be too fat and yet should be fat enough to present a good appearance.

IT is not the largest fowl that is the most vigorous, but rather the one with bright eyes and quick movement.

DURRING the fall and winter it is an important item to arrange so that the fowls will take abundant exercise.

ALL kinds of poultry will be the better for a good shelter during the winter, even to the turkeys and guineas.

IN counting the cost of keeping poultry a good plan is to estimate one bushel of grain a year for each laying hen.

SAVE the manure. If properly saved and composted the droppings from fifty fowls will furnish hill fertilizers for two acres.

ONE cheap way of making the poultry house warm is to paste papers on the inside, using flour paste and putting the paper on two or three layers thick. Then whiten thoroughly.

A CROSS of the Wyandotte with the Langshans will give the yellow legs wanted by the market and at the same time retain the quality of flesh peculiar to the Langshans.

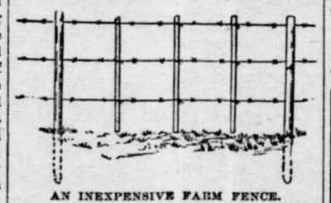
SULPHUR for the nests, whitewash for the houses, kerosene for the perches, exercise, pure air and a variety of food for the fowls are the secrets of successful management.

WITH a good range, plenty of water and comfortable quarters it is comparatively easy to raise ducks or geese. They are hardy, not usually infested with vermin, and will largely take care of themselves.—St. Louis Republic.

WIRE FENCE STAYS.

Just the Things for Localities Where Posts Are Expensive.

Where fence posts are expensive it is an object to use as few as possible. On a Kansas farm, the posts are placed four rods apart. For stays, laths are wired to the barbed wire at every rod as shown in the illustration, a sketch of which has been sent by J. Mecir.



AN INEXPENSIVE FARM FENCE.

Number nine plain annealed wire is cut in six inch lengths and bent to the proper shape over one side of a lath by hand. A boy holds the lath in place, the bent wire is quickly slipped around lath and wire, and grasped with a pair of pinchers, and with two or three turns they are solidly secured. — American Agriculturist.

The Best Always Sells.

A good animal of any breed or kind will sell itself; will find its own market. It will command attention when that which is bad is ignored and neglected. When the market is overstocked, who is it that still sells at a paying price? It is the man who in the midst of dullness has still had an eye to perfection in his animals; who has never looked back but has pursued an even course toward high merit from the beginning, no matter what his circumstances as to market may have been; it is the man who has not studied so much what he is to receive, but who has been concentrating his powers on the production of animals of suitable merit.—Colman's Rural World.

Christmas Wide Awake.

The December Wide Awake is a true Christmas number and has, therefore, the full Christmas flavor, from the beautiful colored frontispiece that opens it to the fantastic flower piece that ends it.

This frontispiece is a representation of the Ice Queen in her grotto, drawn by Henry Sandham to accompany Mrs. Sandham's article, "The Vagaries of Santa Claus."

"The Bluecoat School," the famous English school in which Charles Lamb and other noted Englishmen were educated, by Louise Imogen Guiney, is highly interesting and fully illustrated by Joseph Pennell. "Mr. Van Gelt's Case," by William O. Stoddard. To this strong story succeeds an equally strong Christmas ballad by R. Macdonald Alden, "How Lajla Found the Christ-child," beautifully illustrated by Merrill.

The new serials that commence in this Christmas number are of unusual excellence. They are W. O. Stoddard's Revolutionary story, "Guert Ten Eyck;" Molly Elliot Seawell's naval story, "The Midshipmen's Mess," and Theodora R. Jenness's Indian story, "Piokee and her People;" all finely illustrated. A delightful Christmas play for young people, "Wishing," by William Grant, is given complete, with directions for home representation.

THE WEATHER.

When the girls in Pirates of Penzance sit down on the stage and say, "Let us talk about the weather," they begin on a topic that is of vital interest to every one. For after all we are what the weather makes us. When it is warm and pleasant, we are happy. When it is raw, we take cold and are correspondingly unhappy and miserable. It is a dangerous thing to allow a cold to run under the idea that a cold is of not much importance. It is of vital importance. When you take cold do not delay a moment, but get a bottle of Reid's German Cough and Kidney Cure. This great remedy contains neither opiates nor narcotics. It can be given to the tenderest infant without any danger. It is the only cough remedy in the world of which it can be said it is impossible to take an overdose. It is unequaled for croup, pneumonia, pleurisy or any of the acute maladies that arise from a cold. Get it of any dealer. The small bottles cost 25 cents, the large ones 50 cents.

—Fresh Oysters at C. H. Green & Co's Grocery.

—Ask Will Guptil for the loan of a dollar and see what he will say.

—Henry Buck purchased for Warren Merriman a portable 10horse power engine this week.

—On a recent visit to Montrose we noticed that Jesse Streeter was roller boy for the news.

—Wright county voters should take pains to keep informed as to what is going on at the state capitol this winter.

—S. S. Ball has again become the happy possessor of a yoke of steers. They take their drinks regularly, at the town pump.

—West Howe, an engineer on the G. N. lost his life in the fire which destroyed the Merchants Hotel at Willmar, on Sunday night.

—Mrs. W. W. Doran and children of St. Paul, were visiting with Mrs. D's brother, J. H. the first part of the week.—Eden Valley Journal.

—The schools took a vacation, the bank was closed and the national colors were hoisted, yesterday, on account of the national Thanksgiving day.

—Read on the inside of this paper "Uncle Jerry Rusk's report on Agriculture. He seems to think diversified farming advisable for our agriculturists.

—Read our offer to each of our Subscribers to secure a nice picture. "A Yard of Pansies". We have on hand a sample, which can be seen by those interested.

—The bands thanksgiving dance was held last night at the city hall. The inclemencies of the weather doubtless paevented the crowd from being larger.

—Senator Lineau in an article in the Globe advocates encouraging the cultivation of sugar beets in Minnesota and expects to bring before the state senate a bill with this object in view while some farmer legislator brings a similar one before the lower house. Keep posted on these measures.

—On Sunday morning Riley Sturman lost 12 tons of hay by fire on his farm near his brother, William. Fire had been smouldering in the peat beds of the meadow for several days whence it had spread to the stacks. Riley says he had no hay to sell before his loss.

—On Dec. 16 and 17, Miss Marion Willis, an elocutionist of great merit, will give two dramatic readings under the auspices of the school. The proceeds will be devoted to the purchasing of books for the school library. Tickets can be procured of the scholars or at Wittman's Drug store.

R. C. DEWEY, Principal.

—Prof. N. W. Simmons gave an entertainment in the hall on Tuesday evening to a fair sized audience. His selections were well rendered, and well appreciated. "The Roman History," "Polish boy," "Bells," "Wreck of the Hesperus" "Bashful lover," and other pieces were given in succession in a manner to sway the audience with the reader. He has fine control of his voice and is a polished orator. His lecture of half an hour, after the evening's exercises, was listened to by many, and quite a few points were impressed upon the minds of his hearers. Should he see fit to come this way again we predict he will have a crowded house.

—A man met one of our genial landlords, last Friday and informed him that he had brought a drove of hogs to town but could not find Pat McNeeley, that he had left the porkers in a pen in the rear of the hotel and would like to "borry a dollar till he got some money on them," and asked Will to give some swill for the swine. The newley fledged and unsophisticated landlord complied with the request of the drover and advanced him the amount asked for. As time passed on and the evening was for spent and the stranger did not appear, having departed after taking his supper, the hotel proprietor, ever thoughtful for the welfare of his guests, took a pail of slops and set out to feed the hungry boarders, but was surpised at finding none there. It suddenly daunted upon him that he had been "worked" for a dollar and a supper. Misery loves company and Will, we are told soon found that a saloonkeeper and an attorney-at-law each had a friendly feeling for him, having also formed an acquaintance with the hog merchant, and allowed him to obligate himself to them in smaller or larger sums.

—Carl Hitz slipped and fell, yesterday, cutting an ugly gash on the palm of the hand requiring the surgeon's needle to stop the hemorrhage from an artery that was severed.

—Thanksgiving day passed off pleasantly. Most everybody went some place to dinner or entertained those that did. The air was fresh and crisp but but there being no snow it did not seem so cold as on some occasions.

—We are in receipt of the prospectus of "Worthington's Illustrated Magazine and Literary Treasure," which promises to make its appearance on January 1, 1893, as a Monthly Family Magazine of high grade, to be published by A. D. Worthington & Co, Hartford Conn.

County Cullings.

Photographer Staddon is back from Pennsylvania and again at his post in Cokato.

From the Buffalo Journal, "They Say," we learn that the "genial doctor" will be the new postmaster at Delano.

Last week's Waverly Tribune contains Mr. Tanner's yaledictory and Mr Topping's salutatory to their readers. Both good reading. We have no thing but the best wishes for both gentlemen in their efforts to do the people good.

John C. Nugent has been freely mentioned as a candidate for United States Marshal. Mr. N. is a fit subject for this office. Besides having been sheriff ter years and his other qualifications, good looks included, he is an old resident of Wright county, which deserves its share of recognition in the selection of appointees to office.

If the Republicans of Stearns county would cease coquetting with the Democrats and nominate each year a full ticket, they would eventually win. Had they done this in years gone by Searle would have been elected in spite of Duluth, which has no politics but Duluth.—Wright county Times.

"Of all sad things of tongue or pen.
The saddest are these, it might have been,"

The Buffalo Journal and the Wright county Times are doing crowing over their brother editor, and W. H. Houlton at Elk River, because the entire Republican legislative ticket got elected in this district. Two years ago they crowed over the same parties because it didn't. There seems to be quite a lot of pulling and hauling between the two counties and we look for a bill to be introduced, this winter, making different arrangements for electing our state senator and legislators. Possibly two districts may be made out of the 38th. The breach between the two Republican factions appears to widen rather than narrrow, and the wound is already full of "proud flesh" and something must be done.

From the Minneapolis Times we learn the state senators are beginning to hover around their old haunts and that among them is Senator James O'Brien, of Stillwater, who is reported as saying: "The election is the Republicans, and I propose to sit back in my seat and watch the proceedings." Two years ago it will be remembered Senator O'Brien was interested in a contest for his seat, Judge Searles, of Washington county being his opponent and that Mr. O'Brien was one of Bill Merriam's appointees to a prison office and although a Democrat, received the vote of our Senator A. Y. Eaton, a well known Merriam lover. Will not A. Y. sit back in his seat until the proper time for action and then with others who are opposed to Davis, cast his vote for Bill Merriam? Time will tell.

Wright county voters as well as citizens of Minnsota generally should keep up with the doings at the capitol this winter and see where the money goes, and who aids in having it go. Several measures of importance, much more importance to the voters of Wright and Sherburne counties than the electing of a United States senator to represent our state in a senate already Democratic can be, will come before that body. The Good Roads question, the sugar beet question, railroads and warehouse and the defficiency on the World's fair question and many others will trouble the minds of our legislators. If you wish to know how these things are brought up and disposed of keep posted from the first day of the next session.

A Card.

I wish to express my thanks to the public press of Wright county and to Messrs Cutting and Culkin for the fair and honorable treatment that I received from them during the late election canvass and to express my admiration for the voters of the Peoples' party for the zeal with which they supported the principles of their party, and in the midst of threats and bribey voted for the right. I am proud of the vote that I received in Wright county, when I think that during the great rebellion after four years of war, with the draft being enforced, with one-seventh of the entire population of Minnesota in the Union Army, with almost every home in our state in mourning from losses in defense of our nations life, with a thousand scalps of the slaughtered innocent ones of our state dangling from the belts of the savages, born down with poverty and taxation, living in rude huts and stockades built for defense the people of Wright county in the year, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, voted for Abraham Lincoln, and to continue the war for the preservation of the Union, and our free representative form of government as guaranteed in our written constitution. Had I received but one vote in Wright county in the late election I would have been prouder of it than of the entire vote of the sickly spawn of the usurer and extortionist and bribe giver, or of Vanderbilt, Gould, Jim Hill and Merriam or of the millionaire hosts, whose chief amibition is to evade just taxtion, bribe and corrupt national and state legislation and purchase husbands for their daughters from among the syphilitic scab of the royal bloods of Europe. Proud I am to know that the patriotism of eighteen hundred and sixty-four has not left some of the yoters of Wright county, that they have not degenerated, that they are not cowards, that they are not crayens but that they still are true to a government of the people by the people for the people and are for a free unonstentatious goyernment protecting all and granting favors to none. A. G. SEXTON.

Cokato, Nov. 17th.

Hennepin County Schools.

Sup't James A. Lewis was re-elected by a plurality of seventy-one votes over his Republican opponent, Henry. Let all the people say amen.

A new two-story school house is being built at Markville. School is to begin about the first Monday in January, and Madam Rumor says a Mr. George, of Rockford, is engaged as principal.

The December session of the Hennepin Co. Teachers' Association is announced for next Saturday in Curtis Hall, Minneapolis.

When the Minneapolis Tribune comes out, giving G. M. Henry 1000 majority for school superintendent, the teacher in District 53 (Chown) ran up the big school flag, and let it wave for three days during which time she ran about from place to place expressing great joy at the result of the election. It is said that she wept when she heard that Sup't James A. Lewis, our Democratic candidate, was indeed re-elected.

Paul Miller, of Groveland Park, writes: "I have received the BUFFALO GAZETTE sent by you, very bright little paper, indeed, and your correspondence in it was very appropriate. Hurrah for Groyer." Hurrah for Lewis! It is very gratifying to note that good principle held its own against Hokus Pokus element. Paul is one of the good men who stood for Prof. Lewis over in Minnetonka where the greatest effort was made to crush the life out of the poor fellow, and we will ever have a warm place in our heart for him.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

ST. PAUL has concluded after a contest over the returns to keep Dr. Cornelius Williams for one of her representatives in the legislature this winter. A very good choice, as, is that of John I. V. We predict that these representatives will acquit themselves with honors in the next session.

AN exciting time was had in Montreal, last Saturday night when about 8000 people assembled and speeches were made by prominent men on the future of Canada. Mr. Meyers spoke in favor of political union with the United States, and was hissed and called a traitor. After the debate a vote was taken resulting as follows: For National Independence, 1,614; political union with the United States, 992; colonial status, 364; imperial federation, 29. It appears from this vote that a change of some kind will soon be made in Canadian Government affairs.

THE little village of Cleveland, Le Sueur county has a sensation of its own. On Sunday morning Joseph Hunder died very suddenly and Monday morning Mrs. Hunder's sister, Miss Bone also died, leaving a note that she was going to die and desired to be placed in the same grave with Hunder. It is claimed they were lovers, and that by some unexplained incident Hunder was wedded to the wrong sister when Miss Bone and Hunder resolved to die together. Drs. Collins and Daniels, of St. Peter, are given as attending physicans.

THIS number of the GAZETTE is Vol. V., No. 9, which reminds us that with No. 9, Vol, II, we took charge of the paper. Consequently we have, so soon, been in the newspaper business for three years. At that time things did not look very bright for a Democratic newspaper in this part of the country. Dave Flannigan being the only Democratic official in this county, Cap't Snider being the Congressman, and Benjamin Harrison, President. What a change has been wrought; of course the GAZETTE has done her share toward spreading the truth as seen by her editor and is thankful for the fruits born.

SOME of the Republican papers are trying to make their readers believe that the wild cat banks of the fifties and early sixties are again to come into existence through Democratic sanction. No one wants any such money as that. Democrats do not desire to go to bed rich and wake up to find their money no good, because the banks which had issued their bills had failed. Democrats are probably, on an average, as fond of good, sound money as are their Republican friends and neighbors. Repealing the tax on state banks is not saying that the state banks will be allowed to flood the country with bright new bills of all denominations, without any provision for redeeming them. Whatever arrangements are made for state banks issuing bills it is hoped they will be obliged to make them safe. If a state bank can be a safe place to depoist thousands of dollars, why can it not issue bills just as safe?

Our Next Senator.

Minnesota's legislature at its next session will elect a successor to United States Senator Cushman K. Davis. As the time approaches it becomes more and more apparent that a new man will be chosen. No one disputes Mr. Davis' ability as a statesman, and as an orator, able to cope with the best he is likely to meet on the floor of the Senate. But, unfortunately for him, and for his aspirations to succeed himself, the voice of the voters of our land are against Protective Tariff, against the Force bill, and other things of greater or less importance which he has seen fit, at the end of the party leash, to support, although as our columns have previously told you, he is about half right himself on the tariff question.

Circumstances are against Mr. Davi upon this occasion. Circumstances over which he can have no control, and unless the unexpected happens he will give way to some other man when the vote is taken.

Several candidates are already spoken of and their causes advocated in a greeter or less degree. Various arguments are being used against Mr. Davis, and some of them quite effectively, while good reasons in abundance are brought forth in favor of rivals from various parts of the state.

William R. Merriam, Dwight M. Sabin, John Lind, Knute Nelson and Attorney General Clapp, each have their admirers for the place, Davis' forces from the farms are not likely to give him up for Merriam, from the fact that both are St. Paul men, and as they have in many instances been pledged to Davis they could not find sufficient reason to change, but when Nelson or Lind or Sabin or Clapp comes into the field the argument is used that they are not from the twin cities and they begin to pull votes from farmers and their representatives.

At present it looks as if a lively time would be had, and those legislators pledged to vote for C. K. Davis first, last and all the time are likely to show up short of votes to elect their man. If they do not elect him at the first ballot they are not apt to do so afterwards, and may fool around and elect some man they or their constituents don't want.

Attorney General Clapp made a speech in Delano two years ago, and was admired alike by Republicans and Democrats, for the manly views taken. He is spoken of as a man eminently fitted for the place. His home is in the northwestern part of the state, which would in case he was chosen give our state a better representation than it could have with two men from St. Paul and Minneapolis, the latter place already sending Senator Washburn. In case the Republicans can't harmonize there is a possibility of some Democrat looming up as a strong man, or possibly the Populist may pop up with Donnelly. Senator Davis is accused of having bolted a caucus once upon a time himself, consequently is not in a position to expect everybody else to be better party men than he was himself when Alexander Ramsey was a candidate.

"Oxcuse" Us.

In replying to our invitation to "Wade in" or "Wade out" of an argument concerning the merits of our candidates the Senator-editor, of Buffalo, tries to turn aside the invitation by pretending to believe it to apply only to the "cuts." We still say that Hon. Thomas Wilson and Hon. Daniel W. Lawler will compare favorably with anybody else's candidates. And as this is not disputed even by the Senator who desires us to "oxcuse" him this time. We presume people in Wright county will be allowed to understand it so.

Tariff Pictures.

In the past eight months our exports to Germany under the McKinley tariff have increased from $17,435,942 to $57,751,141

We seem to be doing something more than holding our own in the "markets of the world."—New York Press.

Does not every farmer in Minnesota know that the above "Tariff Picture" is misleading? Have you not read for years past that American pork could not be shipped into Germany on account of her stringent laws? Have you not read for months past that this prohibition law had been abondoned? That Germany would allow American pork to come? Does anyone think the McKinley bill, in the face of the face of the assertion of James G. Blaine that "it would not open the markets of the world to a barrel of pork or a bushel of wheat," can be held responsible for the addition of this $10,000,000 to our export trade.

JAY GOULD, the great financier, died this morning.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Nov. 25, 1892.

Democratic senators and representatives are already quite numerous in Washington, and of those here at least three-fourths have expressed themselves as favoring an early extra session of the Fifty-third congress for the purpose of dealing with financial and tariff matters. The reason given in most cases is that it is a custom of long standing with congress that about one year should elapse from the time a new tariff law is enacted before it goes into effect, in order to give business circles and manufacturers an opportunity to make preparations for the change that will prevent any loss by reason of reductions made in the duties. So that even if an extra session be called in April it will be in the neighborhood of a year and a half after Mr. Cleveland is inaugurated before the people can begin to realize any benefit from the Democratic reform of the tariff. Surely that is long enough for the people to continue to bear the burdens imposed upon them by the McKinley law.

But there is another matter that is even more pressing than the tariff—the almost immediate need of the government for money to meet the enormous obligations incurred by the republicans; and it is not believed that the Republican majority of the senate will be patriotic enough to drop their intense partisanship and aid in this matter during the present session of congress; they don't care how much trouble the country gets into after it shall have passed into Democratic hands. Notwithstanding the continued assertions of Secretary Foster that there will be no deficit in the treasury during the current fiscal year, many prominent Democrats believe there will be. The reason for this belief is that the officials of this administration can, if so disposed, withhold upon one or another pretext the payment of many large sums that will fall due between now and the fourth of March next, leaving them to be liquidated by the Democratic administration, but not leaving the money to do it with. Indeed, it is the general belief that the deficit would exist today, except for this policy of delay in meeting payments which has been in vogue for two years or more. In any event, it cannot be much longer stayed off, and all admit that it will probably come during the next fiscal year.

How to meet it is the most pressing question with which the Democratic administration and congress will have to deal next year. If it can be temporarily met in some way until the new tariff can get into working order and the Democrats get an opportunity to lop off the extravagant expenses of the government and reduce expenditures to a Democratic basis of economy everything will be all right, as the lowered tariff will certainly add many millions to the receipts of the government. It is because of this knowledge that quite a number of prominent Democrats favor issuing bonds at a low rate of interest for the money that will be absolutely needed, instead of increasing any present tax or adding a new one. It is a very interesting and a very important question and no fears need be felt that the best plan, all things considered, will not be adopted.

Representative Fitch, chairman of the House committee which is engaged in investigating the methods of the notorious John I. Davenport, Chief U. S. Supervisor of elections for New York, wrote Secretary Foster, early this week, asking him not to pass or pay any of Davenport's accounts for expenses until the committee could examine them. This brought Davenport to Washington in double-quick time. His object is to get his accounts approved and paid before the committee gets at them, otherwise he knows they will be largely cut down. One thing may be put down as certain. When the first session of the fifty-third congress adjourns, whether it be extra or regular, there will be no such office as U. S. Supervisor of elections.

The local Democrats aided by thousands from the neighboring States of Maryland and Virgini, are tonight conducting the largest political demonstration ever seen in Washington, and the jam of people on Pennsylvania Avenue are wild with enthusiasm and the air full of brilliant fireworks.

Mr. Cleveland's alleged remarks expressing his disgust for office-seekers, which were published here a few days ago, helped many a Republican office-holder to enjoy his Thanksgiving dinner, making him feel that he was secure in his office. Democrats generally, who believe that when the people of the country voted by such an overwhelming majority for a change they did not mean merely a change in the Presidency and in the heads of the departments but a change all along the line, are loth to believe that Mr. Cleveland ever used the language attributed to him.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Krack had the miss fortune to loose their little two year old son, last Saturday, from Inflammation of the bowels and stomach. His funeral took place from the Presbyterian church, on Tuesday afternoon. The Rev. H. A. Noyes, pastor of the church, officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Krack have the sympathies of the entire community in this their sad affliction.

Mr. James Sturges made a business trip to Monticello one day, this week.

Our Senator A. Y. Eaton came very near having a conflagration in the Journal office, Monday morning. From some cause, which was unknown there was an explosion in the office which blew out about half the front window of the office and upset the stove which started the fire, fortunately through the prompt action of the fire department the flames were extenguished before much damage was done, more than what occured through breakage.

ROCKFORD RECORDS.

We are still among the living Bielia's comet failed to show up and no smash up occured.

The Thanksgiving dance in the G. A. R. hall was a grand success. Every one seemed to enjoy themselves, a good supper was served at the centennial.

MAPLE PLAIN MUSINGS.

Maple Plain is still right side up, with care; notwithstanding the recent newspaper scare; concerning Biela's coming comet; that myriads of stars would vomit, it is the very same old place; and, as ever, still in the race.

Our recent Prohibition candidate for legislative honors did not get votes enough to send him to the capitol, and in pursuing his daily vocations sought with a one horse wagon to haul some lumber from the depot. The rig was too short and the front wheels of the vehicle were being elevated to such a degree as to make hauling bad when his honor placed his ponderous form on the front end of the load to hold it down, and in some way, we don't accuse him of having indulged too freely in the flowing bowl, took a geninue tumble lighting in such a manner as to dislocate his right shoulder. He now has an assistant the section foreman's son, in the depot.

Ed. Jackson lost his house and barn two miles south of town by fire recently. His harness was damaged and hay burned. Insurance, $300.

Mr. Anderson, Sr., and Mrs. Benjamin each lost a horse lately.

Mrs. Cleveland is quite sick in Minneapolis. Mr. C. expects to hear if she is worse by lightning telegraph.

Marshall Budd and Sue Obert were married the week before last, and went to Ledgerwood to keep hotel.

William Kennedy, our teacher, attended the Teachers' Association in Minneapolis, last Saturday; but did not return until Sunday evening, on account of going to see of his girl, I suppose.

Will S. Chamburg is going around with a broken finger, having caught it in the machinery of the hay press.

There is to be a pound, we hear, at the residence of Mrs. Kate Haskel, on Dec. 2nd, in the evening.

I am glad to chronicle the fact that we are having a good school this winter. The attendance is above the average for preceding years. Mr. Kennedy, the teacher, is a great worker, and we notice the children are beginning to follow his example.

Little Johnny DeCamp fell into a cellar, on the 28th, and bruised his arm.

Who of our young folks have courage to start a literary society. The evenings are long, and as we have reached the period, when there is not much to do on the farm, such and enterprise would be liable to be largely patronized.

The children are anxiously inquiring if Santa Clause is coming Maple Plainward this year.

Sup't James Lewis, I see by the paper, is having his election contested by Mr. Henry. Mr. Lewis, I understand, has chosen Mr. Shaver for his assistant again. This will be very satisfactory to the Republicans, I hope.

The Daughters of Rebecca held a sociable a few days ago for the benefit of Mrs. Haskell, who has built herself a new house.

Our embryo butcher shop has ceased to be ere it started. The minor proprietor closed up before he began. Mr. Vanderwalker has become owner. A good chance for some one who wishes to engage in that business.

Billy Orison has purchased of Marion Batdorf a house and lot in town.

Our pedagogue left Friday night ostensibly to visit the Teachers' Association at Minneapolis but as he did not return until Sunday evening he is suspected of haying been, with his best girl, watching the stary firmament above for the appearance of Belial's comet.

Quite a number of the young folks visited Mound city on Thanksgiving evening to attend the dance.

Miss Hardt came home to eat turkey with the family on Thanksgiving but has returned to Minneapolis.

As J. W. Peterson, village blacksmith, is awaiting our return with a new apron and some horseshoes, we will be obliged to ask our readers to bear with these brief musings for this time. JULIUS HARDT.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

Last Friday brought the first winter storm, it comes as though it meant business, but we hope to have some fine weather yet, there is not many people ready for winter yet.

Thanksgiving day was observed by a good many in the usual way, in having a feast of fat things.

Hennepin county politics seems to be very quiet since the election and no one seems to doubt the election of Grover Cleveland.

The Republicans say now we will see what you Democrats will do, well we democrats do not expect to make a new country out and out, but perhaps may patch up the old one a little. So it will last for a while if we can find some good timber to put in where the rent is made, to me republicans and democrats look just alike and we suppose their origin is the same, but it is an old saying and a true one, it is human to err. No one person or party is perfect, but should protection continue to grow, it looks as if we might have another Boston Tea party.

The W. R. C., of Maple Plain, respectfully solicit the patronage of the people of this community at their Red Ribbon sociable to be held at town hall, Armstrong, on Wednesday evening, Dec. 7th, the proceeds is for a charitable purpose. Everybody invited. Exercises to begin at early candlelight. No written recommendation is needed.

THE United States contains 70,000 lawyers, 11,000 of whom are in New York city, making the proportion there about 1 to every 160 of the population. France, with a population of 40,000,000, has but 6,000 lawyers, and Germany has only 7,000 out of a population of 50,000,000.

MRS. RALPH WALDO EMERSON'S death draws attention to two facts: Her unmarried daughter's beautiful devotion to her blind parent these many years, and the undisturbed condition of Mr. Emerson's study since his death. In fact the whole house and its furnishings have undergone little change in a decade.

MARK TWAIN'S humor-created coroner, who held an inquest on an Egyptian mummy and charged the county with compound interest on the regular fee from the time of Moses, has something nearly akin to a parallel in the Buffalo coroner who held an inquest on the recently unearthed bones of a few Indians whose tribe became extinct prior to the year 1680.

NATHANIEL S. BARRY, of Bristol, N. H., is the oldest living ex-governor of a state in the United States. If he survives until September 1, 1896, he will be a centenarian. He was a boy of very humble parentage, became a tanner, as Gen. Grant did, and in 1861 was elected governor of New Hampshire. He is still a man of considerable physical and of unusual mental vigor.

THINK of this, ye men who consider women incapable of making a living. There are to-day more than 200,000 women in the United States earning a living in the practice of law and medicine, the teaching of music and art, literature and science, and in clerical work of different kinds in government and other official places, to say nothing of those employed at mechanical labor in shops.

THE English ivy attains so great an age that in England they say it never dies. There are ivy stocks ten or twelve inches in diameter which are known to have been planted as slips six hundred or eight hundred years ago. An English winter is not severe enough to kill it, while the extreme moisture of the climate induces a luxuriant growth and a rich green, which is unsurpassed by anything in the vegetable kingdom. It is planted against the old walls, and often trained on screens to conceal unsightly buildings, and everywhere forms one of the most attractive features in an English landscape.

THE emperor of Annam, who has been mentioned so often in the foreign papers recently, has now 200 wives, each of whom, with her servants, lives in a house in the palace garden, which is surrounded by a great wall. The empress-mother alone has a palace at her disposal. The wives are divided into nine classes, one class outranking another. When one of these women dies her body is lowered over the palace walls by ropes and is buried outside, as no corpse may be carried through the palace gate, not even that of a dead emperor. After the death of his majesty the widows may marry again.

A WRITER in the St. Louis Republic says: "For years I have collected and indexed every newspaper item bearing upon the subject of the tallest and largest American family. From a analysis of this array of giant literature I have come to the conclusion that the Pettijohn family of Walla Walla county, Wash., deserves the palm. The family consists of ten children, seven boys and three girls, the average height of the ten being 6¼ feet and the average weight being 244 pounds, including two children not yet grown. The 'baby' is a boy of 17, who is 7 feet and 1 inch high and weighs 295 pounds."

Robbed in a Cab.

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—Nearly every suburb in Chicago has now its own particular highwayman, while robbers and thugs, both masked and unmasked, are terrorizing the southern and southwestern portions of the city. Today it was Avondale's turn, and Henry Litzberg, a peddler, was held up, and his description of the robber tallies with that of the Lakeview highwayman.

Mrs. Nettie Warner of Boone, Ia., was chloroformed and robbed of $600 worth of jewelry and money in a cab in front of the Victoria hotel at an early hour this evening. She was on her way to the depot to catch a train for home, when the driver said a part of his harness was broken and that he could drive no farther. Another cab, which had halted a few yards distant, was called, and as Mrs. Warner took her seat in this cab the man who had driven her thus far sprang into the cab, chloroformed her and robbed her. The robber has not been captured.

BURNED TO DEATH.

Several Fires in Which Lives Were Lost—Two Children Cremated in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—Alice and Clifford Vessey, two children, the former 3 and the latter 6 years of age, were burned to death by a fire at 36 Edgewood avenue Monday. Their mother, who attempted to rescue them, was severely burned and James Heaney was badly injured by broken glass.

The home of the family is a story and a half-frame building, in the attic of which the two children were asleep. A lighted kerosene lamp was in the room and it is believed that this was overturned in some manner, setting fire to the house. The blaze was not discovered until it had gained great headway. In the excitement the children were forgotten until the other occupants of the house had reached the sidewalk.

Then the mother remembered them, and with the frantic cry: "My children are still in the house," rushed into the building only to be driven back by the flames which, by this time, were licking up the whole interior. Her hair caught fire and her face and neck were severely burned. The flames which enveloped the mother were quickly extinguished by the crowd which had gathered and she was taken to the house of a friend where her injuries could be dressed.

When the firemen reached the little attic-room where the children had been sleeping a horrible sight confronted them. On the floor near a burned table lay the charred fragments of the body of a child. When the firemen attempted to raise the little form it crumbled like charcoal. This body was that of Willie Vessey. It is supposed that the little fellow was awakened by the flames and tried to get out and met his death in the attempt. Amid the charred fragments of the bed lay the little girl, Alice Vessey. She, too, had been burned until she was wholly unrecognizable, and it was with the greatest difficulty that her remains could be gathered up.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 29.—After setting fire to a carpet at his home, No. 114 Locust street, Monday morning Edward Seykora lay down in the flames and was burned to death. When the firemen reached there they found Seykora's dead body in the midst of the fire. The flames did little damage to the house, burning only the carpet and a hole in the floor. Seykora was an invalid and had been confined to the house for four years.

MIDDLETON, Conn., Nov. 29.—Three men and two women were burned to death here Saturday night in a tobacco barn owned by John Hubbard on the old fair grounds. The victims were umbrella menders. MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

The Constitutional Amendment.

That the constitutional amendment relating to special legislation has been adopted by a large vote is confirmed. But the fears that have been entertained, that its adoption would be injurious to our cities and towns that need the benefits which have been frequently reached by special laws, are, in the light of investigation, entirely groundless. Regarding this Attorney General Childs says: "The newly adopted restriction will take effect at once, as soon as officially promulgated, and will be in force and govern the coming legislative session, the first effect of which will be to cast off the flood of bills introduced every session in both houses which clog legislation and overburden every department of the state government."

"What will be the effect," was asked, "on the cities and towns of the state which have heretofore had a large amount of special legislation, such as authority to issue bonds for improvements and the like?"

"None whatever. They simply reach what they want by the passage of a general law or laws, which will be made broad enough to enable them all to come in for their several needs. The general law relating to incorporators is an instance. All bodies desirous of incorporation can organize under the general law of 1878, just the same as if a separate bill were passed by the legislature for the incorporation of every distinct enterprise."

The effect of this will be to cut off a very large per cent of the legislation this winter, or hereafter. For the coming session doubtless a great deal of time will necessarily be consumed in providing the general law made necessary. To provide for this there are several plans. One is to attempt to cover, in sections of one general law, all the circumstances under which, in the experience of the state, special legislation will be necessary, from the township organization up through all the grades of villages and cities, and to this end it is proposed to appoint a commission to prepare a code to report to the next legislature. There will also be necessary, doubtless, a classification of cities as to population.

To Stop Wheat Stealing.

At the time of the conference of the state officials with the Minneapolis wheat men, looking to devising some plan to check wheat stealing from cars in Minneapolis railroad yards, it was announced that the desired result would probably be accomplished by the appointment of a sealer for each railroad company—such sealer to be appointed by the board of railway and warehouse commissioners, and have power to arrest any person found tampering with the seal. This idea has been elaborated, and will be adopted. The new plan will go into effect about the first of the month. Each car will be inspected on arrival, and will then be turned over to the sealer, who will place his seal upon it, and this will not be broken except upon presentation of the bill of lading. Neither sampler nor consignee can gain access to a car after it is sealed without having the documents to prove his right to do so.

To Meet at Crookston.

The Y. P. C. U. societies included in the Northwestern district of the state, comprising some twenty odd counties, will hold a district convention in Crookston on Friday and Saturday, December 16 and 17. This is the first time that Crookston has ever been named as a place for holding the convention, and the different societies of the city have formed a union to look after the delegates who will be present, to formulate a programme and also to provide for the entertainment of the guests. The committees are already at work, and it is expected that between 200 and 300 delegates will be in attendance.

It Was Not a Joke.

George R. Cowing of Martin county had a team stolen. He drove to Huntley, hitched his team and went in to one of the stores. Hearing a noise he went to the door just in time to see a man driving away rapidly with his team and wagon. It was thought to be only a joke, but after a couple of days' waiting search was made but nothing at this time has been heard from the team or the man who drove them away. There is no doubt now that it was a bold piece of horse stealing. It was a valuable team and new wagon.

Arrested the Sheriff.

Sheriff Hammerel was arrested at St. Cloud by Coroner W. L. Beebe for using slanderous and abusive language against Barney Dambly. The sheriff plead guilty and paid a fine of $7 and costs. Dambly is a relative of the sheriff, and the language used by the latter would look bad in print. A libel suit for damages for $5,000 by Mrs. Dambly has been instituted against Sheriff Hammerel.

The News Briefly Told.

The Old Settlers' association of the Red River Valley will hold their annual meeting on Wednesday, Dec. 7, at Moorhead. The only settlers entitled to a seat in the association are those who settled in that valley prior to 1876. As the meetings pass year by year there is a gradual falling off of the old timers and at no distant day there will not be enough old timers in the valley for a quorum.

TO EXHIBIT THE OLD "GENERAL."

An interesting exhibit at the world's fair will be the old rebel engine "General," which was at the beginning of the war part of the equipment of the Western & Atlantic railroad. In 1862 it was captured by "Andrew's Raiders," many of whom paid the penalty of their exploit with their lives. Several years ago the "General" was discovered neglected and side-tracked at an obscure station in Georgia so overgrown with weeds that it could hardly be seen. Some time afterward General Manager Thomas, of the North Carolina & St. Louis railroad, had the old engine removed to the Atlanta locomotive shops. Here it was put in precisely the same condition as when captured in 1862. The "General" was tendered the Chicago Commercial and Traveling Men's clubs to draw the special train to Rockford on the occasion of the great republican rally November 2. When the fair opens the "General" will be found in front of the Transportation building, where it is sure to be an object of great attraction, especially to the veterans of the war.

"German Syrup"

My acquaintance with Boschee's German Syrup was made about fourteen years ago. I contracted a cold which resulted in a hoarseness and cough which disabled me from filling my pulpit for a number of Sabbaths. After trying a physician, without obtaining relief I saw the advertisement of your remedy and obtained a bottle. I received quick and permanent help. I never hesitate to tell my experience. Rev. W. Self Torture!

That's what it amounts to, when you attempt to do washing and cleaning, now-a-days, without Pearline. And the strange part of it is, that you should be willing to suffer, when it's only for your loss and not for your gain. That needless back-breaking rub, rub, rub isn't saving you anything. It's costing you money. It is simply wearing out the things that you're washing. Why would you rather do it? That is what the women who are saving their strength and their clothes with Pearline can't understand.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, if your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back. 288 JAMES PYLE, New York

A VISITATION.

He wrote a hurried letter home
From California's strand:
"Dear sister, I am much alarmed
O'er the earthquakes in the land,

"And so I send you by express,
To save from coming harm,
My treasures rare, my precious boys,
To visit the old farm."

The maiden aunt rejoiced to greet
Dear Brother Henry's boys;
They wakened up the dull old farm
With much tumultuous noise.

They broke the fences up to ride
To "Boston" on the rails,
Used auntie's chopping trays for boats,
And tore up sheets for sails.

"Dear brother," wrote their auntie then,
"Your treasures safely came,
I went to the express, and there
Receipted for the same.

"But now in order to preserve
My mental equipoise,
I'll take the earthquakes in exchange,
And send you back your boys."
—Mrs. M. L. Rayne, in Detroit Free Press.

HER SISTER NELL.

Why She Went South to Take Care of Kate.

When Tom Norton and his wife came from the north to the prairies of southwestern Louisiana to try rice farming they brought each their most cherished possessions.

Tom's consisted, for the most part, of a varied and interesting collection of theories.

He brought, also, a very respectable financial backing and a fund of good, practical common sense. These saved him from collapse when he saw his theories knocked out by the hard facts of his new life.

Mrs. Kate brought her etchings, her water colors, her jars, vases, rugs and draperies. She had a rather worse time arranging these in a 'Cadian house than Tom had with his theories, which is saying a good deal. Both succeeded fairly well, however, and at the beginning of the second summer their house had become the rendezvous of "the boys," a lot of young fellows from various northern states, most of them, like Tom, rice planters. Their home was at present a board shanty, set in the midst of far-stretching rice fields, where they kept house for themselves after the manner of men unwatched of women. Small wonder they found at Tom's a pleasant respite.

John McRae, whose rice flat was over on Bayou Nez Pique, came oftenest and stayed longest. He was older than the rest and quieter.

He had dined with them, one breathless noon, and afterward crossed to the parlor, which Kate had a trick of keeping cool and shady in the hottest weather. Kate filled the pipes; Tom took the sofa and Mac stretched in a most comfortable chair, smoked awhile in silence.

"You're a decent sort of a fellow, Tom," he said at length, "and I don't envy you a thing, but this"—with a comprehensive wave of his hand—"isn't exactly calculated to make one enthusiastic over Black Jim's housekeeping."

"This," included the excellent dinner just eaten, the cool shade of the pleasant room, and Kate herself in a most becoming gown.

"Well, then, why don't you do as I did, marry your best girl and bring her down here to look after you?" queried Tom.

Mac puffed away awhile before he answered: "I haven't any best girl. I had one once—a nice, sensible girl—"

"I hate nice, sensible girls," interrupted Kate; but Mac went calmly on:

"Father died when I was just out of school and left me with mother, four children and a mortgage to look after. I laid the case plainly before my girl, told her here was bound to be hard work: but that I knew I could pull through, and if she wanted to take hold and help all right. If not, say so—and 'good-by, sweetheart.'

"She wrote me the nicest kind of a letter; said she couldn't think of coming between me and my duty to my family; but she 'should always,' etc. But it was 'good-by' all right enough. I told you she was sensible," he explained.

Here Kate sniffed contemptuously. But even that failed to interrupt the even tenor of Mac's tale.

"So I went to work alone, and, by George, how I did work! But I pulled through at last, as I knew I would: paid the mortgage, educated the children and provided for mother." All this was delivered between the puffs of Mac's pipe in his usual quiet tone, without a trace of emotion on his thin face, and from first to last his amused smile did not vary.

He refilled his pipe and concluded, as if done with the subject:

"My folks have got out of the habit of thinking of me as a marrying man, and I reckon, as they say here, they're about right."

"That was all right so long as there was the mortgage, the mother and the children to be considered, but now—" and Kate paused, suggestively.

"But now," said Mac, rising, "I've 'no call' to be dawdling here. Carter told me this morning that the twin levees were seeping badly. I've got to hold up all my water if I make a crop, so I came into the Magnolia saloon for something to sharpen up the shovels."

He paused by one of the tables and took up a picture which lay there. It was a bright-faced girl, with an air of spirited self-reliance.

"Now, that's a nice girl," Mac said, after a moment's examination of the picture.

"She just is!" said Kate, emphatically. "It's my sister, Nell. She's nice, but not 'nice and sensible,' like your stick of a girl."

"Think not?" and Mac continued to give the picture the same careful scrutiny he was wont to bestow upon a seeping levee or a clogged pump.

"No, indeed!" replied Kate. "If there was hard work to be done, Nell would go at it with all the energy she devotes nowadays to having a good time."

"That would knock a harder job than yours silly, Mac," and Tom laughed.

"Well, if you don't believe me, just go and see my sister Nell, Mr. John McRae," said Kate with great dignity.

"That sounds alluring, but I'm too aged to run any risks. Before I do anything I must be assured of several things."

Mac's eyes twinkled, but he spoke quite as if Kate were an agent for a new pump or a grading plow.

"What, for instance?" Kate's tone was crisp enough to have warned Tom, but Mac went on calmly.

"Well," he said, meditatively, "this"—and again his gesture included the arrangement of the room—"and the dinners you're always giving us, and the way you have of meeting Tom in a pretty gown when he comes in hot and tired. But I don't want to be too grasping. I wouldn't insist—at first, anyway—on sitting with her in the dusk in a hammock, as I saw you and Tom doing the other night."

"Wouldn't you?" asked Kate, with calm derision. Mac laid down the picture, rose and shook himself.

"Well, Carter'll be furious if I'm not back by supper time. Good-by."

He came back, however, out of the glaring sunlight to say:

"I fear I must insist upon another thing. I'm not proud, but there's a look about Tom's clothes that drives me to despair when I contemplate my own raiment."

"Better set up a clothes brush; it" cheaper than—any other arrangement," interrupted Kate.

Tom groaned an emphatic assent to this proposition and Mac finally mounted his pony and took his way across the hot prairie toward the distant timber line which marked the course of the Nez Pique.

II.

This was in early June, and the Nortons saw no more of him during the month. Carter, Mac's foreman, whom Tom saw in town, reported: "Mr. John sho' gwine to beat hisself plumb out, de way he's gwine on. He's at dem ar' pumps and levees early an' late Say, if de hull rice flat ain't flooded by du Fo'th o' July de debbil himself gwine be to pay."

It was in the dusk of one of the first July days that Mac rode to their gate.

"Good-by," he called, without dismounting.

They left the porch and came down the moonlighted walk for explanations—which he did not at once offer.

"What is that?" he asked at length, respectfully indicating with his whip the fleecy affair in which Kate had wrapped herself against the chill of the gulf breeze.

"A shawl. Nell made it for me at Christmas," she said, holding up a corner for his inspection.

"I've always thought of shawls as ugly, checked things," Mac commented, and then abruptly: "I'm going north to see—mother and the boys."

There was a curious pause in this announcement, as if its ending had been reconsidered. Mac's usual quiet seemed reinforced to-night by an added constraint, and after a little he rode away into the soft radiance of the southern moonlight.

The latter part of the week Kate received her usual letter from her sister Nell. The week after there was none, nor the week after that. Her vexation was becoming serious solicitude, when Tom brought her the following letter:

"MY DEAR KATE: We've been so busy since Mr. McRae came there hasn't been a moment to write letters. It was awfully nice of you to suggest his stopping off to see us. He talks to father by the hour about the country and to mother about you. He doesn't talk to me much, but watches me as if I were something unusual.

"Father and mother seem to like him, but I don't — much. I'll write more next time. He's going to-morrow. Love to Tom. NELL."

"P. S.—He's the strangest man I've ever seen. Yesterday I left him discoursing to father on 'red rice,' 'high lift pumps' and all the rest of it, and betook myself to the hammock under an old apple tree.

"Presently he followed me with a plan of your house he'd drawn for mother. There wasn't any place to sit except in the hammock or on the grass, and you know how I loathe bugs and worms: so I made room for him in the hammock. But before he sat down he leaned against the apple tree and laughed and laughed till I felt like a fool. He tried to make it up with me afterward by saying he remembered something you said to him once about swinging in a hammock. It must have been very funny! I don't think I like him at all. N.

"P. S. S.—Mr. M— couldn't seem to remember any closets in your house. I asked him where you hid things. He said it must be on top of the armoir. What's an armoir? N."

Kate had barely time to catch her breath before Nell's promised letter came. It was as follows:

"MY DEAR KATE: Mr. McRea didn't go today, after all, but he is really going to-morrow. And is coming back in November. And we're to be married then. Tom, don't you let Kate write to know how it all happened, for I don't know myself yet; only, mother has always said some of us ought to go down there to keep Kate company, and you know how self-sacrificing I have always been. I just told John I was writing to you. I'd give half my rice crop,' he said, 'to see Mrs. Kate's face when she reads your letter.' Good-by.

"NELL.

Steeple Climbing as a Function.

A medieval custom still prevails in Freiberg, in Breisgau. This is observed on the birthday of the reigning grand duke of Baden, and consists of a foolhardy trip to the topmost part of the tower of the minster. It is a dangerous enterprise, for the tower is four hundred feet high, and the ascent is made from the exterior of the building. The steeple-jacks in their ascent have to leap from stone to stone, often a yard apart, and one false step on the narrow ledges would be death. At the topmost pinnacle pistol shots announce that the climbers have succeeded. Then an immense gilded star revolves, and the descent is begun. Each man receives as a reward a sum of five marks from the state and a sumptuous dinner. The other day, on the occasion of the sixty-sixth birthday of the grand duke of Baden, three men undertook the ascent. One of them, on arriving at a projecting bar of iron half way up, went through an acrobatic performance. This was before an immense crowd of astonished spectators. He twisted and twirled about as if he were but within a few feet of the earth.—London Daily News.

Helping Them Out.

An old negro was halted after dark on one of the boulevards of New York by a man with a large club, who demanded his money or his life.

"What does all dis heah mean?"

"It means ef you don't hand out your money I'll knock your head off your shoulders," and the robber spat on his hand and drew back to strike.

"Ef I had knowed yer war kerlectin' money for de perlitikle campaign I would hab hunted yer up and helped you out er the scrape long ago, for hit's a case of real distress," said the old negro, as he cheerfully handed over three poker chips, an aged bowie knife, and several other articles of bric-a-brac.—Jury.

She Didn't Indulge.

They were enjoying a moonlight walk in the park. His was a nature strongly tinged with romance. Her nature leaned decidedly toward the practical side of life.

"Is this not positively enchanting?" he exclaimed, rapturously. "We can now drink to our fill of the beauties that nature has so lavishly bestowed upon this lovely retreat!"

"Yes; but, George, I don't drink," replied the young lady, prosaically.—N. Y. Herald.

UNDER DIFFICULTIES.

The French Sending Messages Through the German Lines.

The methods employed by the Parisian authorities for communicating with the provinces during the siege of Paris were persevering and ingenious. The principal means of sending letters was by balloons and carrier pigeons, but other plans were tried. It was almost impossible for a messenger to get through the German lines. Even when other difficulties could be overcome, the danger of a search and a discovery of a dispatch was great.

Many of the messengers made incisions in the skin, and hid a dispatch under the epidermis. Others provided themselves with hollow ten centime pieces, or hollow keys, which could be opened like a box, and in which dispatches could be hidden. One was accustomed to hide a dispatch under an artificial hollow tooth. These dispatches, of course, were written in cipher, and covered only a fragment of paper.

Attempts were made to cross the enemy's lines, by following the caves and natural tunnels under the left branch of the Seine, and by diving and crossing the bed of the river in diving suits, but these plans failed.

A curious scheme was the putting of letters into little hollow squares of zinc, and throwing these spheres into the Seine or its tributaries, hoping that they would float to Paris. They did float to Paris, but not until after the armistice. It is supposed that they were stopped by dams, or that they were discovered and held back by the Germans until the siege was at an end.

Another clever and economical device was the use of hollow glass spheres with an orifice to admit the dispatch. These were small and light; they looked so like bubbles on the water that it was impossible to distinguish them; they floated easily over the dams and through the nets set by the Germans. They would probably have proved very useful had not the river frozen soon after they were invented.—Youth's Companion.

MAN'S SENSE OF TOUCH.

Facts Not Generally Known Concerning the Sensitiveness of the Organs.

The sense of touch in man is most highly developed on the skin, but mucous or serous surfaces are also capable of conveying impressions. Some parts of the body are more sensitive than others, and are usually devoid of hairs, as the tip of the tongue, the ends of the fingers and the lips. It will be noticed that these are so situated as to keep us conveniently informed of what is going on around us.

Some of our most important organs—for instance, the heart, the brain and the lungs—are, strange to say, quite insensible to touch, thus showing that not only are nerves necessary for the sensation, but also the special end organs.

The curious fact was noticed with the greatest astonishment by Harvey, who, while treating a patient for an abscess that caused a large cavity in his side, found that, when he put his fingers into this cavity, he could actually take hold of the heart without the patient being in the least aware of what he was doing! This so interested Harvey that he brought King Charles I. to the man's bedside that "he might himself behold and touch so extraordinary a thing."

In certain operations a piece of skin is removed from the forehead to the nose; and it is stated that the patient, oddly enough, feels as if the new nasal part were still in his forehead, and may have a headache in his nose!—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

—A calcium light exhibition of war scenes was given at the Borke schoolhouse, on Tuesday evening.

—M. A. O'Hair has moved his law office into John Lohmiller's building up stairs where he has cozy rooms.

—Skating on the river was enjoyed by the lovers of this fine sport several days last week, until the sleet and snow spoiled the fun.

—Mrs. Catherine O'Leary, formerly of this place, is plaintiff in a suit for damage caused by defective sidewalk, against city of Minneapolis.

—William Dallas has purchased the furniture store of James Ryder of Buffalo, and moved his family there and taken charge of the same.

—Leon Frazee claims the honor of having sold Warren Merriman a portable 10 horse engine, and that Henry Bock hauled it up from the city.

—No. 3, of Vol. I, of the Little Citizen, of Duluth, has just arrived. It is as sparkling as before election, if its editor did not get elected to a seat in the legislature.

—George Cunningham, of Watertown, was called to St Paul, on Monday evening by a telegram announcing the serious illness of his brother, Lee, the conductor.

—Tickets are being sold for an elocutionary entertainment to be held in the city hall on the 16th and 17th inst. Proceeds to aid in buying more books for the school library.

—Lee Cunningham, one of the oldest and best known passenger conductors on this branch of the G. N. R'y, died at his home in West St. Paul yesterday. The funeral is to be held from Delano, on Saturday.

—John Lohmiller claims to have refused an offer from our present incumbent of the post office department of Delano to swap occupations. John says he is afraid Uncle Sam would stop his pay too soon if he traded.

—Valentine Eppel has a numerously signed petition asking that he be appointed Postmaster in Delano, to be presented to the proper authorities at the proper time. Mr. E. has filled the position before in a satisfactorily manner and doubtless will again.

—On Saturday, for the first time this winter, the merry jingle of sleighbells was heard on our streets. Some of our citizens enjoyed the first cutter ride of the season, while numerous bobsleds were in from the surrounding country. More snow is necessary however, for first class sleighing.

—John Cunningham has on hand $25 of the "wild cat" money of the fifties, two 10s and a 5, on an Omaha bank, an Indiania bank and one on Willington, North Carolina. He says he would not sell them for their face value as he proposes to keep them for relics. Who say wild cat money is no good?

—Ic Murphy was in the other day, looking after his champagne supper, that he won from the proprietor of the Eagle as a bet, on the last election. He says he has the privilege of inviting two friends to every one the looser invities, and proposes to have the costliest in the market. He has promised us a bill of fare for publication.

—If you want complete and reliable statistics of the Presidential election. If you want a map of the grounds of the World's Exposition and the city of Chicago, send in $1.18 for the New York World's Almanac and the GAZETTE for one year. Old subscribers paying up and one year in advance considered same as new ones.

—We are having considerable foggy and damp weather, so far, this winter. Weather calculated to produce colds, lung and throat troubles. Several cases of Pneumonia, Pleurisy, Bronchitis, Quinsy and similar diseases have made their appearance in our vicinity. People should take the precaution to keep dry feet and not to allow themselves to become chilled through. And if from any unavoidable cause they do, they should at once attend to getting rid of the difficulty before any of the above or other complaints have become established in their systems.

—Notice the change in J. R. Elliot's add.

—The deer shot by John Brasie, while on the hunting excursion with Dr. Shrader and others and for which they have been almost as long and anxiously looking as the average citizen has for Biela's comet arrived over the G. N. R. way on Tuesday.

—James Martin, one of the early settlers in this vicinity and who moved a few years ago to near Motley, Minn., died on the 23d inst. He was quite old and leaves a large family of grown children among them Philip, of this place, and Mrs. Barney McKeig, of Chatham.

—Delano has never had more enjoyable entertainments than those furnished by her Literary societies of other years. Old settlers look back to them with a degree of satisfaction, and point with pride to many of the distinguished individuals throughout the country as graduates of Delano's Literary Society. Let those interested in such a society come to some kind of an understanding and start up soon.

—Many Delano denizens sallied forth every few minutes in the cold frosty air of Sunday evening to get a view of the wonderful comet with which the earth was said to be in danger of colliding at that time, but to no purpose, and finally all was hushed in sleep. On Sunday morning the trees and other objects were covered with frost suggesting the idea that possibly the comet had become entangled among the limbs of the trees.

County Cullings.

Sheriff Nugent is the proud possessor of a new son.

District court convenes at the county seat, the first Monday in December.

Editor Scott and wife left on Wednesday of last week to spend Thanksgiving with relatives and friends in Illinois. They will be home the latter part of this week.

The Buffalo Journal and Wright County Times are having a terrible time with the Elk River News, whose editor seems to "Dare to do Right" as he thinks and not as they tell him.

The amount of poultry marketed in Wayerly this fall is remarkable. No less than 20,000 pounds of turkeys geese, ducks and chickens have been purchased by our dealers within the past week.—Waverly Tribune.

When we come to figure up what Wright county Democrats have to be thankful for we find they have their share. They have three out of the five county commissioners. A Democrat holds the office of register of deeds, county treasurer and clerk of court. A Democrat represents them in congress. The three Democrats they voted for for supreme judges of the state were elected Grover Cleveland and Adlai Stevenson and a Democratic congress are at the head of national affairs. Most all the appointive United States offices will soon be filled with Democrats. Surely things look encouraging to Wright county Democrats.

The Literary season of the year has arrived. The evenings are now long enough to suit the most exacting in this direction. Let the elocutionist, the debator, the reader, the essayist and others of a literary turn of mind come together and organize a society for the amusement and instruction of each other and of as many others as can attend the meetings. Send in your programmes each week soon enough for publication, and we will try to aid you in securing crowded houses by letting folks know what you are going to have. And don't fail to have all we advertise as we don't wish to be instrumental in fooling the folks. Wake up and start in at once.

Pneumonia.

Pneumonia, in this region, is apt to begin with, or follow a "bad cold," is frequently preceded by a short attack of pleurisy. The most common seat of pain is first in the region of the stomach, and vomiting may occur; one or more chills may usher in the attack. Headache, pain in the back, general soreness all over with a pain in the lower part of the right lung, high fever, in some cases profuse perspiration, and the patient is in for a run of pneumonia, or, so-called, lung fever. The inflammation may be confined to any portion of the lung but usually begins in the right and in the lower lobe from whence it may spread or recovery may take place. It is considered a self limited disease with a tendency to recovery under favorable circumstances.

The Toledo Weekly Blade.

The most popular and best known weekly newspaper printed in this country is the Toledo Blade. For more than twenty years it has had a circulation of 100,000 or 200,000, going regularly into every state and territory of the Union. From fifteen to twenty-five tons of print paper is consumed in each week's edition, and it is regularly mailed to more than half the postoffice of the United States. It is a peculiar fact that the Blade is the only weekly newspaper published that has regular subscribers in all parts of the United States. It is edited with special reference to the wants of all people in all sections. It is also made to interest every member of the family. Besides all the news of the world, it has Serial and Short Stories, Wit and Humor, Poetry, Campfire, Farm, Sunday School Lessons, Young Folks, Poultry, Puzzles, Household, Answers to Correspondents, Etc., Etc. As a special feature for 1893, Mr. Robinson Locke, editor and proprietor of the Blade, has just sailed for Japan, and will contribute a series of illustrated letters on the manners and customs of that peculiar country and its people. These articles will be commenced sometime in February or March, and will be worth to the readers of the Blade many times the subscription price. Every reader of this paper is invited to send for a specimen copy. The publishers of the Blade would be glad to send a specimen copy to every reader in this country. Subscription price of the Blade, one dollar a year. Five dollars in cash will be paid to any person sending in a small club of subscribers. Write for agents' terms, giving particulars. Address "The Blade, Toledo, Ohio. Or the Blade and Buffalo Gazette will be furnished you for $1,75 per year at this office.

To the Public.

W. H. FRAZEE. LEON FRAZEE.

Having leased the American House at Buffalo, together with the stables in connection with the property, we would most respectfully solicit the patronage of the traveling public whenever in the county seat. We will try to furnish accommodations as good and at as reasonable rates as any in the village. We will continue our machinery business in both Buffalo and Delano as heretofore. Give us a call at either or all our business places.

Yours Respectfully,
W. H. FRAZEE & SON.

Once more the traveler packs his grip,
And starts upon his season trip;
He starts for Conzet, Darrow & Son,
Where most his business now is done.
He sells them Blanket, Robe and Bell;
And Collars, by the gross, as well.
He sells them down, so low, and cheap,
That we just buy them by the heap.
Now we sell them at lower price,
It gives the people great surprise.
We have those goods just by the heap,
And you just bet we sell them cheap.

With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO. Chicago, Ill

THE Starbuck Journal, of Pope county, is the latest addition to our exchange list.

IT looks as if considerable opposition would be met with by those trying to secure a free text book law in our next legislature.

THE last session of the Fifty-second Congress is now in session. A very tame affair it is supposed to be under the circumstances.

A PROMINENT Delano Scandinavian was heard to remark the other day: "Knute Nelson is the first Swede king Minnesota ever had."

MOSES E. CLAPP is growing in favor as a Senatorial candidate. Already several of the country papers are claiming him by right of discovery.

ONE is reminded of the days of the Southern Confederacy when he reads of the Minnesota Legislature with the "Davis" men headed by "Lee," etc., etc.

THE Special Legislation act recently approved by a vote of the people is making some of them city chaps scratch their heads to find a way to get in their bills.

ON the inside of this paper will be found President Harrison's last message to Congress. Read it over carefully and judge for yourself if it is in accord with the expressed wishes of the voters of the United States.

JACOB GERBER, of Omaha, has according to accounts, had a serious time of it. He came to this country, so the story goes, and after six years of industry and frugality, saved enough to bring his family over. He had taken out his first papers and supposed himself safe under the protection of the U. S. flag. He went to Russia after his family was taken in hand by Russian authorities and sentenced to 15 years in Siberia, but after nine months of excrutiating torture, through the aid of money sent him by his wife, secured his passage back to Omaha, a poorer but wiser man. It seems unsafe to return to the old countries unless full papers of citizenship have been taken out, if you desire to come back here.

IT is just a little laughable to see how our Republican brethren are trying to keep the Cushman K. Davis Senatorial Electorial college together. The only issue they tried to make in electing legislators this fall was that C. K. must be returned to the U. S. senate. No difference who was on the ticket so he would vote for C. K. put him in, our state matters cut no figure a long side of getting C. K. back to the seat he has held for six long years. Now the papers are claiming that the Republicans are sure of 24 majority and a sure thing as an electoral college. But are all these country fellows going to sit there with their months open and swallow whatever the city chaps see fit to fill them with? Why not have a representative from the country?

Free Text Books.

The Free Text Book question is among the important measures to be voted on by our Legislature this winter. This is a question of importance to every American citizen. It is a question having its pros and cons. It is a question of far more importance than would at first glance appear to the ordinary individual in every day life. On the selecting of text books for our schools may hang the fate of our Government in the next generation or two. A great deal is at stake, and on what is found in our text books and taught our children at school depends in a great measure their ideas of life, of citizenship, and, may be of hereafter. Let this question be well weighed, and discussed from every point. Let the people understand its importance. Let them reason for themselves, and let not the matter be hastily settled, or placed in the balance against any sums of money that agents for books or other interested parties may bring to bear, but let it be settled honestly, honorably and in a proper manner.

Davis' Dilemma.

Senator Davis is in another dilemma. Shall he marshal his forces and elect his man Lee, Speaker, and be turned down as was Sabin, under similar circumstances; or shall he view the fray from afar and take his chances on final results?

Either method looks as if it might be a way out.

Death of J. F. Miller.

CUMBERLAND, Wis., Dec. 8.—J. F. Miller, treasurer and general manager of the Beaver Dam Lumber company, director and treasurer of the Eastern Allaska Mining and Milling company, proprietor of the Bank of Cumberland, and a heavy operator in land and pine, died at his home in this city today, aged fifty-six years.—The St. Paul Globe.

Mr. Miller was formerly a citizen of Delano and Montrose, and has many warm friends here, who sympathize with the family.

HOW WOULD THIS SUIT

Preposition to Increase the Judges on the Supreme Bench.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 1.—There is a good deal of talk in state political circles about increasing the judges of the supreme court to seven, by the appointment of two more. It is not unlikely that a bill of that kind will be introduced as a step toward reaching a non-partisn and non-political judiciary. Two appointes by Gov. Nelson would make the court Republican as before the recent inundation. It is believed that a measure of that kind could be passed by the senate as it now stands, as well as by the Republican house as it will be with its strong Republican majority.—Minneapolis Evening Tribune.

It would not suit at all. Unless better reasons than changing the political complexion from one party to another can be given it would look like politics with a vengence. It is not argued by the Tribune's special from St. Paul, that there is any need of a larger number of judges; that the bench is crowded with work; but, simply that the usual number of Republicans are not on the bench, the people left them off, and the bench is Democratic, so they suggest lengthening it out so as to hold two more to be appointed by Gov. Nelson.

J. J. Green, late of the Le Sueur Sentinel, will soon start a new paper at Hutchinson, McLeod county. The material has been purchased.—St. Peter Herald.

THE Republican newspapers are not saying much about "calamity howlers" just now. They are doing something in the calamity line themselves since election.—Brainerd Journal.

A Child Disappears.

REDWOOD FALLS, Minn., Dec. 2.—The seven year old child of H. S. Gilbert, a farmer living eight miles from this city, is still missing. She was sent to school Thursday morning and has not been seen since. A large party is searching the prairie for the child. There are two theories for the mysterious disappearance; either the child was kidnapped or she wandered into a slough last night and was drowned. The grief-stricken parents have not given up hope and the search continues. —The Minneapolis Times.

Few Words and to the Point.

Children in Sparta were allowed to say very little, so that when they spoke it was sensibly and to the point. In connection with this it is said that an Athenian once laughed at the short swords the Sparatans used, and said that the jugglers on the stage had no difficulty in swallowing them; whereupon Agis, the king of Sparta, replied: "We find them long enough to reach our enemies with." And, adds the old historian, as their swords were short and sharp, so, it seems to me, were their saying. In connection with this breverity of speech it was asked of King Charilaus, the nephew of Lycurgus, why his uncle had made so few laws. "Men of few words require but few laws," answered the king briefly. Archidamus being asked how many Sparatans there were, replied, also to the point: "Enough, sir, to keep out wicked men."—Womankind.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

It seems the winter is not coming on us very severely yet, perhaps the predicted comet has had something to do with the mild weather.

On account of the low price for several years it seems that wheat raising is going out of favor with the farmers. For years I have advocated a diversity of crop; think this would pay best for small farmers at least.

Rain in December is not a very common thing in this country, the indications are that we will have rather an open winter. Minnesota is getting to be rather a mild climate.

The principal of the Maple Plain school says Maple Plain correspondent miss quoted him in last week's GAZETTE, when he made it read that he was off looking up the comet and his best girl.

The Republicans want to know what we, Democrats, are going to do now. Well, I suppose about the first thing will be to make a new world, (for that is what the Republicans will require of us) and fill it with poor whisky, foreign missionary societies, fourth class post offices and a navy to protect it. McKinley was not the Bloucher in the last political campaign but rather the Napoleon who fled from the field of Waterloo, and regaled himself upon the Island of St. Helena, his political funeral dirge is now being sung throughout to the tune of "Home, Sweet Home. There is no place like home."

Hennepin County Schools.

James R. Personett, we hear, is giving excellent satisfaction as teacher of the village school at Armstrong.

Mrs. E. P. Mills, nee Elma O'Mera, for many years one of Hennepin county's most successful teachers, is taking a rest this year from her school-room labors. Mrs. Mills taught the Maple Plain school last year, and with marked success. Her sister, Edna, is teaching in Montana.

Sup't elect Lewis has again chosen Mr. Shaver as his assistant. Mrs. A. S. Beede and Prof. J. T. Pribble, two of the best teachers in the state, were applicants for that position, and Mrs. Baker's name was also prominently mentioned in connection with it. Some believe that, as Mrs. Beede was the second choice of the Democracy in convention assembled for superintendent, and as Sup't Lewis' re-election was, in a large measure, due to her independent candidacy, she was the most entitled to the assistantship; and nearly everyone, so far as we have heard the public give expression to their views upon the subject, concedes that it would have been a big feather in Prof. Lewis' cap, had he seen fit to appoint her, and an incalculable benefit to the schools. Prof. Pribble and Mr. Baker's friends also advance very plausible reasons why their favorite should have been chosen. The public have not, as yet, heard from Prof. Lewis himself on the subject, nor is it considered necessary that he be very explicit on this point, as the services of Mr. Shaver during the past two years prove, to the entire satisfaction of the general public, that he is an excellent man for the place.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Dec. 2, 1892.

The work of the second session of the Fifty second Congress really began this week, although there is not a quorum of either House or Senate yet in town and the formal opening will not take place until next Monday. The work which was this week assigned to sub-committees at a full meeting of the House committee on appropriations is the most important that will come before this Congress in its bearing upon the immediate future of President elect Cleveland's administration and of the Democratic party—the preparation of the regular appropriation bills that are to be passed at this session for the support of the Government for the year beginning July 1, 1893. Representative Holman, chairman of the committee, urged upon his colleagues the necessity for the most careful scrutiny of every item in each of these bills and the ruthless cutting out of every dollar not absolutely necessary to keep the Government wheels running. The uncertainty about the condition the Republicans will leave the Treasury in when they retire next year adds to the necessity for the most careful work on the part of these sub-committees.

Aside from the regular appropriations there is a difference of opinion as to what, if any, other important legislation will be taken up in the House. Some Democrats think that the free coinage bill which was passed by the Senate at the last session and which is now on the House calandar, but where it cannot be reached without the reporting of a special order by the committee on Rules, should be taken up and passed; others who at one time favored free coinage say now that it would not be wise to adopt any financial legislation until after the tariff has been revised and its effect upon our finances and business shall have been carefully observed.

There is such a very decided sentiment among Democrats in favor of an income tax that unless it shall be thought good policy to let it go over until the meeting of the Fifty third Congress it is altogether probable that the House will pass a bill providing for a graduated tax on all annual incomes in excess of $5,000. No one expects that the present Senate will agree to an income tax—it contains too many rich republicans—but those who think it should be passed at this session believe that it would result in making its popularity so plain that it would be certain of passing the next Congress, and of becoming a law, although it is said that while Mr. Cleveland does not now exactly oppose the idea, he has not made up his mind in favor of it.

There may be a very exciting time over this Panama business, in both House and Senate whether it shall prove to be as many now believe that the Pacific mail steam ship company is trying to make use of the Monroe doctrine and the power of the United States Government to put money in its purse, or in reality an infringement of American rights by an agent of the French Government. It is expected that Congress will thoroughly sift the matter if it does, look out, that's all.

It is stated here on what appears to be good authority that Hon. Charles S. Fairchild, of New York, who was Mr. Cleveland's secretary of treasury, has consented to fill the same position under the coming administration, the tender of the portfolio having been made to him immediately after the election. Mr. Fairchild made an excellent secretary of the treasury before, and in view of the expected deficit in the treasury and other financial complications certain to arise early in Mr. Cleveland's administration his selection is regarded here as a wise one, although there were political reasons against it.

Superstitious people are asking each other in whispers whether it is the White House or the Harrison family which has passed under the baneful influence of a death "hoodoo." The death of Dr. Scott, Mr. Harrison's father-in-law, whose funeral services were held in the White House yesterday afternoon, makes the ninth death in the families of those connected with the White House since Mr. Harrison became President, besides Secretary Tracy's wife and daughter, whose funerals were held there. The death of Dr. Scott was particularly trying to Mr. Harrison who was already nearly broken down with grief for his wife and the long hours he has been putting in at work on his annual message to Congress, which will be sent in next Tuesday. The sympathy for him is universal.

In addition to the many other arguments for holding an extra session of the Fifty-third Congress it is now urged that an extra session would enable the new committees to be announced and to put in all next summer at work perfecting bills to be introduced at the regular session, and that it could admit Arizona and New Mexico as States, thus making democratic control of the Senate actual, instead of dependent on the whims of third-party Senators.

Social Strugglers.

One of the most interesting phases of American life is found in the struggles for social supremacy which are constantly taking place in the ever changing conditions of society in the larger cities. Hjalmer Hjorth Boyesen, who spends his winters on Murray Hill and his summers in one of the most fashionable of the Long Island watering places, has written a story for The Cosmopolitan dealing with those phases of American life which is likely to be received with the widest interest. The powerful stroke of the sturdy nouveau riche have nowhere been so truly and so wittily presented as in the case of the Bulkeleys, whose fortunes are begun in the September Cosmopolitan. Side by side with the fortunes of those who have so much money that the most serious concern of life becomes the question of how to spend, is a discussion of the fortunes of those with whom the question is how to provide the necessaries of life. This is done by Mr. Walker, of the Cosmopolitan, who chooses to view the Homestead difficulties as an object lesson in the Evolution of a Republican form of government. He considers dispassionatedly all the dangers to the state arising from the extensive colonies of workmen brought together under our present system of concentration and the growing imperfection in our system of distribution, and does not hesitate to say that reform should come from the hands of those who fix the laws regulating distribution. The story of the Chicago Convention bears re-telling by the veteran Murat Halstead. The first of a series of three articles on Education in the south is from the pen of the President of the University of Tennessee. The delightful article on the Island of Jersey and Jersey cows. An article on the Cotton District of the South and Miss Esther Singleton's chronicle of the certain celebrated but uncanny British spectres embrace some of the more entertaining features of the September Cosmopolitan.

Should these estimates prove correct, the total will be about 14,425,000, against 11,380,860 in 1888, and Cleveland will get 925,000 less than one-half of the votes cast.

PRESIDENT HARRISON'S MESSAGE.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—The following are the most important points in President Harrison's message to congress:

TO THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES: In submitting my annual message to congress, I have great satisfaction in being able to say that the general conditions affecting the commercial and industrial interests of the United States are in the highest degree favorable. A comparison of the existing conditions with those of the most favored period in the history of the country will I believe show that so high a degree of prosperity and so general a diffusion of the comforts of life were never before enjoyed by our people.

Wealth of the Country.

The total wealth of the country in 1860 was $16,159,616,068. In 1890 it amounted to $62,610,000,000, an increase of 287 per cent.

Railway Statistics.

The total mileage of railways in the United States in 1860 was 30,626; in 1890 it was 167,741, an increase of 448 per cent.; and it is estimated that there will be about 4,000 miles of track added by the close of the year 1892.

The Census.

The official returns of the eleventh census and those of the tenth census for seventy-five leading cities furnish the basis for the following comparisons:

In 1880 the capital invested in manufacturing was $1,232,839,670. In 1890 the capital invested in manufacturing was $2,900,735,884. In 1880, the number of employes was 1,301,363. In 1890, the number of employes was 2,251,134. In 1880, the wages earned were $501,965,778. In 1890, the wages earned were $1,221,170,454. In 1880, the value of the product was $2,711,579,899. In 1890, the value of the product was $4,860,286,837.

I am informed by the superintendent of the census that the omission of certain industries in 1880 which were included in 1890 accounts in part for the remarkable increase thus shown. But, after making full allowance for differences of method and deducting the returns for all industries not included in the census of 1880, there remain in the reports from these 75 cities increase in the capital employed of $1,522,745,804; in the value of the product of $2,024,236,166; in wages earned of $677,943,929, and in the number of wage earners employed of 856,829. The wage earners not only show an increase aggregate, but an increase per capita from $386 in 1880 to $547 in 1890, or 41.71 per cent.

The new industrial plants established since October 6, 1890, and up to October 22, 1892, as partially reported in the American Economist, number 345, and the extension of existing plants 108; the new capital invested amounts to $40,449,050 and the number of additional employes to 37,285.

The Cotton Industry.

The Textile World for July, 1892, states that during the first six months of the present calendar year 135 new factories were built, of which 40 are cotton mills, 48 knitting mills, 26 woolen mills, 15 silk mills, 4 plush mills and 2 linen mills. Of the 40 cotton mills 21 have been built in the southern states. Mr. A. B. Shepperson, of the New York cotton exchange, estimates the number of working spindles in the union September 1, 1892, at 15,250,000, an increase of 250,000 over the year 1891. The consumption of cotton by American mills in 1891 was 2,396,500 bales and in 1892 2,584,000 bales, an increase of 188,000 bales. From the year 1880 to 1892 inclusive, there has been an increase in the consumption of cotton in Europe of 92 per cent., while during the same period the increase in the consumption in the United States has been about 150 per cent.

Tin Plate.

The report of Ira Ayer, special agent of the treasury department, shows that at the date of September 30, 1892, there were thirty-two companies manufacturing tin and terne plate in the United States and fourteen companies building new works for such manufacture. The estimated investment in buildings and plants at the close of the fiscal year, June 30, 1893, if existing conditions were to be continued, was $5,000,000 and the estimated rate of production 200,000,000 pounds per annum. The actual production of the quarter ended September 30, 1892, was 10,262,725 pounds.

Some Labor Statistics.

The report of Labor Commissioner Peck, of New York, shows that during the year 1891, in about 6,000 manufacturing establishments in that state embraced within the special inquiry made by him, and representing sixty-seven different industries, there was a net increase over the year 1890 of $31,315,130.68 in the value of the product and of $6,377,925.09 in the amount of wages paid. The report of the commissioner of labor for the state of Massachusetts shows that 3,743 industries in that state paid $129,416,248 in wages during the year 1891, against $126,030,303 in 1890, an increase of $3,385,945, and that there was an increase of $9,932,490 in the amount of capital and of 7,346 in the number of persons employed in the same period.

Pig Iron.

During the last six months of the year 1891 and the first six months of 1892 the total production of pig iron was 9,710,819 tons, as against 9,029,703 tons in the year 1890, which was the largest annual production ever attained. For the same twelve months of 1891-92 the production of Bessemer ingots was 5,878,581 tons, an increase of 189,710 gross tons over the production of 3,688,871 gross tons in 1890. The production of Bessemer steel rails for the first six months of 1892 was 772,436 gross tons, as against 726,080 gross tons during the last six months of the year 1891.

Exports and Imports.

The total value of our foreign trade (exports and manufactures) during the last fiscal year was $1,857,680,610, an increase of $128,283,604 over the previous fiscal year. The average annual value of our imports and exports of merchandise for the ten fiscal years prior to 1891 was $1,457,322,019. It will be observed that our foreign trade for 1892 exceeded this annual average value by $400,358,591, an increase of 27.47 per cent. The significance and value of this increase are shown by the fact that the excess in the trade of 1892 over 1891 was wholly in the value of exports, for there was a decrease in the value of imports of $17,513,754.

The value of our exports during the fiscal year 1892 reached the highest figure in the history of the government, amounting to $1,009,278,148, exceeding by $145,797,338 the exports of 1891 and exceeding the value of the imports by $202,875,686. A comparison of the value of our exports for 1892 with the annual average for the ten years prior to 1891 shows an excess of $265,142,671, or of 34.65 per cent. The value of our imports of merchandise for 1892, which was $829,402,462, also exceeded the annual average value of the ten years prior to 1891 by $135,215,940. During the fiscal year 1892 the value of imports free of duty amounted to $457,999,658, the largest aggregate in the history of our commerce. The value of imports of merchandise entered free of duty in 1892 was 55.35 per cent. of the total value of imports, as compared with 43.35 per cent. in 1891, and 33.66 per cent. in 1890.

Internal Commerce.

In our coastwise trade a most encouraging development is in progress, there having been in the last four years an increase of 16 per cent. In internal commerce the statistics show that no such period of prosperity has ever before existed. The freight carried in the coastwise trade of the great lakes in 1890 aggregated 28,295,959 tons.

On the Mississippi, Missouri and Ohio rivers and the tributaries in the same year the traffic aggregated 29,405,046 tons and the total vessel tonnage passing through the Detroit river during that year was 21,684,000 tons. The vessel tonnage entered and cleared in the foreign trade of London during 1890 amounted to 13,480,767 tons, and of Liverpool 10,941,800 tons, a total for these two great shipping ports of 21,422,568 tons, only slightly in excess of the vessel tonnage passing through the Detroit river. And it should be said that the season of the Detroit river was but 228 days, while, of course, in London and Liverpool the season was of the entire year. The vessel tonnage passing through the St. Mary's canal of the fiscal year 1892 amounted to 9,838,874 tons, and the freight tonnage of the Detroit river is estimated for that year at 25,000,000 tons, against 23,209,619 tons in 1891. The aggregate traffic on our railroads for the year 1891 amounted to 704,398,609 tons of freight, compared with 691,344,437 tons in 1890, an increase of 13,054,172 tons.

Savings Banks.

Another indication of the general prosperity of the country is found in the fact that the number of depositors in savings banks increased from 693,870 in 1860 to 4,258,893 in 1890, an increase of 513 per cent., and the amount of deposits from $149,277,904 in 1860 to $1,524,844,506 in 1890, an increase of 921 per cent. In 1891 the amount of deposits in savings banks was $1,623,079,749. It is estimated that 90 per cent. of these deposits represent the savings of wage earners. The bank clearances for five months ending September 30, 1891, amounted to $41,049,390,808. For the same months in 1892 they amounted to $45,189,601,947, an excess for the nine months of $4,140,211,139.

An Era of Prosperity.

There never has been a time in our history when work was so abundant or when wages were as high, whether measured by the currency in which they are paid or by their power to supply the necessaries and comforts of life. It is true that the market prices of cotton and wheat have been low. It is one of the unfavorable incidents of agriculture that the farmer cannot produce upon orders; he must sow and reap in ignorance of the aggregate production of the year and is peculiarly subject to the depreciation which follows overproduction. But, while the fact I have stated is true as to the crops mentioned, the general average of prices has been such as to give to agriculture a fair participation in the government prosperity.

Value of Farm Products.

The value of our total farm products has increased from $1,363,646,866 in 1880 to $4,500,000,000 in 1891, as estimated by statisticians, an increase of 230 per cent. The number of hogs January 1, 1891, was 50,625,106 and their value $210,103,925; on January 1, 1892, the number was 52,398,019 and the value $241,031,415. On January 1, 1891, the number of cattle was 36,875,648 and the value $544,127,908; on January 1, 1892, the number was 37,051,249 and the value $570,749,155.

American Toilers Well Off.

If any are discontented with their state here; if any live in that the wages or prices, the returns for honest toil are inadequate, they should not fail to remember that there is no other country in the world where the conditions that seem to them hard would not be accepted as highly prosperous. The English agriculturist would be glad to exchange the returns of his labor for those of the American farmer and the Manchester workmen their wages for those of their fellows at Fall river.

Due to Protection.

I believe that the protective system which now for something like thirty years has prevailed in our legislation has been a mighty instrument for the development of our national wealth and a most powerful agency in protecting the homes of our workingmen from the invasion of want. I have felt a most solicitous interest to preserve to our working people rates of wages that would not only give daily bread, but supply a comfortable margin for those home attractions and family comforts and enjoyments without which life is neither hopeful nor sweet. They are American citizens—a part of the great people for whom our constitution and government were framed and instituted—and it cannot be a perversion of that constitution to so legislate as to preserve in their homes the comfort, independence, loyalty and sense of interest in the government which are essential to good citizenship in peace and which will bring this stalwart throng, as in 1861, to the defense of the flag when it is assailed.

A New Tariff Policy Demanded.

It is not my purpose to renew here the argument in favor of a protective tariff. The result of the recent election must be accepted as having introduced a new policy. We must assume that the present tariff, constructed upon the lines of protection, is to be repealed and that there is to be substituted for it a tariff law constructed solely with reference to revenue; that the duty is to be higher because the increase will keep open an American mill or keep up the wages of an American workman, but that in every case such a rate of duty is to be imposed as will bring to the treasury of the United States the largest returns of revenue. The contention has not been between schedules, but between principles, and it would be offensive to suggest that the prevailing party will not carry into legislation the principles advocated by it and the pledges given to the people. The tariff bills passed by the house of representatives at the last session were, as supposed, even in the opinion of their promoters, inadequate, and justified only by the fact that the senate and house of representatives were not in accord, and that a general revision could not, therefore, be undertaken.

Democrats Should Revise the Tariff.

I recommend that the whole subject of tariff revision be left to the incoming congress. It is matter of regret that this work must be delayed for at least three months: for the threat of great tariff changes introduces so much uncertainty that an amount, not easily estimated, of business inaction and of diminished production will result therefrom. The apprehension also, that this uncertainty may result in decreased revenues from customs duties, for our merchants will make cautious orders for foreign goods in view of the prospect of tariff reductions and the uncertainty as to when they will take effect. Those who have advocated a protective tariff can well afford to have their disastrous forecasts of a change of policy disappointed. If a system of customs duties can be framed that will set the idle wheels and looms of Europe in motion and crowd our warehouses with foreign-made goods, and at the same time keep our own mills busy; that will give us an increased participation in the "markets of the world" of greater value than the home market we surrender; that will give increased work to foreign workmen upon products to be consumed by our people without diminishing the amount of work to be done here; that will enable the American manufacturer to pay to his workmen from 50 to 100 per cent more in wages than is paid in the foreign mill and yet to compete in our market and in foreign markets with the foreign producer; that will further reduce the cost of articles of wear and food without reducing the wages of those who produce them; that can be celebrated, after the effects have been realized, as its expectation has been, in European as well as in American cities, the authors and promoters of it will be entitled to the highest praise.

Will Await Results.

We have had in our history several experiences of the contrasted effects of a revenue and of a protective tariff, but this generation has not felt them, and the experience of one generation is not highly instructive to the next. The friends of the protective system, with undiminished confidence in the principles they have advocated, will await the results of the new experiment.

The strained and too often disturbed relations existing between the employes and the employers in our great manufacturing establishments have not been favorable to a calm consideration by the wage-earner of the effect upon wages of the protective system. The facts that his wages were the highest paid in like callings in the world is manifestly no measure of this rate of wages, in the absence of protective duties upon the product of his labor, was impossible, were obscured by the passion evoked by these contests. He may now be able to survey the question in the light of his personal experience under the operation of a tariff for revenue only. If that experience shall demonstrate that present rates of wages are thereby maintained or increased, either absolutely or in their purchasing power, and that the aggregate volume of work to homes in this country is increased, or even maintained, so that there are more or as many days' work in a year at as good or better wages for the American workmen as has been the case under the protective system, every one will rejoice. A general process of wage reduction cannot be contemplated by any patriotic citizen without the graves apprehension. It may be, indeed, I believe it is possible for the American manufacturer to compete successfully with his foreign rivals in many branches of production, without the defense of protective duties, if the pay rolls are equalized; but the conflict that stands between the producer and that result and the distress of our working people when it is attained, are not pleasant to contemplate. The Society for Unemployed, now holding its frequent and threatening parades in the streets of foreign cities, should not be allowed to acquire an American domicile.

The Administration.

The reports of the heads of the several executive departments, which are herewith submitted, have very naturally included a resume of the whole work of the administration of the transactions of the last fiscal year. The attention, not only of congress, but of the country, is again invited to the methods of administrating which have been pursued and the results which have been attained. Public revenues amounting to $1,414,079,292.28 have been collected and disbursed without loss from misappropriation, without a single defalcation of such importance as to attract the public attention, and at a diminished per cent. of cost for collection. The public business has not only been transacted with fidelity but progressively, and with a view of giving to the people in the fullest possible degree the benefits of a service established and maintained for their protection and comfort.

Foreign Relations.

Our relations with other nations are now undisturbed by any serious controversy. The complicated and threatening differences with Germany and England relating to Samoan affairs, with England in relation to the seal fisheries in the Behring sea, and with Chili growing out of the Baltimore affair, have been adjusted.

Reciprocity.

There have been negotiated and concluded, under section 3 of the tariff law, commercial agreements relating to reciprocal trade with the following countries: Brazil, Dominican Republic, Spain, for Cuba and Puerto Rico, Guatemala, Salvador, the German empire, Great Britain for certain West Indian colonies and British Guiana, Nicaragua, Honduras and Austria-Hungary. Of these, those with Guatemala, Salvador, the German empire, Great Britain, Nicaragua, Honduras and Austria-Hungary have been concluded since my last annual message. Under these trade arrangements a free or unfavored admission has been secured in every case for an important list of American products. Especial care has been taken to secure markets for farm products in order to relieve the great underlying industry of the depression which the lack of an adequate foreign market for our surplus often brings. An opening has also been made for manufactured products that will undoubtedly, if this policy is maintained, greatly augment our export trade. The full benefits of these arrangements cannot be realized instantly. New lines of trade are to be opened. The commercial traveler must survey the field. The manufacturer must adapt his goods to the new markets and facilities for exchange must be established. This work has been well begun, our merchants and manufacturers have entered the new fields with courage and enterprise. In the case of food products, and especially with Cuba, the trade did not need to wait and the immediate results have been large and gratifying. If this policy and those trade arrangements can be continued in force and aided by the establishment of American steamship lines, I do not doubt that we shall, within a short period, secure fully one-third of the total trade of the countries of Central and South America, which now amounts to about $600,000,000 annually. In 1885 we had only 8 per cent. of this trade.

The following statistics show the increase in our trade with the countries with which we have reciprocal trade agreements from the date when such agreements went into effect up to September 30, 1892, the increase being in some almost wholly and in others in an important degree the result of these agreements.

The domestic exports to Germany and Austria-Hungary have increased in value from $47,673,756 to $57,993,064, an increase of $10,319,308, or 21.63 per cent. With American countries the value of our exports has increased from $44,- 160,285 to $54,613,598, an increase of $10,453,313, or 23.67 per cent. The total increase in the value of exports to all the countries with which we have reciprocity agreements has been $20,772,621. This increase is chiefly in wheat, flour, meat and dairy products, and in manufactures of iron, steel and lumber. There has been a large increase in the value of imports from all these countries since the commercial agreements went into effect, amounting to $74,294,525, but it has been entirely in imports from the American countries, consisting mostly of sugar, coffee, India rubber and crude drugs. The alarmed attention of our European competitors for the South American market has been attracted to this new American policy and to our acquisition and their loss of South American trade.

The Seal Question.

A treaty providing for the arbitration of the dispute between Great Britain and the United States as to the killing of seals in the Behring sea was concluded on the 29th of February last. This treaty was accompanied by an agreement prohibiting Pelagic sealing pending the arbitration, and a vigorous effort was made during this season to drive out all poaching sealers from the Behring sea. Six naval vessels, three revenue cutters and one vessel from the fish commission, all under command of Commander Evans, of the navy, were sent into the sea, which was systematically patrolled. Some seizures were made and it is believed that the catch in the Behring sea by poachers amounted to less than 500 seals. It is true, however, that in the North Pacific, while the seal herds were on their way to the passes between the Aleutian islands, a very large number, probably 35,000, were taken. The existing statutes of the United States do not restrain our citizens from taking seals in the Pacific ocean, and perhaps should not, unless the prohibition can be extended to the citizens of other nations. I recommend that power be given to the president (by proclamation) to prohibit the taking of seals in the North Pacific by American vessels, in case either as the result of the findings of the tribunal of arbitration, or otherwise, the restraints can be applied to the vessels of all countries. The case of the United States for the tribunal of arbitration has been prepared with great care and industry by Hon. John W. Foster, and the counsel who represent this government express confidence that a result substantially establishing our claims and preserving this great industry for the benefit of all nations will be attained.

Relations with Canada.

During the past year a suggestion was received through the British minister that the Canadian government would like to confer as to the possibility of enlarging, upon terms of mutual advantage, the commercial exchanges of Canada and of the United States and a conference was held at Washington, with Mr. Blaine acting for this government and the British minister at this capital and three members of the Dominion cabinet acting as commissioners on the part of Great Britain. The conference developed the fact that the Canadian government was quite prepared to offer to the United States, in exchange for the concessions asked, the admission of natural products. The statement was frankly made that favored rates could not be given to the United States as against the mother country. This admission, which was foreseen, necessarily terminated the conference upon this question. The benefits of an exchange of natural products would be almost wholly with the people of Canada. Some other topics of interest were considered by the conference, and have resulted in the making of a convention for examining the Alaskan boundary and the waters of Passamaquoddy bay adjacent to Eastport, Me., and in the initiation of an arrangement for the protection of fish life in the Coterminous and neighboring waters on our northern border. The controversy as to tolls upon the Welland canal, which was presented to congress at the last session by special message, having failed of adjustment, I felt constrained to exercise the authority conferred upon me by the act of July 26, 1892, and to proclaim a suspension of the free use of St. Mary's Falls canal to cargoes in transit to ports in Canada. The secretary of the treasury established such tolls as were thought to be equivalent to the exactions unjustly levied upon our commerce in the Canadian canals.

If, as we must suppose, the political relations of Canada and the disposition of the Canadian government are to remain unchanged, a somewhat radical revision of our trade relations should, I think, be made. Our relations must continue to be intimate, and they should be friendly. It is not to say, however, that in many of the controversies, notably those as to the fisheries on the Atlantic, the sealing interests on the Pacific and the canal tolls, our negotiations with Great Britain have continuously been thwarted or retarded by unreasonable and unfriendly objections and protests from Canada. In the matter of the canal tolls, our treaty rights were flagrantly disregarded. It is hardly too much to say that the Canadian Pacific and other railway lines which parallel our northern boundary are largely sustained by commerce having either its origin or terminus, or both, in the United States. Canadian railroads compete with those of the United States for our traffic, and without the restraints of our interstate commerce act. Their cars pass almost without detention into and out of our territory.

The Canadian Pacific railway brought into the United States from China and Japan via British Columbia during the year ended June 30, 1892, 23,239,689 pounds of freight, and it carried from the United States to be shipped to China and Japan via British Columbia 24,388,000 pounds of freight. There were also shipped from the United States over this road from eastern ports of the United States to our Pacific ports during the same year 13,912,073 pounds of freight, and there were received over this road at the United States eastern ports from ports on the Pacific coast 13,293,315 pounds of freight. Mr. Joseph Nimmo, Jr., former chief of the bureau of statistics, before the United States select committee on relations with Canada, April 26, 1890, said that the value of goods thus transported between different points in the United States across Canadian territory probably amounts to $100,000,000 a year.

There is no disposition on the part of the people or government of the United States to interfere in the smallest degree with the political relations of Canada. That question is wholly with her own people. It is time for us, however, to consider whether, if the present state of things and trend of things is to continue, our interchanges upon lines of land transportation should not be put upon a different basis, and our entire independence of Canadian canals and of the St. Lawrence, as an outlet to the sea secured by the construction of an American canal around the falls of Niagara and the opening of ship communication between the great lakes and one of our own sea ports. We should not hesitate to avail ourselves of our great natural trade advantages. We should withdraw the support which is given to the railroads and steamship lines of Canada by a traffic that properly belongs to us, and no longer furnish the earnings which lighten the otherwise crushing weight of the enormous public subsidies that have been given to them. The subject of the power of the treasury to deal with this matter without further legislation has been under consideration, but circumstances have postponed a conclusion. It is probable that a consideration of the propriety of a modification or abrogation of the article of the treaty of Washington relating to the transit of goods in bond is involved in any complete solution of the question.

Peace with Chili.

Congress at the last session was kept advised of the progress of the serious and for a time threatening differences between the United States and Chili. It gives me now great gratification to report that the Chilian government, in a most friendly and honorable spirit, has tendered and paid as an indemnity to the families of the sailors of the Baltimore who were killed and to those who were injured in the outbreak in the city of Valparaiso, the sum of $75,000. This has been accepted, not only as an indemnity for a wrong done, but as a most gratifying evidence that the government of Chili greatly appreciates the disposition of this government to act in a spirit of the most reasonable fairness and friendliness in our intercourse with that brave people. A further and conclusive evidence of the mutual respect and confidence now existing is furnished by the fact that a convention submitting to arbitration the mutual claims of the citizens of the respective governments has been agreed upon. Some of these claims have been pending for many years and have been the occasion of much unsatisfactory diplomatic correspondence.

Friendship for Sister Republics.

I have endeavored in every way to assure our sister republics of Central and South America that the United States government and its people have only the most friendly disposition toward them all. We do not covet their territory. We have no disposition to be oppressive or exacting in our dealings with any of them, even the weakest. Our interests and our hopes for them all lie in the direction of stable governments by their people and of the largest development of their great commercial resources. The mutual benefits of enlarged commercial exchanges and of a more familiar and friendly intercourse between our peoples we do desire, and in this have sought their friendly cooperation. I have believed, however, while holding these sentiments in the greatest sincerity, that we must insist upon a just responsibility for any injuries inflicted upon our official representatives or upon our citizens. This insistence, kindly and justly but firmly made, will, I believe, promote peace and mutual respect.

Hawaii.

Our relations with Hawaii have been such as to attract an increased interest, and must continue to do so. I deem it of great importance that the projected submarine cable, a survey for which has been made, should be promoted. Both for naval and commercial uses we should have quick communication with Honolulu. We should before this have availed ourselves of the concession, made many years ago, to this government, for a harbor and naval station at Pearl river. Many evidences of the friendliness of the Hawaiian government have been given in the past, and it is gratifying to believe that the advantage and necessity of a continuance of very close relations is appreciated.

International Copyright.

International copyright has been extended to Italy by proclamation in conformity with the act of March 3, 1891, upon assurance being given that Italian law permits the citizens of the United States the benefit of copyright on substantially the same basis as to subjects of Italy. By a special convention, proclaimed January 15, 1892, reciprocal provisions of copyright have been applied between the United States and Germany. Negotiations are in progress with other countries to the same end.

The Nicaraguan Canal.

I repeat with great earnestness the recommendations which I have made in several previous messages that prompt and adequate support be given to the American company engaged in the construction of the Nicaragua ship canal. It is impossible to overstate the value from every standpoint of this great enterprise, and I hope that there may be time, even in this congress, to give to it an impetus that will insure the early completion of the canal and secure to the United States its proper relation to it when completed.

The Monetary Conference.

The congress has been already advised that the invitations of this government for the assembling of an international monetary conference to consider the question of an enlarged issue of silver was accepted by the nations to which they were issued. The conference assembled at Brussels on the 22nd of November and has entered upon the consideration of this great question. I have not doubted, and have taken occasion to express that belief, as well in the invitations issued for this conference as in my public messages, that the free coinage of silver upon an agreed international ratio would greatly promote the interests of our people and equally those of other nations. It is too early to predict what result may be accomplished by the conference. If any temporary check or delay intervenes I believe that very soon commercial conditions will compel the now reluctant governments to unite with us in this movement to secure the enlargement of the volume of money needed for the transaction of the business of the world.

Our Finances.

The report of the secretary of the treasury will attract especial interest in view of the many misleading statements that have been made as to the state of the public revenues. Three preliminary facts should not only be stated, but emphasized, before looking into details:

First—That the public debt has been reduced since March 4, 1889, $260,074,200, and the annual interest charge, $11,684,469.

Second—That there have been paid out for pensions during this administration up to November 1, 1892, $432,663,178.70, an excess of $114,466,386.09 over the sum expended during the period from March 4, 1885, to March 4, 1889.

Third—That under the existing tariff up to December 1 about $93,000,000 of revenues, which would have been collected upon imported sugars if the duty had been maintained, has gone into the pockets of the people and not into the public treasury as before.

If there are any who still think that the surplus should have been kept out of circulation by hoarding it in the treasury, or deposited in favored banks without interest, while the government continued to pay to these very banks interest upon the bonds deposited as security for the deposits, or who think that the extended pension legislation was a public robbery, or that the duties upon sugar should have been maintained, I am content to leave the argument where it now rests, while we wait to see whether these criticisms will take the form of legislation.

Receipts and Expenditures.

The revenues for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1892, from all sources were $425,868,260.22, and the expenditures for all purposes were $415,953,806.56, leaving a balance of $9,914,453.66. There were paid during the year upon the public debt $40,570,467.98. The surplus in the treasury and bank redemption fund, passed by the act of July 14, 1890, to the general fund, furnished in large part the cash available and used for the payments made upon the public debt. Compared with the year 1891, our receipts from customs duties fell off $42,069,241.08, while our receipts from internal revenue increased $8,284,823.13, leaving the net loss of revenue from these principal sources $33,784,417.95. The net loss of revenue from all sources was $32,675,972.81.

The revenues, estimated and actual, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1893, are placed by the secretary at $463,333,350.44, and the expenditures at $461,336,354.44, showing a surplus of receipts over expenditures of $1,996,000. The cash balance in the treasury at the end of the fiscal year it is estimated will be $39,992,377.03.

So far as these figures are based upon estimates of receipts and expenditures for the remainder of the current fiscal year there are not only the usual elements of uncertainty but some added elements. New revenue legislation, or even the expectation of it, may seriously reduce the public revenues during the period of uncertainty and during the process of business adjustment the full conditions when they become known. But the secretary has very wisely refrained from guessing as to the effect of possible changes in our revenue laws, since the scope of those changes and the time of their taking effect cannot in any degree be forecast or foretold by him. The estimates must be based upon existing laws and upon a continuance of existing business conditions, except so far as these conditions may be affected by causes other than new legislation.

The estimated receipts for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, are $490,121,305.38 and the estimated appropriations $457,261,335.33, leaving an estimated surplus of receipts over the expenditures of $32,860,030.05. This does not include any payment to the sinking fund. In the recommendation of the secretary that the sinking fund law be repealed I concur. The redemption of bonds since the passage of the law to June 30, 1892, has already exceeded the requirements by the sum of $690,510,681.49. The retirement of bonds in the future before maturity should be a matter of convenience, not of compulsion. We should not collect revenue for that purpose, but only use any casual surplus. To the balance of $32,860,030.05, of receipts over expenditures for the year 1894, should be added the estimated surplus at the beginning of the year, $39,992,377.03, and from this aggregate there must be deducted, as stated by the secretary, about $44,000,000, of estimated unexpended appropriations.

Cause of the Drain.

The public confidence in the purpose and ability of the government to maintain the parity of all our money issues, whether coin or paper, must remain unshaken. The demand for gold in Europe and the consequent calls upon us are in a considerable degree the result of the efforts of some of the European governments to increase their gold reserves, and these efforts should be met by appropriate legislation upon our part. The conditions that have created this drain of the treasury gold are in an important degree political, and not commercial. In view of the fact that a general revision of our revenue laws in the near future seems to be probable, it would be better that any changes should be a part of that revision rather than of a temporary nature.

The Silver Question.

During the last fiscal year the secretary purchased under the act of July 14, 1890, 54,355,743 ounces of silver, and issued in payment therefor $51,056,068 in notes. The total purchases since the passage of the act have been 120,479,981 ounces, and the aggregate of notes issued $116,783,590. The average price paid for silver during the year was 94 cents per ounce, the highest price being $1.02¾ July 1, 1891, and the lowest 83 cents March 24, 1892. The fact that the monetary conference is now sitting and that no conclusion has as yet been reached, I withhold any recommendation as to the legislation upon this subject.

The War Department.

The report of the secretary of war brings again to the attention of congress some important suggestions as to the reorganization of the infantry and artillery arms of the service, which his predecessors have before urged that they be pressed. Our army is small, but its organization should all the more be put upon the most approved modern basis. The conditions upon which the so-called "frontier" have heretofore required the maintenance of many small army posts, but now the policy of centralization is obviously the right one. The new posts should have the proper strategic relations to the old ones. The "frontier" now have, those of the sea coast and of the northern and part of our southern boundary. I do not think that any question of advantage in localities or states should determine the location of the new posts. The organization and the enlargements of the bureau of military information which the secretary has effected is a work the usefulness of which will become every year more apparent. The work of building heavy guns and the construction of coast defenses has been well begun and should be carried on without check.

Department of Justice.

The report of the attorney general is by law submitted directly to congress, but I cannot refrain from saying that he has conducted the increasing work of the department of justice with great professional skill. He has in several directions secured from the courts decisions giving increased protection to the officers of the United States and bringing some classes of crime that escaped local cognizance and punishment unto the tribunals of the United States, where they could be tried with impartiality.

The numerous applications for executive clemency presented in behalf of persons convicted in the United States courts and given penitentiary sentences have called my attention to a fact referred to by the attorney general in his report, namely, that a time allowance for good behavior for such prisoners is prescribed by the federal statutes only where the state in which the penitentiary is located had made no such provision. Prisoners are given the benefit of the provisions of the state law regulating the penitentiary to which they may be sent. These are various, some perhaps too liberal and some perhaps too illiberal. The result is that a sentence for five years means one thing if the prisoner is sent to one state for confinement and quite a different thing if he is sent to another. I recommend that a uniform credit for good behavior be prescribed by congress. I have before expressed my concurrence in the recommendation of the attorney general that degrees of murder should be recognized in federal states as they are, I believe, in all of the states. These grades are founded on various distinctions in crime. The recognition of them would enable the courts to exercise some discretion in apportioning punishment and would greatly relieve the executive of what is coming to be a very heavy burden—the examination of these cases on application for commutation.

The aggregate of claims pending against the government in the court of claims is enormous. Claims to the amount of nearly $400,000,000 for the taking of or injury to the property of persons claiming to be loyal during the war are now before the court for examination. When to these are added the Indian depredation claims and the French spoliation claims an aggregate is reached that is indeed startling. In the defense of these claims the government is at a disadvantage. The claimants have preserved their evidence, whereas the government has to send agents to rummage for what they can find. This difficulty is peculiarly great where the fact to be established is the disloyalty of the claimant during the war. If this great threat against our revenues is to have no other check certainly congress should supply the department of justice with appropriations sufficiently liberal to secure the best legal talent in the defense of these claims and to pursue its vague search for evidence effectively.

The Postal Service.

The report of the postmaster general shows a most gratifying increase and a most efficient and progressive management of the great business of that department. The remarkable increase in revenues, in the number of post offices and in the miles of mail interchange furnishes further evidences of the high state of prosperity which our people are enjoying. New offices mean new hamlets, towns routes mean the extension of our border settlements and increased revenues mean an active commerce. The postmaster general reviews the whole period of his administration of the office and brings some of his statistics down to the month of November last. The postal revenues have increased during the last year nearly $5,000,000. The deficit for the year ending June 30, 1892, is $848,341 less than the deficiency of the preceding year. The deficiency of the present fiscal year, it is estimated, will be reduced to $1,552,423, which will not only be extinguished during the next fiscal year, but a surplus of nearly $1,000,000 should then be shown. In these calculations the payments to be made under the contracts for ocean mail service have not been included. There have been added 1,590 new mail routes during the year, with a mileage of 8,563 miles, and the total number of new miles of mail trips added during the year is nearly 17,000,000. The number of miles of mail journeys added during the last four years is about 76,000,000, this addition being 21,000,000 of miles more than were in operation in the whole country in 1861.

The number of post offices has been increased by 2,790 during the year and during the past four years and up to October 23 last the total increase in the number of offices has been nearly 9,000. The number of free delivery offices of congress, for he has enjoyed as he has deserved, the confidence of all those interested in the development of our navy without any division upon partisan lines. I earnestly express the hope that a work which has made such noble progress may not now be stayed. The wholesome influence for the peace and the increased sense of security which our citizens domiciled in other lands feel when these magnificent ships under the American flag appear is already most gratefully apparent. The ships from our navy which will appear in the great naval parade next April in the harbor of New York will be a convincing demonstration to the world that the United States is again a naval power.

The Interior.

The work of the interior department, always very burdensome, has even larger than ever before, during the administration of Secretary Noble. The disability pension law, the taking of the Eleventh census, the opening of vast areas of Indian lands to settlement, the organization of Oklahoma, and the negotiations for the cession of Indian lands furnish some of the particulars of the increased work; and the results achieved testify to the ability, fidelity and industry of the head of the department and his efficient assistants.

Indian Lands.

Several important agreements for the cession of Indian lands negotiated by the commission appointed under the act of March 2, 1889, are awaiting the action of congress. Perhaps the most important of these is that for the cession of the Cherokee strip. This region has been the source of great vexation to the executive department and of great friction and unrest between the settlers who desire to occupy it and the Indians who assert title. The agreement which has been made by the commission is perhaps the most satisfactory that could have been reached. It will be noticed that it is conditioned upon its ratification by congress before March 4, 1893. The secretary of the interior, who has given the subject very careful thought, recommends the ratification of the agreement. Certain it is that some action by which this controversy shall be brought to an end and these lands opened to settlement is urgent.

Alaska.

The form of government provided by congress on May 17, 1884, for Alaska was, in its frame and purpose, temporary. The increase of population and the development of some important mining and commercial interests make it imperative that the law should be revised and better provision made for the arrest and punishment of criminals.

The Land Office.

The report of the secretary shows a very gratifying state of facts as to the condition of the general land office. The work of issuing agricultural patents, which seemed to be hopelessly in arrear when the present secretary undertook the duties of his office, has been so expedited that the bureau is now upon current business. The relief which was afforded to honest and worthy settlers upon the public lands, by giving to them an assured title to their entries, has been of incalculable benefit in developing the new states and the territories.

The court of private land claims, established by congress for the promotion of this policy of speedily settling contested land titles, is making satisfactory progress in its work and when the work is completed a great impetus will be given to the development of those regions where unsettled claims under Mexican grants have so long exercised their repressive influence. When to these results are added the enormous cessions of Indian lands which have been opened to settlement, aggregating during this administration nearly 26,000,000 acres, and the agreements negotiated and now pending in congress for ratification, by which about 10,600,000 additional acres will be opened to settlement, it will be seen how much has been accomplished.

The Indian Bureau.

The work in the Indian bureau, in the execution of the policy of recent legislation, has been largely directed to the chief purposes: First, the allotment of lands in severalty to the Indians and the cession to the United States of such lands; and, second, to the work of educating the Indians for their own protection in closer contact with the white man and for the intelligent exercise of his new citizenship. Allotments have been made and patents issued to 5,900 Indians under the present secretary and commissioner, and 7,600 additional allotments have been made for which patents are now in process of preparation. The school attendance of Indian children has been increased during that time over 13 per cent., the enrollment for 1892 being nearly 20,000. A uniform system of school text books and of study has been adopted, and the work in these national schools brought as near as may be to the basis of the free common schools of the states. These schools can be transferred and merged into the common school systems of the states when the Indian has fully assumed his new relation to the organized civil community in which he resides and the new states are able to assume the burden.

I have several times been called upon to remove Indian agents appointed by me, and have done so promptly upon every sustained complaint of unfitness or misconduct. I believe, however, that the Indian service at the agencies has been improved and is now administered, on the whole, with a good degree of efficiency. If any legislation is possible by which the selection of Indian agents can be wholly removed from all partisan suggestions or consideration I am sure it would be a great relief to the executive and a great benefit to the service.

The appropriation for the subsistence of the Cheyenne and Arapahoe Indians made at the last session of congress was inadequate. This smaller was estimated for by the commissioner upon the theory that the larger fund belonging to the tribe in the public treasury could be and ought to be used for their support. In view, however, of the pending depredation claims against this fund and other considerations, the secretary of the interior on the 12th of April last submitted a supplement estimate for $50,000. This appropriation was not made, as it should have been, and the oversight ought to be remedied at the earliest possible date.

In a special message to this congress at the last session I stated the reason why I had not approved the deed for the release to the United States by the Choctaws and Chickasaws of the lands formerly embraced in the Cheyenne and Arapahoe reservations and remaining after allotments to that tribe. A resolution of the senate expressing the opinion of that body, notwithstanding the facts stated in my special message, that the deed should be approved and the money, $2,991,450, paid over was presented to me May 10, 1892. My special message was intended to call the attention of congress to this subject and in view of the fact that it is conceded that the appropriation proceeding upon a false basis as to the amount of lands to be paid for, and is by $50,000 in excess of the amount they are entitled to (even if their claim to the land is given full recognition at the rate agreed upon), I have not felt willing to approve the deed, and shall do so at least until both houses of congress have acted upon the subject. It has been informally proposed by the claimants to release this sum of $50,000, but I have no power to demand or accept such a release, and such an agreement would be without consideration and void.

I desire further to call the attention of congress to the fact that the recent agreement concluded with the Kiowas and Comanches relates to lands which were a part of the "leased district," and to which the claim of the Choctaws and Chickasaws is precisely that recognized by congress in the legislation I have referred to. The surplus lands to which this claim would attach in the Kiowa and Comanche reservation is 2,500 acres and at the same rate the government will be called upon to pay to the Choctaws and Chickasaws for these lands $3,125,000. This sum will be further augmented, especially if the title of the Indians to the tract now known as Grier county, Tex., is established. The duty devolved upon me in this connection was simply to pass upon the form of the deed; but as, in my opinion, the facts mentioned in my special message were not adequately brought to the attention of congress in connection with the legislation, I have felt that I would not be justified in noting, without some new expression of the legislative will.

The Pension Bureau.

The report of the commissioner of pensions, to which extended notice is given by the secretary of the interior in his report, will attract great attention. Judged by the aggregate amount of work done the last year has been the greatest in the history of the office. I believe the organization of the officers efficient and that the work has been done with fidelity. The passage of what is known as the disability bill has, as was foreseen, very largely increased the annual disbursements to the disabled veterans of the civil war. The estimate for this fiscal year was $144,956,000 and that amount was appropriated. A deficiency amounting to $10,058,621 must be provided for at this session. The estimate for pensions for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, is $169,000,000. The commissioner of pensions believes that, if the present legislation and methods are maintained and further additions to the pension laws are not made, the maximum expenditure for pensions will be reached June 30, 1894, and will be at the high point of $188,000,000 per annum.

I adhere to the views expressed in previous messages that the care of the disabled soldiers of the war of the rebellion is a matter of national concern and duty. Perhaps no emotion cools sooner than that of gratitude, but I cannot believe that this process has yet reached a point with our people that would sustain the policy of remitting the care of these disabled veterans to the inadequate agencies provided by local laws. The parade on the 29th of September last upon the streets of this capital of 60,000 of the surviving union veterans of the war of the rebellion was a most touching and thrilling episode, and the rich and gracious welcome extended to them by the District of Columbia and the applause that greeted their progress from tens of thousands of people from all the states, did much to revive the recollections of the grand review, when these men and many thousand others, now in their graves, were welcomed with grateful joy as victors in a struggle in which the national unity, honor and wealth were all at issue.

The Agricultural Department.

The report of the secretary of agriculture contains not only a most interesting statement of the progressive and valuable work done under the administration of Secretary Rusk, but many suggestions for the enlarged usefulness of this important department. In the successful effort to break down the restrictions to the free introduction of our meat products in the countries of Europe, the secretary has been untiring from the first, stimulating and aiding all other government officers at home and abroad, whose official duties enabled them to participate in the work. The total trade in hog products with Europe in May, 1892, amounted to 82,000,000 pounds, against 46,900,000 in the same month of 1891; in June, 1892, the exports aggregated 85,700,000 pounds, against 46,500,000 pounds in the same month of the previous year; in July there was an increase of 41 per cent. and in August of 55 per cent. over the corresponding months of 1891. Over 40,000,000 pounds of inspected pork have been exported since the law was put into operation, and a comparison of the four months of May, June, July and August, 1892, with the same months of 1891 shows an increase in the number of pounds of our export of pork products of 62 per cent., and an increase in value of 66½ per cent. The exports of dressed beef increased from 137,000,000 pounds in 1889 to 220,500,000 pounds in 1892, or about 60 per cent. During the past year there have been exported 394,607 head of live cattle as against 205,786 exported in 1889.

Fighting Disease.

This increased exportation has been largely promoted by the inspection authorized by law and the faithful efforts of the secretary and his efficient subordinates to make that inspection thorough and to carefully exclude from all cargoes diseased or suspected cattle. The requirements of the English regulations that live cattle arriving from the United States must be slaughtered at the docks had its origin in the claim that pleuro-pneumonia existed among American cattle and the existence of the disease could only certainly be determined by a post-mortem inspection. The department of agriculture has labored with great energy and faithfulness to extirpate this disease; and on the 26th day of September last, a public announcement was made by the secretary that the disease no longer existed anywhere within the United States. He is entirely satisfied, after the most searching inquiry, that this statement was justified, and that by a continuance of the inspection and quarantine now required of cattle brought into this country the disease can be prevented from again getting any foothold.

The value to the cattle industry of the United States of this achievement can hardly be estimated. We cannot, perhaps, at once insist that this evidence shall be accepted as satisfactory by other countries; but if the present exemption from the disease is maintained and the inspection of our cattle arriving at foreign ports, in which our own veterinarians participate, confirms it, we may justly expect that the requirements that our cattle shall be slaughtered at the docks will be revoked, as the sanitary restrictions on our pork product have been. If our cattle can be taken alive to the interior the trade will be enormously increased.

Agricultural products constituted 781 per cent. of our unprecedented exports for the fiscal year which closed June 30, 1892, the total exports being $1,030,287,030 and the value of the agricultural products $793,717,676, which exceeds by more than $150,000,000 the shipment of agricultural products in any previous year.

India Corn in Europe.

An interesting and a promising work for the benefit of the American farmer has been begun through agents of the agricultural department in Europe and consists in efforts to introduce the various products of Indian corn as articles of human food. The high price of rye offered a favorable opportunity for the experiment in Germany of combining corn meal with rye to produce a cheap bread. A fair degree of success has been attained and some mills for grinding corn for food have been introduced. The secretary is of the opinion that this new use of the products of corn has already stimulated exportations and that if diligently prosecuted large and important markets can presently be opened for this great American product.

The suggestions of the secretary for an enlargement of the work of the department are recommended to your favorable consideration. It may be, I think, said without challenge that in no corresponding period has so much been done as during the last four years for the benefit of American agriculture.

To Ward Off Cholera.

The subject of quarantine regulations, inspection and control was brought suddenly to my attention by the arrival at our ports in August last of vessels infected with cholera. Quarantine regulations should be uniform at all our ports. Under the constitution they are plainly within the exclusive federal jurisdiction when and so far as congress shall legislate. In my opinion the whole subject should be taken into national control and adequate power given to the executive to protect people against plague invasions. On the first of September last I approved regulations establishing a twenty-day quarantine for all vessels bringing immigrants from foreign ports. This order will be continued in force. Some loss and suffering have resulted to passengers, but a due care for the homes of our people justifies in such cases the utmost precaution. There is danger that with the coming spring cholera will again appear and a liberal appropriation should be made at this session to enable our quarantine and port officers to exclude the deadly plague.

But the most careful and stringent quarantine regulations may not be sufficient absolutely to exclude the disease. The progress of medical and sanitary science has been such, however, that if approved precautions are taken at once to put all of our cities and towns in the best sanitary condition and a provision is made for isolating any sporadic cases and for a thorough disinfection an epidemic can, I am sure, be avoided. This work appertains to the local authorities, and the responsibility and the penalty will be appalling if it is neglected or unduly delayed.

Should Restrict Immigration.

We are peculiarly subject in our great ports to the spread of infectious diseases by reason of the fact that unrestricted immigration brings to us out of European cities, in the overcrowded steerages of great steamships, a large number of persons whose surroundings make them the easy victims of the plague. This consideration, as well as those affecting the political, moral and industrial interests of your country, lead me to renew the suggestion that admission to our country and to the high privileges of its citizenship should be more restricted and more careful. We have I think a right and owe a duty to our own people, and, especially to our working people, not only to keep out the vicious, the ignorant, the civil disturber, the pauper and the contract laborer, but to check the two great flow of immigration now coming by further limitations.

The Columbian Exposition.

The report of the World's Columbian exposition has not been submitted. That of the board of management of the government exhibit has been received and is herewith transmitted. The work of construction and of preparation for the opening of the exposition in May next has progressed most satisfactorily, and upon a scale of liberality and magnificence that will worthily sustain the honor of the United States.

Protection of Railway Employes.

In renewing the recommendation which I have made in three preceding annual messages that congress should legislate for the protection of railway employes against the dangers incident to the old and inadequate methods of braking and coupling which are still in use upon freight business, I do so with the hope that this congress may take action on the subject. Statistics furnished by the interstate commerce commission show that during the year ending June 30, 1891, there were forty-seven different styles of car couplers reported to be in use and that during the same period there were 2,660 employes killed and 26,140 injured. Nearly 16 per cent. of the deaths occurred in the coupling and uncoupling of cars and over 36 per cent. of the injuries had the same origin. The civil service commission ask for an increased appropriation for needed clerical assistance, which I think should be given. I extended the classified service March 1, 1892, to include physicians, superintendents, assistant superintendents, school-teachers and matrons in the Indian service, and have had under consideration the subject of some further extensions, but have not as yet fully determined the lines upon which the extensions can most properly and usefully be made.

Evils of Corrupt Election Methods.

I have, in each three annual messages which it has been my duty to submit to congress, called attention to the evils and dangers connected with our election methods and practices as they are related to the choice of officers of the national government. In my last annual message I endeavored to invoke serious attention to the evils of unfair apportionments for congress. I cannot close this message without again calling attention to these grave and threatening evils. I had hoped that it was possible to secure a non-partisan inquiry, by means of a commission, into evils the existence of which is known to all, and that out of this might grow legislation from which all thought of partisan advantage should be eliminated and only the higher thought appear of maintaining the freedom and purity of the ballot and the equality of the elector without the guaranty of which the government could never have been formed and without the continuance of which it cannot continue to exist in peace and prosperity.

Legislation Necessary.

It is time that mutual charges of unfairness and fraud between the great parties should cease, and that the sincerity of those who profess a desire for pure and honest elections should be brought to the test of their willingness to free our legislation and our election methods from everything that tends to impair the public confidence in the announced result. The necessity for an inquiry and for legislation by congress upon this subject is emphasized by the fact that the tendency of the legislation in some states in recent years has in some important particulars been away from and not toward free and fair elections and equal apportionments. Is it not time that we should come together on the high plane of patriotism while we devise methods that shall secure the right of every man qualified by law to cast a free ballot and give to every such ballot an equal value in choosing our public officers and in directing the policy of the government?

Colored Outrages.

Lawlessness is not less such, but more, where it usurps the functions of peace officers and of the courts. The frequent lynching of colored people accused of crime is without the excuse which has sometimes been urged by mobs for a failure to pursue the appointed methods for the punishment of crime that the accused have an undue influence over courts and juries.

Such acts are a reproach to the community where they occur, and, so far as they can be made subject of federal jurisdiction, the strongest repressive legislation is demanded. A public sentiment that will sustain the officers of law in resisting mobs and in protecting accused persons in their custody should be promoted by every possible means. The officer who gives his life in the brave discharge of this duty is worthy of special honor. No lesson needs to be so urgently impressed upon our people than this that no worthy end or causes can be promoted by lawlessness.

Conclusion.

This exhibit of the work of the executive departments is submitted to congress and to the public in the hope that there will be found in it a due sense of responsibility and an earnest purpose to maintain the national honor and to promote the happiness and prosperity of all our people. And this brief exhibit of the growth and prosperity of the country will give us a level from which to note the increase or decadence that new legislative policies may bring to us. There is no reason why the national influence, power and prosperity should not observe the same rates of increase that have characterized the past thirty years. We carry the great impulse and increase of these years into the future. There is no reason why in many lines of the production we should not surpass all other nations, as we have already done in some. There are no near frontiers to our possible development. Retrogression would be a crime.

BENJAMIN HARRISON.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, Dec. 6, 1892.

OF GENERAL INTEREST.

—Some English newspaper women who wanted to find out whether the people who sing in the London streets make a good living or not, put on a disguise and, taking a guitar, went out to try it for themselves. After singing and playing for an hour and a half they had collected 7s 4½d. And they were only amateurs at that, and with no previous experience in pleasing the people.

—Since the war of '70-71, twenty-two years, the military expenditures of France have been fifteen milliards three hundred and sixty-eight millions of francs, or about $3,800,000,000. This sum is exclusive of the five milliards paid to Germany as an indemnity, of the sum expended on the navy, and of the amount used in building strategic railroads and the payment of military pensions.

—Dr. Carter, of Birmingham, delivering an address on brain work and brain workers, called special attention to the danger of working too soon after meals. At least half an hour should elapse before exerting the brain. An hour's close attention to one subject was as much as could profitably be given at a sitting. He strongly deprecated the use of sedative draughts by brain workers who could not sleep.

—New Jersey comes to the front with a strawberry plant which bears fruit all the year, and Arkansas with a three-year-old negro boy who killed a rattlesnake just twice as old as himself, inside of which were found a watermoccasin over four feet long, a black snake of the same length, two dead toads and one live one, besides a large bullfrog. Again it is proper to remark that this is a great country.

—Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, of Philadelphia, specialist in nerve diseases, has invented a cigar containing no nicotine. The Vuelta Abajo tobacco, used for the filler, and the Connecticut wrapper are subjected to what is termed "double resweating" process. The materials are placed in a steam room for four or five hours, after which they are taken out and subjected to a natural drying for a day or two. This operation is thrice repeated, after which the tobacco is considered practically free of nicotine.

—An interesting incident is told of the recently-deceased, world-renowned bandmaster, Patrick S. Gilmore. Just before the marriage of President Cleveland, at a public parade on Madison square, Mr. Gilmore, with his band, at the head of a regiment, passed down the street and past the stand where Mr. Cleveland was sitting. As they neared the reviewing stand, the leader gave a signal and the band at once began to play "He's Going to Marry Yum-Yum," and stopped to finish the suggestive selection before the blushing president, amid the deafening cheers of thousands of spectators. Gilmore considered this the hit of his life.

—German madonnas, Italian, French and Spanish madonnas, have been wrought out by painters of different countries, and few satisfy the modern critic in their conception of the face of the mother of our Lord. A young Boston sculptor, Mr. William Ordway Partridge, who is rapidly making a reputation for himself, has lately produced in Paris a madonna which is described as wonderfully beautiful, "American and yet universal." A Boston critic says that it is "noble, maternal, delicate, spiritual, and consequently, in all its qualities, raised above the type of beauty; not too beautiful or good for nature's daily food." Great interest will be felt in this work of an American artist on an old theme.

WHERE MACKEREL GO.

The End of a Great Season Revives an Old Fish Mystery.

Where mackerel go for the winter is one of the fish mysteries. When the first snow flies in the bay of Fundy, mackerel disappear. They are abundant in the gulf of St. Lawrence and off Newfoundland until that time, plump and juicy and very toothsome, the result of having fed well on their migration northward. The next seen of them is in March, off Cape Hatteras. All their plumpness is then gone. There is a scaly growth over their eyes, which nearly blinds them. Nobody whose palate has been taught what good mackerel are cares to eat such fish. Many old fishermen think the flesh tastes of mud in the spring.

One theory in regard to this is that the mackerel go into the mud in winter and remain there, and this has the effect of producing a cataract growth, or scale, for the protection of the eye, and of imparting an earthy taste to the flesh. Mackerel have been speared in the bay of Fundy by men who cut through the ice to look for fish. Occasionally a mackerel has been found in mud, but cases of this kind are so rare that they fail to establish any rule in regard to the habits of the fish.

The only certainty is that mackerel disappear from all waters visited by fishing vessels from late in the fall until early in the spring. The fish naturally loves the shore and is to be found close to land in the regular season. Since fishing vessels cover this ground all the year round, it is safe to suppose that if mackerel were there they would be caught at times out of season. If the fish go into deep water for the winter and move seaward, they put aside entirely the habits that have been observed in regard to them, and in the winter time acquire traits to which they seem to be innately averse in the warm-weather months.

Mackerel do not like cold water, and it is not believed that they remain in the northern bays through the winter. There is certainly no explanation if it is assumed that they make their winter home off Newfoundland, for their appearance in a latitude much further south in the spring. Canadian fishermen have several times tried to make trouble over mackerel catches, claiming that mackerel remain in northern waters as their natural habitat, and that the mackerel coming up from Hatteras are not at all the same fish found in the bay of Fundy. This theory has not been accepted, however, by American fishermen, and the claims of the Canadians do not seem plausible enough to have justified any action by the authorities of the dominion.—N. Y. Times.

FROM THE SKY.

Volcanic Nature of Masses Which Fall From Above.

An addition to our present knowledge of meteorites has been presented by Mr. J. R. Eastman, who furnishes a list of iron aerolites, together with a table of their weights and remarks as to the relative occurrences of iron and stony meteorites.

According to this gentleman the ratio of weight of the former to the latter is as 1 to 12.23, and the aggregate weight of aerolitic iron which has been observed and discovered up to date on the American continent is about 153 tons.

"If the above ratio be true in all cases," he says, "there should have been a fall of about 1,880 tons of lithic meteorites, or in all over 2,000 tons of aerolitic matter precipitated upon the earth."

Mr. Eastman offers the following theory to account for the apparent excess of iron over stony meteorites: "When a stony meteorite falls to the earth it breaks into many fragments, and the ruptured surfaces indicate the nature of the catastrophe.

"No case is on record where an iron aerolite showed any indication of having been twisted, broken, or torn from another mass of the same material.

"The true type of meteorite which reaches the earth from outer space is probably similar to that which fell in Iowa county, Ia., on February 12, 1875. This celestial visitor is composed almost wholly of lithic matter, but scattered through the mass are small grains of nickeliferous iron.

"This iron may exist in the stony matrix in all forms and sizes, from the microscopic nodule to the mass weighing several tons. When the lithic mass comes in contact with the earth's atmosphere the impact breaks up the matrix, sets free the iron bodies, and they reach the earth in the same condition, so far as mass and figure are concerned, as they exist in the original formation.

"In such cases it is probable that the stony portion of the original body is rent into such small fragments by the explosion that these would not reach the earth in any appreciable size. The larger the masses of iron the more complete would be the destruction of the original body, and the larger lithic meteorites would be those containing the smaller granules of iron."

We may here revert to the auriferous aerolite which is reported to have fallen a few days ago at Idaho. So far as we are aware, precious metals have never yet been found in substance of meteoric origin.

Should, therefore, the telegraphic news which has been received of an apparently remarkable discovery be confirmed, scientists will find themselves confronted with another knotty problem—how to account for the presence of pure gold in the aerolite.

Up to the present the principal known constituent parts of meteoric iron are, in addition to "the most common and useful of metals" and nickel, numerous compounds, such as ferrous sulphide (troilite), sulphide of chromium (daubreelite), calcium sulphide (oldhamite), and phosphide of iron and nickel (schreibersite), which are not known as terrestrial minerals, besides magnetic pyrites, chromic iron, magnetite, pyroxene, olivine and anorthite, which are ordinary components of volcanic rocks.—Iron.

THE RABBIT PEST.

Will the Prolific Little Animal Conquer the Australian Colonies?

In spite of the outlay of vast sums of money and the offer of tempting rewards to the ingenuity and science of the whole world for some means of destroying the enormous hordes of rabbits in Australia, the pests still flourish and multiply disastrously, and threaten to ruin the agricultural interests of that continental island. It is calculated that a single pair of bunnies will in ten years multiply to 70,000,000, so that a war of extermination against them appears almost hopeless. From 1883 to 1890 the single colony of New South Wales, with an area of 323,437 square miles and a population ranging from 750,000 to about 1,000,000, expended over $4,000,000 for the extermination of the plague, and about as much more was spent by private parties. A bounty of two cents is paid by the government, and it has been paid on as many as 25,280,000 skins in one year. Ten large canning factories have been established in different parts of the country, which pay on an average from 4 to 5 cents for the meat of each rabbit; so that a large army of hunters is constantly in the field. Still there appears to be a constant increase in the multitude of the enemy. A bill is before the legislature of New South Wales at Sidney providing for the construction of a brick wall entirely around the agricultural boundary of the colony. Rabbits will not burrow lower than two and a half feet, and it is proposed to sink the wall to that depth. The wall being once built, a general extermination of rabbits within the inclosure will commence. If successful the other colonies will follow the example. What an enormous outlay against such an apparently harmless foe, which, like the English sparrow in this country, was introduced by a philanthropic economic nincompoop.—Rural New Yorker.

THE DEATH RATE.

Statistical Facts in Reference to Mortality in the United States.

On the 1st of June, 1890, the registration states had a population of 13,394,347, of which 7,254,534, or a little more than half, were living in cities of 5,000 population and upward. The average death rates for these states was 19.64 per 1,000, being for males 20.68, and for females 18.62. As usual, it was the highest in the cities—being 23.58, while in the rural districts it was only 14.99. A little over 6,000,000 of the people in these states were native born whites of native born parents, and the death rate among these was 17. About 3,250,000 were native born whites having one or both parents of foreign birth, with a death rate of 24.42; about 3,000,000 were foreign born, with a death rate of 19.85; and 951,407 were colored, with a death rate of 19.57. The reason why the native born whites of foreign born parents have a higher death rate than the others is because this class includes an unusually large proportion of young children of recent emigrants living in cities.

In the cities, the death rate of the colored people is 34.52, while that of the whites is 23.22. In the rural districts of the southern states, where the relative proportion of the colored population is greatest, the death rate of the whites is from 15 to 16, and that of the colored from 18 to 20 per 1,000.—John S. Billings, M. D., in Chautauquan.

Messrs. Editors: Knowing how many expectant Mothers in the land will appreciate the information, and desiring to save all the anguish and pain of the trying hour, I wish to give my experience.

I used two bottles of Mothers' Friend with great relief, suffered but little pain, and was not sick over twenty minutes. I did not experience that weakness usual in such cases, and looked and felt so well afterwards that my friends wondered at it; as on previous occasions one of this kind I suffered greatly. I used the remedy on my breasts and did not have the least trouble with them. I passed through the crisis with so little trouble that even my physician was astonished, and after I told him that it was the result of the use of Mothers' Friend, he advised his daughter to use the remedy, and she says she cannot praise it enough. I have known many ladies to use Mothers' Friend, and they all pronounce it a great blessing to expectant mothers.

DISEASED GERMS.

Consumption is contagious. There is no doubt of it. When a consumptive person coughs, the bacilli are thrown off from his lungs by the million. If this ejected matter becomes dry, it may be raised in the air, as in the active sweeping a room. Now let a person with sore throat come into that room and breathe the air laden with these microbes, he will get the consumption. There is no doubt of it. You should therefore beware of sore throats. When you are attacked by it, get a bottle of Reid's German Cough and Kidney Cure and take it freely. It contains nothing deleterious, but it will cure sore throat and exterminate the germs of consumption. Get it of any dealer. Small bottles are twenty-five cents, large size are fifty cents.

Old subscribers paying up and one year in advance considered same as new ones.

—Quite a number of loads of pork passed through town, this week, on their way to the city markets. It seems as if somebody ought to buy such things here, for cash, and protect home industry. Many people are enticed to the cities by flaming advertisements of Eire Sales and such, and get the worst of the bargain. Patronize home when you can do as well or better.

—Some of our school board seem to have gotten together and passed some very arbitrary laws. Such as they have no business to do. Such as do not meet the approval of scholars, parents, teachers, other members of the board, or anybody that knows anything about justice or fair dealing, and cares to follow their knowledge. We refer to the new text books law. The board has placed in the hands of the teachers books, inkwells and other appurtenances of the schoolroom holding them responsible for all damage. The teachers look to the scholars for all damage, and are backed by printed instructions in each book that in case of any damage all books must be taken away from the scholar and kept away until the damage is paid. Under this ruling several girl's parents were made to pay 15 cts each for inkwells, broken, because they happened to be on their seats, while the teacher herself believes the girls knew nothing of how they were broken. Because of inkstains on the back of books, that could be accounted for on no better theory than that the ink got on them while in the desk, from the inkwells, boys were asked to pay list price for books, and as they did not see fit to do this were deprived of all their books for nearly two weeks, and threatened with suspension from school. And although one boy was provided with an order from two members of the board to allow him to attend school until the next board meeting his books were still kept from him! A meeting of the board is called for tomorrow night and, it is hoped that some plan can be provided by which children will not be suspended from school for damage done, without their knowledge, to school district property. While on the subject the board ought to make arrangements to buy books of first hands, and get from 15 to 25 per cent off of list price, as they would for themselves, and not be selling them at a profit.

—On our way to Watertown, one day, this week, we noticed a fine string of porkers swung up ready for market at the residence of F. F. Chancellor.

—The roads are now about as hard and smooth as they ever get, and a very few inches of snow would make as fine sleighing as any country ever saw.

—Mrs. Charles Eppel celebrated her 54th, birthday, on Sunday last, at the elegant farm residence which is now the family home. Mrs. Lou Kohler and family, of Watertown were among the guests.

—Miss Willis is a brilliant artist, gracing the platform with magnetic success. She impresses all with her beautiful face, fine stage presence and excellent dramatic ability.—Portland, Maine, Times.

—The Eagle is having one of her periodical attacks again. This time she has her beak in to some of Swedeback & Erickson's business with Watertown. Some of her correspondents prefer not to have their accounts settled by the bird.

—Some of the longest freight trains ever seen in this country have been passing east and west over the Great Northern lately. It looks as if there were cars enough in these trains to carry all the wheat that could be raised in this country and enough to feed the 65,000,000 inhabitants and have a surplus.

—Every person in Delano is expected to be at the town hall to hear Miss Marion Willis, Friday and Saturday evenings, the 16th and 17th. Miss Willis is by far the finest elocutionist before the public at the present day. Admission, 25 cents. Seats reserved at Wittman's drug store, without extra charge.

—The law imposes a fine on all persons neglecting to report births and deaths occurring in their houses. As the time is drawing nigh when the last report of the year is to be made it might be well for delinquents to come around and do so now. Reports must be made to the Health officer in villages or to the Town clerk in townships.

—The remains of Conductor Lee Cunningham, of West St. Paul, his family and many friends among the R. R. boys and Masonic fraternity and others arrived here on Saturday morning's train and were met at the depot by the hearse from Waverly, and a host of friends from Watertown and the neighborhood of his old home, a procession was formed and accompanied them to the Rader cemetry, where the funeral ceremonies were conducted by Rev. Sherwin, of Watertown, and the body buried with that of friends gone before.

—Quite a joke is going the rounds on one of Franklin's prominent farmers living a few miles out, and who sports a top buggy. He came to town with a neighboring lady, and after getting to feel pretty well, himself concluded to put up at the hotel for the night. The neighbor preferred returning home. After having the horse and buggy brought around to the door twice and concluding that it was too dark to drive and having them returned to the barn, the third attempt was made and he was soon lost from view in the darkness. He says nothing is so good as a Swede women to take a fellow home.

Our neighbors Ben. Scott and Mae. Diphtheria.

One of the most dreaded diseases to which our readers are exposed is Diphtheria. From our exchanges, we learn that in several localities it has been raging with greater or less violence for some time. At Duluth, and in the western part of Wisconsin it is said to have been, continually, since August. It is easily carried in clothing; or persons visiting a house where it has recently been are exceedingly likely to contract it. All young people should be kept entirely away from any suspicious persons or places in order to prevent its spread.

Among the earliest symptoms of the disease are headache, vomiting, chills, feverishness, with sore throat. Some cases do not complain of a sore throat at first. If a child gets sick at a time when Diphtheria is abroad in the land it is always safe to look into its throat for redness, followed by white patches. This is one of the diseases when if you intend getting a physician, you should do so at once, and follow directions, closely. Plenty of fresh milk is a good remedy where the patients can be induced to take it early in the disease and continue throughout the case. Many die from heart failure and from exhaustion caused from lack of nourishment. But home remedies are not to be depended on. And with the most skillful treatment statistics show a death rate of at least 10 percent of all cases. Many epidemics prove much more fatal.

"A YARD OF PANSIES."

By special arrangement with the Publishers, we are enabled to make every one of our readers a present of one of these exquisite Oil Picture 36 inches long, a companion to "A Yard of Roses," which all have seen and admired. This exquisite picture, "A Yard of Pansies," was painted by the same noted artist who did the "Roses." It is the same size, and is pronounced by art critics to be far superior to the "Roses." The reproduction is equal in every respect to the orginal, which cost $300, and accompanying it are full directions for framing at home, at a costs of a few cents, thus forming an ornament for your parlor or a superb Christmas Gift, worth at least $5. Send your name and address to the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York, with three two-cent stamps to pay for the packing mailing etc., and mention that you are a reader of the BUFFALO GAZETTE and you will receive by return mail one of these valuable Works of Art.

Good Roads.

Good roads are an advantage to any country. The facilities for reaching a town make it a business place, often. Upon the number of the people visiting a town for business or for pleasure depends its success as a rival with its neighbors, other things being equal. And upon the roads depend in a very large measure the number of visits made to a village in a year by surrounding neighbors.

In this country where we have winter a good share of the year, and where most of the hauling is done in the winter season. Our winter roads demand a large share of attention, often a few bare spots on the hill side or on some graded piece of road deter men from hauling their marketable produce to town until more snow comes to cover up the bare places and prices go down until many a man has lost more than he would if he had given a day's time to hauling snow and then marketed his surplus before low prices came.

Where a road is graded some one has suggested that a level ditch be left on either side where travel would be good most of the winter when the road proper is bare. A very good suggestion, and, with a little study and a little care what are in the winter seasons usually almost impossible roads may be made good roads much to the advantage of travelers and of the villages, including merchants and others doing business. Our county commissioner should not neglect appointing delegates to the Good Roads convention.

On Dec. 16 and 17, Miss Marion Willis, an elocutionist of great merit, will give two dramatic readings under the auspices of the school. The proceeds will be devoted to the purchasing of books for the school library. Tickets can be procured of the scholars or at Wittman's Drug store.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

A CRISP SPEECH—One that is published before delivered.

THE Globe shows up C. K. Davis' political record in the Ramsey and the Windom fights in a manner not calculated to aid the Senators aspirations for a re-election.

"NEVER spend your money before you have it." is given as one of Thomas Jefferson's ten rules of life. Our World's fair committee rustled round and secured pledges for $50,000 additional to what our legislature last year saw fit to appropriate, expecting this winter's legislature would vote the so-called dificiency. We hope our newly elected members will remember Jefferson's rules.

THE Pioneer Press places Senator C. R. Davis, of St. Peter, in the unknown column in the C. K. Davis fight and says: "Senator C. R. Davis, when elected two years ago. was instructed to vote for Davis." Probably Charley will consider this story on him in the same light as he used to look upon the fellow that "vomited three black crows" his favorite "speech" in his school days. We don't believe such a party lash as that can wheel C. R. into line.

IT don't seem as if St. Paul was very favorable to C. K. Davis being returned to the U. S. Senate. Although the Pioneer says: "The election of Davis was one of the main parts, and an integral one, of the Republican campaign. The party was pledged to reelect him and the people of the state have placed the Republican party in a position to fulfil that pledge," the people of his own county were so indifferent about his candidacy as to consider other duties of a legislator than acting as a senatorial elector, and sent to the legislature three Davis men and seven anti-Davis men.

THE Pioneer Press can say more about nothing, than any other paper in the state, she has for a long time claimed I. Donnelly was a cypher, and yet she has devoted many valuable columns of her space trying to do him up.

Now she assails those who dare claim that there will be a Senatorial fight pretty soon, when the C. K. Davis Electorial college comes together for business, and says there is nothing of it; there cannot possibly be a contest. And yet her leading editorial takes up over a column of her valuable space, and the first column at that, in Tuesday's paper, trying to convince people that it is "nothing." Why go to all this trouble so soon before the question is to be decided if there is nothing in it? She must agree with the worthy devine who on entering the pulpit was handed an envelope containing a text from which he was to preach, and which proved to be the word "nothing" the good man nothing abashed started out by saying "nothing," "from nothing God created the Heaven's and the earth and all that in them is." And continuing preached an able sermon proving his case conclusively.

No Free Text Books in Ours.

There is a movement on foot to have the legislature pass a Free Text Book Law this winter. We were, with many other, somewhat inclined to think it might be an advantage to the Public schools to have such a law; but since our district took time by the forelock and purchased $300 worth of books and loaned them out to the scholars with such home made laws as that, if a book is damaged or destroyed the pupil must pay the full price of the book and take it for his own or be deprived of all his books until he does, or be suspended from school, and having seen the trouble that is likely to grow out of a free text book law we are no longer even inclined to favor such a law.

Books are too perishable a property, in the hands of many.

School Books are left at the school house and at recess, noon or at other times liable to be damaged by others than the pupils to whom they have been assigned.

It is altogether a wrong idea.

Subscribe for the GAZETTE.

YESTERDAY'S Eagle quotes our complaint that "Some of our school board seem to have gotten together and passed some very arbitrary laws, etc., etc." The Eagle claims the laws were passed by the full board, and gives:

Rule 4. Any pupil who shall deface or injure any of the school property shall be suspended until he or she pays in full for such damage." The Eagle says: "And inkwells and text books furnished to the pupils free are as much the property of the district as the school house itself and must come under rule 4 above quoted."

Now two boys we know of had each a spot of ink on a large geography and some other damage mostly to the cover were asked to pay $1.08 and take the book or be suspended. If this is the ruling under rule 4, a child breaking a window or like damage would of course be asked to pay somewhere in the neighborhood of $13,000., the exhorbitant price of our school house, or be suspended. Usually where damage is done an article the amount of damage satifies all parties. If an insured house has a hole burned in the roof or in the floor a few dollars settles it; the company is not in the habit of paying what the house cost and taking the house.

The Eagle's ears must have contracted considerably if there are only a few pupils in school whose troubles have pentrated to the convolutions of her grey matter, as for the cost of text books any one not satisfied can become so by asking any dealer in them. A. W. Wittman can show bills, if he sees fit to do so, where discounts from list price are given dealers, and list price for the geography mentioned is $1.08.

The price paid by Rosa Anderson and Anna Erwig was 10 cts. instead of 15 cts. as we had it last week. 10 cts would have bought two bottles enough for the family all winter. And now we hear the board are about to quit furnishing ink in which case they will have to buy their own yet.

The Doctor was out of town on professional business on Saturday.

A TRIBUTE TO CATHOLICISM

Rev. H. H. French Testifies to His Appreciation of Its Work.

Up to last night Rev. H. H. French, of Wesley Methodis church, was studiously silent in regard to the much-discussed school question, as brought to public notice by the transfer of the parochial schools in the towns of Faribault and Stillwater. In his prelude last night, however, he took occasion to say what he thought on the matter, and his ideas were in refreshing contrast to the virulent attacks made upon the plan by local clergymen of various denominations.

"I don't exactly endorse the ideas of people who declare that the Catholic church is a power that menaces the government," said Dr. French, by way of introduction. "I recognize that the Catholic church is a power, but it is a power for good. That church leads all others in applied Christianity today, and if, by anything that I could say, I could destroy Catholicism I wouldn't do it. Taking out all debate questions, it is doing an immense amount of good among the lower class, a work that no other denomination can begin to approximate. But I have faith in the United States. I believe in the assimilating powers of this government, and think that it is capable of taking up and Americanizing all influences that may at first seem to be slightly out of accord with it."

Dr. French then went on to show that the practical endorsement of the Faribault plan by the pope, through his legate, Satolli, was a distinct surrender to the American idea. In the 70's, he said, the Catholic church was unmistakably opposed to the institution of the public school. He read from numerous pastoral addresses to show this, and then contrasted their tone with that of an extract from the document read before the late conference of archbishops by Mgr Satolli.—Pioneer Press.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Dec. 9, 1892.

Mr. Harrison has always been credited with being personally above trickery but that belief has been a little shaken by his acceptance of the tricky figures of Secretary Charles Foster, concerning the finances of the Government for the next fiscal year. According to these figures, intead of the deficit which nearly everybody (including Secretary Foster himself) who has given the matter careful study has predicted for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, there will be a surplus of nearly $33,000,000. This is purely and simply a republican trick, and it was incorporated in Mr. Harrison's message for no other purpose than to enable the republicans to charge when the expected deficit comes that it was brought about by democratic wastefulness and extravagance. Mr. Harrison must have felt ashamed of the figures himself for he took care to qualify them by several very important "ifs" and "buts." If that deficit is avoided it will be by the exercise of democratic statesmanship and economy in the present Congress, and if the repnblican senators value the good will of the country they would better not attempt to increase the appropriation bills as they will be passed by the House.

Representative Hooker, of Mississippi, is very sanguine that the bill introduced by him changing the time for the meeting of Congress from December to March will become a law. He is certain that it will get through the House, and assurances from Senators which causes him to believe that it will not be seriously opposed in the Senate, and there is reason to believe that Mr. Harrison would willingly sign the bill. Should it become a law the first regular session of the Fifty-third Congress would begin next March instead of next December.

Representative Allen, or "Private John Allen, of Mississippi, "as his friends call him, enjoys the reputation of being the wittiest man in Congress and his summary of Mr. Harrison's message—"The message sounds like a motion for a new trial, but I do not think the country is going to grant it," has detracted nothing from his reputation.

Republican Senators are to be given an opportunity to show whether they have been honest in their talk against the present silver law. Senator Hill has introduced a bill for the repeal of that law, and a similar bill has been introduced in the House by Representative Williams, of Massachusetts.

Senator Vest wants te know who is responsible for the "pernicious activity" in behalf of the republican party displayed by employes of the Census bureau during the late campaign, and he has offered a resolution for a little investigation, and in a few remarks thereon he stated that he had been informed that the Chief of a Census bureau division who was arrested and jailed under an assumed name for trying to work a scheme to keep 350 democratic voters in the state of New York away from the polls had, after having his resignation asked for and given, been rewarded for his attempted dirty work by being given a better place in the Government service.

There is some difference of opinion as to whether Senator Frye's bill providing for a comprehensive system of commercial enmity to Canadian interests is a bluff made at the request of the administration, or whether it really embodies the Senator's sentiments on the subject. The agitation about that old treaty with England prohibiting war-ships on the Great lakes is in the same category.

The names of a number of gentlemen, including Representatives McMillin, of Tennessee; Breckinridge, of Kentucky; Wilson, of West Virginia; and Bynum, of Indiana, have been mentioned as probable candidates for the speakership of the next House but neither of them has announced himself as a candidate. Speaker Crisp is the only candidate yet in the field, but it is expected that as soon as it shall be positively kuown when the House will meet there will be others.

The bill which has been introduced in the House by Representative Rayner of Maryland, providing for the establishment of a national quarantine, has been very favorably received, and the indications are that it will become a law.

A Democratic senatorial caucus has appointed a committee to look out for democratic interests; also one to confer with democrats in the state legislatures in which attempts are being made to trick the democrats out of Senators.

Bills for the repeal of the obnoxious laws authorizing the employment of U. S. deputy marshals and election supervisors at the polls have been introduced in the House and Senate will be willing to deprive the democratic Congress of the honor of wiping these laws from the statute books. Still the introduction of the bills at this time is an evidence of democratic good intentions that it will be appreciated.

Voting.

EDITOR GAZETTE:—As election has subsided perhaps a few thoughts on voting would not be amiss. Having passed through many voting campaigns I can say I never "split" my ticket. I always voted with the party that advocated my principles. Voting for MEN was a secondary consideration, there being good and bad men in all parties. Sometimes I voted for a man that was not quite my ideal knowing that the party opponent for the same office was a better man in a general way, but this one on my ticket maintained the principles I desired.

My reason, for voting in this manner is, that I think the PRINCIPLES of my party PARAMOUNT to the MAN of the opposite party. I have frequently heard it remarked by voters: "Well, I voted for Mr. A. on one ticket and for Mr. B. on another ticket, each one for a different office." Let us assume that these two offices were of equal importance. In the political scale these two votes are at equilibrium. This man gave equal value to two parties. What has he gained by his votes? Such voting reminds me of the boy who built a cob house and then threw oobs knocking it down. Now, seriously, what is the object of voting? Why is this important franchise conferred on us by the Constitution of the United States? We govern ourselves by our votes, these determine HOW we shall be governed. How important. then, this duty of voting is! Hence the INTELLIGENCE in casting our vote determines the weal or woe of our country. If principles are of any avail why mullify the influence we hold to support a principle by dividing our ballot. This is like "leaking at the top and spilling at the bungs," from the fact that one vote kills the other. What rouses my ire is, to see men cast their votes who are ignorant as to the EFFECTS of voting. It looks preposterous to see an intelligent citizen exercise this sacred right, and then see his intelligence and influence destroyed by IGNORANCE. Laws should be enacted requiring a certain intelligence requisite before one can vote. Without intelligence our liberties are in jeopardy. Think of this, legislators and voters, and then act for justice and right.

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—

For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO. Chicago, Ill.

Its Rapid Development as Shown by the Report of Secretary Tracy.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12. — Secretary Tracy in his report to the president starts out with a list of vessels in the navy, and points with pride to the work accomplished during the present administration. He says:

"On the 4th of March, 1889, the fleet of the United States navy, apart from a few old ships long since obsolete and fast going to decay, consisted of three modern steel vessels, of an aggregate tonnage of 7,863 tons, and mounting thirteen 6-inch and four 8-inch guns, the forgings for which last, as well as the shafting for the vessels, had been purchased from abroad, as they could not be made in this country.

"There have been a total of nineteen vessels of the new navy put in commission during this administration, of an aggregate tonnage of 54,483 tons, mounting altogether two 12-inch, six 10-inch, sixteen 8-inch and eighty-two 6-inch guns, all of which, with the exception of five of the earliest, have been manufactured in this country. Three new steel tugs have also been construced and put in service during this period. There are eighteen vessels in process of construction and certain to be completed, should their armor be delivered within the next year, of an aggregate tonnage of 93,407 tons and mounting altogether twelve 13-inch, six 12-inch, sixteen 10-inch, thirty 8-inch, thirty-two 6-inch, thirty-eight 5-inch and thirty-four 4-inch guns, all of which have been or are to be manufactured in this country. During this period twenty-five vessels will have been launched, thirteen of them, including the three tugs, during the current year, and of all the new ships the construction of which has been begun during the present administration only two will remain on the stocks on the 4th of March next.

"Our new navy, including all vessels built or authorized, now consists of the following vessels: One sea-going battleship (first class—Iowa. Three coast-line battleships (first-class)—Massachusetts, Indiana, Oregon. Two battleships (second class)—Maine, Texas. Six double-turreted harbor-defense vessels—Puritan, Monterey, Miantonomoh, Monadnock, Terror, Amphitrite. Two armored cruisers—New York, Brooklyn. One ram. Two protected cruisers of extreme speed—Columbia, Minneapolis. Fourteen cruisers—Olympia, Baltimore, Chicago, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Charleston, Newark, Boston, Atlanta, Cincinnati, Raleigh, Detroit, Montgomery, Marblehead. One dispatch vessel—Dolphin Six gunboats—Yorktown, Concord, Bennington, Machias, Castine, Petrel. One dynamite vessel—Vesuvius. One practice vessel—Bancroft. Two torpedo boats—Cushing, No. 2, making a total of forty-two vessels.

"All the above, with perhaps one or two exceptions, are essential components of a fully developed naval force, but the relative contribution to the defensive power of the United States to be found in these groups of vessels is not to be measured either by the number of ships or the number of tons alone. The development of the last four years has not been confined to ships alone. At the beginning of this administration the naval establishment was entirely destitute of certain elements of efficiency, each one of which was indispensable to its practical employment as a fighting force, and the absence of which, if it had been possessed of a hundred ships, would still have left it in a condition of paralysis. These were the following: Armor, torpedoes, heavy rapid-fire guns, armor-piercing shells, smokeless powder, high explosives.

The secretary details at length noteworthy progress in the production of these things, and says the progress noted, by which the United States has emerged from its condition of helplessness at sea and by the employment of its own resources has distanced its most experienced competitors, marks an epoch in naval development not only of this country but of the world.

Coming down to a detailed statement as to armor tests the secretary tells of the work accomplished, of the tremendous test to which the Harvey nickel-steel armor plate was subjected, as the result of which improved methods were introduced in the Harvey process, and continues:

"The result has never been equaled or even approached before by any armor plate, American or foreign. It has demonstrated that the United States, in the reconstruction of its new navy, which ten years ago had no existence even on paper, is enabled to place upon each and all of its armored vessels a material the like of which the world, up to this time, has not seen; and that while vast sums have been spent in plating the sides of foreign men-of-war with an inferior material, this country will employ for the purpose an armor which is not only far more efficient, but which represents unquestionably, having reference to the dimensions of plates thus far tested, the highest development of modern science, and a development reached by its own independent efforts.

"Following the example of the United States, the English government four weeks ago held a trial of the new American armor, and it is clear from the highly successful results of the trial that the United States, instead of being the last in the race in the construction of vessels of war or of borrowing its best ideas from abroad, has set an example in this respect which other maritime powers will speedily follow."

In reference to ordnance of the navy the secretary makes extended reference to developments promising greatly improved results. Comment is also made at length as to powder manufacture, high explosives and projectiles, all showing progress of the most satisfactory nature. With regard to torpedoes, while the Howell torpedo has not gone much beyond the stage of hope with which the department entered upon a contract for its manufacture four years ago, yet the latest trials are giving great promise.

The secretary speaks with much satisfaction of the act to "encourage American ship building," under which the City of Paris and City of New York are admitted to American registry.

The aggressive policy of foreign nations continues, and this country, whether it will or not, will soon be forced into a position where it cannot disregard measures which form a standing menace to its prosperity and security. On the isthmus our commerce is engaged in a desperate fight to maintain its foothold. In the south Pacific repeated annexations and protectorates are extending the power and influence of the maritime states of the old world. Subsidized lines of fast steamers are completing the circle of maritime communication on the eastern and western coasts of the Dominion of Canada and fortresses daily increasing in strength are surrounding our coast upon the south and east. Under these circumstances it is imperative to the welfare of this country that the policy of naval reconstruction, so successfully carried on in the past, should suffer no interruption in the future.

Much space is devoted to interesting details as to the operations of ships in commission the last year in Behring sea and elsewhere; on the work of the marine hospital bureau in connection with cholera quarantine, etc. Interesting statistics are given as to the growth of the government toward establishing naval militia, the creation of which is characterized as one of the most important steps in our recent naval progress.

The estimates in the report for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, for navy and marine corps, including those for public works and increased navy, are $24,471,498, being $2,713,141 less than those for the last fiscal year.

FIRE RUINS A TOWN.

Sumter (S. C.) Opera House and Principal Buildings Burned to the Ground.

SUMTER, S. C., Dec. 12.—About 9 o'clock Friday night a fire started in the opera house during the performance by the Chick Company. The flames spread rapidly and soon the opera house was in ruins, with burning buildings all around. The theater and eight business blocks were entirely consumed. The fire department did all in its power, but the flames raged five hours and leveled the principal business blocks in the town. Losses and insurance cannot yet be estimated.

FARM PRODUCTS.

Average Prices of Corn, Wheat, Oats and Other Grain.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The December statistical returns to the department of agriculture relate to farm prices. The average value of corn is 39.3 cents per bushel, depressed by the surplus of the previous crop and early distribution. It is 60 to 70 cents in the eastern states, 50 to 60 cents in the middle states, ranging from 42 to 65 in the cotton states, 42 in Ohio, 40 in Indiana, 37 in Illinois, 36 in Missouri, 32 in Iowa, 31 in Kansas and 28 in Nebraska. This is higher in Nebraska than for any year since 1882 except in 1887 and 1890, and in Iowa in the same time the present average value has been exceeded only in the two years named.

The average price of wheat is 63.2 cents. The next lowest price was 64.5 cents in 1884. In 1886, 1887 and 1890 the average was a cent or two below 70. Last year it was 83.9. Principal state prices are: New York, 85; Pennsylvania, 81; Virginia, 76; Georgia, 90; Texas, 75; Kentucky, 67; Ohio, 68; Michigan, 69; Indiana, 64; Illinois, 64; Minnesota, 61; Iowa, 60; Missouri, 58; Kansas, 52; Nebraska, 50; South Dakota, 51; North Dakota, 52; California, 70.

The average value of oats is 31.6 cents, nearly the same as last year. Rye, 54.8 cents. Barley, 4½ cents. Buckwheat, 53.4 cents. Potatoes, 67.3 cents per bushel, against 37.1 cents last year. Hay, $8.49 per ton, nearly the same as in 1891.

The condition of winter wheat the first day of December averaged 87.4, against 85.3 last year. In the Ohio valley the range is from 79 to 87, and is low also in Kansas and Pennsylvania. It is high in New York, in the south and on the Pacific coast. In the southern states and on the Atlantic coast germination was delayed by drought, and the same cause delayed both planting and growth in the Ohio valley, and materially reduced condition of the crop. The condition of winter rye is but little better, averaging 89.4.

A REIGN OF TERROR.

Blood Flows Freely in the Elkhorn Mining Region in West Virginia—The Murderer of an Officer Lynched.

WHEELING, W. Va., Dec. 12.—Blood has been flowing down in the Elkhorn mining region the last few days. As the record now stands two men have been murdered, one lynched and a faithful officer of the law lies mortally wounded. The first victim of the murderers was Officer James Brooks, who was killed at Keystone, on the Elkhorn river, in an attempt to suppress disorder growing out of the too free indulgence by the miners in liquor on pay day.

Officer Dillon and Constable Burton attempted to regulate a tough colored man named Cornelius Coffee, when Coffee opened fire on them. Dillon was shot through the right breast, near the nipple, and died. Burton received a ball in the body but is expected to pull through. This shooting, followed so closely on the murder of Officer James Brooks, stirred up great excitement and a close search was made for Coffee, who succeeded, however, in boarding a Chesapeake & Ohio train and was soon over the line into Virginia. Conductor Griffith recognized Coffee on the train and telegraphed ahead to the officers at Pocahontas, who arrested him on the arrival of the train.

The West Virginia authorities were notified and Detective Eugene Robinson went to Pocahontas, secured his man and started back to Elkhorn. When Keystone, the scene of the tragedy, was reached a mob of determined men entered the train, quietly relieved Robinson of his man, proceeded to a tree close by the track, and Coffee was dangling from a limb in a few minutes, while the mob riddled his body with a hundred bullets and then dispersed, leaving the corpse hanging at the end of a rope.

GARZA'S MEN IN A FIGHT.

They Attack Mexican Barracks—Several Are Killed and They Burn the Building.

LAREDO, Tex., Dec. 12.—A band of 300 followers of Garza crossed the Rio Grande at Ignacio Zapeta early Sunday morning and attacked the Mexican barracks, just over the border, in the republic of Mexico. The Mexican troopers came out to meet the revolutionists, and at the first fire several were killed and the soldiers were driven back. The revolutionists pushed on and captured the barracks with its guns and supplies. After stripping it entirely the place was burned and all of the soldiers dispersed and the revolutionists then returned to their abode on this side of the Rio Grande. The invaders were under the direct leadership of Entrigo Ramon, the right hand man of Garza. Ramon was slightly wounded. Just after the fight the Mexican authorities rushed out two companies of cavalry from Nuevo Laredo, south of here, but the barracks had been burned and the revolutionists fled. The authorities on this side sent several companies north and Uncle Sam's men are now hurrying through the mesquite to head off the returning insurgents. A courier from west of here says that Garza can get 8,000 men together at a call and that Diaz has ordered Mexican troops massed at the border.

Homestead Relief Committee Issues an Appeal for Aid.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Dec. 12.—The Homestead relief committee has at last organized. A general meeting was held Friday night and the appeal drawn up by the subcommittee was adopted. It states there are 218 families of 870 persons in Homestead on the verge of destitution. Less than 800 of the 3,800 strikers have been taken back into the mill. It was decided to ask for the remainder of the $10,000 raised by Homestead for the Johnstown sufferers. The balance is in the hands of the local committee, having never been used.

FARGO, N. D., Dec. 12.—Mrs. Ole R. Albertson, of York, Benton county, left her house Saturday night for a short time. While she was away some paper caught fire from the stovepipe and the room was soon completely filled with smoke, which suffocated her two little children. The mother has become insane.

FOUR MEN HANGED.

A Quadruple Execution in the Jailyard at Louisville, Ky.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 10.—At sunrise Friday Dennis McCarthy and Stephen Hite (white) and Grant Thomas and Nelson Lewis (colored) were hanged in the jail yard for murder. This is the first quadruple hangingin this state.

Before going to the scaffold Thomas said to his minister: "I am an innocent man and God will punish those who swore my life away." Neither of the condemned men made any statement on the scaffold.

At 7:45 o'clock the four condemned men entered the yard of the jail and saw for the first time the scaffold where death awaited them. Up the steps of the scaffold they marched, Hite leading. He walked firmly across beneath the noose to the west, McCarthy next to him, Thomas next and Lewis under the noose to the east. All but Thomas stood with bowed heads. He looked about at the crowd and bowed to men he knew in the crowd and at the windows of the jail.

The deputies arranged the nooses and pinioned the men at 7:46 o'clock. Hite, while being pinioned, kicked off the slippers he wore. The priests talked continually to Hite and McCarthy and the colored ministers spoke occasionally to Thomas and Lewis. Thomas glanced curiously at the rope and beam above him.

At 7:47 o'clock the cap was adjusted over McCarthy's head and then quickly over the others. Not one spoke. The noose was then adjusted on Hite, Thomas McCarthy and lastly on Lewis at 7:49. All stood firm. McCarthy yawned as the noose was adjusted.

At 7:54 the drop fell. Hite struggled from the first. Grant Thomas' arm drew up and McCarthy's hands moved convulsively. Lewis hung limp.

At 7:56 Lewis had not moved and to all appearances his neck had been broken by the drop. The struggles of the others grew less. At 7:57 the doctors found Lewis' pulse 128, but it quickly fell to 72. Grant Thomas' pulse was 120; Hite's was 44. McCarthy's pulse at 7:58 was 98. At 7:59 Grant Thomas' pulse half a minute later was imperceptible. At the same moment Hite's pulse could not be counted. At 8 o'clock Thomas was the only living man. His pulse was 60. A faint beating of their hearts could be detected for several minutes, but at 8:09½ o'clock all were pronounced dead.

When Dennis McCarthy shot his wife to death on the evening of September 7, 1891, he also took the life of his unborn babe. McCarthy was a drunkard and his wife was forced to support herself and children. Four months before the murder he accused his wife of infidelity, and after beating her deserted his family and went to St. Louis. There he remained a few months, when he wrote a letter saying he was coming home to kill her. Reaching the city, he went straight to his home, kissed his wife in greeting her, and took his little boy for a walk. He returned alone. Three flashes from a pistol and Dennis McCarthy was an uxoricide.

Stephen Hite suffered death for a crime committed while drunk. His victim, Albert Baurman, and Hite first met in a saloon on the night of September 20, 1891. They had several drinks together, when a quarrel arose and Hite was ejected from the saloon. He waited outside, and as Baurman appeared snatched a cane from his hand and struck him with it. Baurman recovered the stick and Hite drew a knife and plunged it into Baurman's heart.

Grant Thomas was hanged upon purely circumstantial evidence. Birdie Coleman was found strangled to death on the morning of February 9 last. Thomas, who had known her from childhood, was seen to enter her house a half hour before the crime was committed and leave it a few moments before it was discovered. He was but a youth, his victim but a girl, although a wife. They were known to have quarreled, but it was some time before the tragedy. When arrested he protested his innocence, but was unable to prove an alibi, was tried and sentenced to death.

A boy called Nelson Lewis a "chinch bug" and he shot him to death. They were negroes, and met at a dance on the night of November 28, 1891. Lewis had been slighted by the black damsels and formed a grudge against George Dean, a youth of 16. As the latter left the ballroom Lewis called to him to wait, but Dean replied that he had no time to waste on chinch bugs. Pulling a pistol, Lewis coolly rested his arm on the shoulder of one of the women, fired and Dean was a corpse.

CATTLE DYING BY THOUSANDS.

Terrible Suffering from Drought in New Mexico—Loss, Forty Per Cent.

DENVER, Col., Dec. 10.—A prominent cattleman just arrived from northwestern New Mexico says that for more than two years the heavens there have refused to yield rain and as a result the water courses are dried up and the irrigating ditches are useless. Said he:

"At a low estimate 75,000 to 100,000 head of cattle have died from starvation and lack of water. The railroads are shipping cattle out of the region by train loads, but thousands of these cattle will die as they are too weak to withstand the winters. Some cattle companies estimate their loss as high as 60 per cent. and the average will run 35 to 40 per cent. The sheep are in almost as bad condition as the cattle. The heaviest losses are in Colfax and adjoining counties."

GREEK THEATERS.

THE seats of the Greek theater were arranged as at present, but the parquet was given up to the chorus.

THE Greek theaters had no scenery, the stage walls being painted to resemble the locality intended.

THERE are some roomy theaters in this country, but none that come up to the old theater Æmilius Seavrius, at Rome, which comfortably seated 80,000 persons. It was built 1,950 years ago.

"Fourteen years ago I had an attack of the gravel, and have since been seriously troubled with my liver and kidneys. Three years ago I got down so low that I could scarcely walk. I looked more like a corpse than a living being. I had no appetite and for five weeks I ate nothing but gruel. Had no more color than a marble statue. After I had taken 3 bottles of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA I could eat anything without distress. Why, I got so hungry that I had to eat 5 times a day. I have now fully recovered. I feel well and am well. All who know me marvel." D. M. JORDAN, retired farmer, Edmeston, N. Y.

YOUR HEALTH.

The citadel of life must be guarded at two points. In the first place there is the danger of taking cold. We take cold through the skin and this affects the kidneys and the lungs. So intimately are these organs connected, that a cold affects both. In order to relieve the system, both should be treated, or rather the whole system should be regulated. This is done by Reid's German Cough and Kidney Cure. It acts as a stimulant and restores the organs to action. The other weak spot is the digestion. When the food does not digest, it accumulates and causes fever, sickness and death. The Laxative Gum Drops will remove all waste material from the system and do it without pain or griping. Ask your druggist for these remedies and see that he gives them to you.

SUNSET.

"How grandly sinks the sun to rest!"
Said one who saw the red-skyed west,

As closed a day, whose golden light
Was slowly fading into night.

Beneath the low horizon's rim,
Seen in the distance, faint and dim.

Men hail a glorious, rising sun,
Whose course to them is but begun;

The self-same orb, just passed away
From other eyes, brings them new day.

"Another ear one passed away:
How peacefully she died," men say.

But just b ond the bounds of earth
They utter tidings of a birth.

The self-same one, who passed from sight,
As sinks the sun each summer night,

The angels say, has but begun
The life that seems to mortals done;

For death, grim terror of the earth,
As seen by angels, is but birth.

No One But Herself Knew Why She Loved Him.

She doubtless had a woman's reason for marrying him. That kind of reason may not satisfy other people, but it is invariably sufficient for the feminine reasoner.

Sam Toms was what is called "wuthless" by his Texan neighbors. Old Bill Bunn, his father-in-law, himself not a very energetic or useful citizen, used to sit on the steps at the cross-road store and publicly bewail his sad lot in having Sam for a member of his family. Bill had a dramatic style of delivery that was very fetching, and invariably impressed strangers as being very much in earnest.

He would sit on the steps, silently chewing an enormous mouthful of tobacco and apparently listening to the conversation of his co-loafers. If Sam's name was mentioned, he would give vent to four or five little falsetto squeaks, which found egress through his nose; then he would draw in a long breath, puff out his fat cheeks, purse his mouth, and give a heavy whistling sigh; this would be followed by a large quantity of tobacco juice, carefully aimed at some object in the vicinity. These preliminaries accomplished, Bill would rise to his feet, thrust one fat, dirty hand into his shirt front, wave the other in a sweeping gesture as he lowered his eyes and rolled his head sadly from side to side, and deliver himself profoundly, after the following fashion:

"Ah—hum! That Sam Toms is th' laziest, mos' shif'iess, o'nery, triflin' ouss I ever seed—an' yere I've done got 'im f'r a son-'n-lawr. Hm-hm-hm!" Another whistling sigh would close this peroration, and old Bill would resume his seat, still shaking his head sorrowfully.

And Bill was more than half right. Nominally, Sam was a cowboy; but most of the time he would tell you he was "jes' layin' off a spell, t' rest up like."

He had always been just so—distinguished for laziness in an easy-going community, and nobody expected him ever to be otherwise; and it puzzled people immensely when energetic, capable Mattie Bunn accepted him for "reg'lar comp'ny," to say nothing of the sensation created by their wedding.

Mat, as has been suggested, probably had some reason for marrying Sam; but it is quite certain that she never told anyone what that reason was. Sam was tall, and big, and handsome in his careless, slouchy way; he had always managed, no one knew how, to wear good clothes, too. These facts and his perennial good nature and friendly ways were the only points in his favor. Against him were the points so forcibly taken by his father-in-law, and, also, that he got drunk whenever he could possibly do so, and was morally so weak that anyone could easily lead him astray.

How Mat and Sam got along no one but Mat knew. Once in a great while, Sam would do some work and earn a few dollars. If he got home with it without stopping at the saloon, well and good. But, oftener than not, he would "drap in jes' t' take a nip 'r two," and that would settle it. At such times he would stay and buy drinks for everybody present while his money lasted. Then he would come home in a maudlin, tearful state of intoxication, and invent some tale to account for his condition and the disappearance of his money, winding up with the promise never to let it happen again. And Mat would pretend that she believed him, and would stroke his curly head until he fell asleep. Then she would look at the handsome scamp for a few minutes with love unutterable in her eyes—the tired eyes back of which were a world of unshed tears. But she never complained—not the first word; the firm-set mouth and weary look might indicate ever so much, but her lips never expressed it. And Sam gradually grew more and more useless and shiftless, trusting to his wife's ready wit and fertility of resource to carry them both over the bad places.

There were lots of bad places, too. Twice Sam ran into debt several dollars at the saloon, and Mat found some means to pay the debts—only herself knew how. But the second time she informed the saloon man that he must trust Sam no more. And, besides these things, to live—how did they do it? Nobody could guess. Perhaps even Mat herself could not have told; yet live they did—or, rather, existed—and, for the most part, kept out of debt.

Sam sometimes worked, but never for very long. He always found some excuse for leaving a place within a few days. He could almost always find another job easily enough, for he was an excellent "hand" when he chose to be—but he did not hasten about finding a new job when he had given one up; not until they were reduced to the very last straits could Mat get him to hunting work again.

One day Sam left home for a ranch about thirty-five miles distant, where he had heard they wanted help. Two days passed—three—four—five—and no word came from him. Mat was not a little worried, although Sam had often been away for two weeks at a time without sending word to her. But this time it was different; there was no excuse for his not sending a message, as the stage came by the ranch he had gone to three times a week. If he had found work there, as he expected, he could easily have notified her. So, late in the afternoon of the fifth day, she threw her shawl over her head and went down to her father's, to find if they had heard anything of Sam.

The old fellow was standing in the doorway, talking to a couple of strangers.

"No," he was saying, "they hain't be'n no person 'long yere, las' few days, but what b'longs yere. Mebbe, though, he mout a be'n seed over yere t' Bacon's. Ben thar? No? Wa-all, my boy's comin' in f'm thar purty soon, an' he c'n tell ye. Come in an' feed; Jack'll be yere right soon."

Mat stayed to help her mother with the supper, and during the course of the meal learned that the two strangers were officers trailing a horse thief, who had stolen a valuable horse at a ranch forty miles east and sold it at Pickett Station, and who was believed to have come this way.

As she listened to the conversation a sudden nameless fear came upon her, making her feel faint and ill. As soon as supper was over she took her shawl and hurried home.

Somehow she was not surprised to find the door open. She entered hastily. Sam was in bed asleep and breathing stertorously. He had evidently been drinking, as his clothes were scattered about the floor, and Mat, looking out the back door, could see his pony standing patiently where Sam had left him, waiting for some one to come and feed him. Mat leaned over the sleeping man and kissed him gently, her eyes full of love. Then she turned to pick up his clothes and put them away. The trousers were heavy, and something jingled in one of the pockets. Instinctively Mat thrust her hand into it and drew it forth clasping several gold pieces. As she did so her eyes opened wide and she stood as if stunned for a time, her heart chilled with the same strange fear that had stricken her awhile ago and impelled her to hurry home.

She rushed to the bed and shook Sam roughly. "Sam! Sam!—wake up!" she almost screamed.

The man turned over and looked at her stupidly. "H'lo, M-Mat! Yere, be ye? Gimme kiss," he said, in a dull tone.

"Not twell ye tell me whar ye done got these yere things!" Mat's voice sounded broken and shrill.

Sam sat up and rubbed his head, looking at her in drunken wonder. "W-w'y, them—them thar, honey?"

She shook him fiercely, and said, in a lower tone—a tone of earnest force:

"Tell me, Sam Toms, whar ye done got these yere coins! Quick, now!"

Her tone partially sobered the man, whose eyes opened wider as he asked, querulously:

"What ye so all-fired fussy 'bout? I hain't done nothin'." And he laughed in a half-drunken, half-nervous way.

"Sam! whar did ye git 'em?"

He sat dumbly staring at her.

"Sam!" her voice was full of horror, "did you steal that thar hoss?"

No answer; but Mat saw by his eyes she had guessed the truth. Slowly the coins fell from her hand to the floor; slowly her head bent forward until her face touched the pillow. For minutes she did not move—not until Sam, who had been staring at her wonderingly, reached out his big hand and laid it caressingly on her head. Then she sprang to her feet, her hot eyes glaring, and her form trembling with anger and horror. She did not speak, but fixed her gaze on his face for a few seconds. He did not meet her look, and presently she turned and ran out of the door.

Sam, almost sober now, called after her, but she did not answer. He got out of bed slowly and started to dress himself. He had almost finished, when Matt, accompanied by her father and the two strangers, returned.

"Thar he is—an' thar's th' money," she said, and passed on out through the back door, without looking at Sam.

There was a jail at the cross-roads; it was a primitive affair, but solid and substantial. It was a dugout in the side-hill, and had a heavy oak door and great steel hinges and lock. It was plenty strong enough to hold a dozen men, all anxious to escape—and Sam Toms did not try to escape. He only sat still in the low, damp, darksome room and tried to understand how it had all happened. It must be a drunken dream—but, no, he was almost sober, and knew where he was and how and why he was there. But—he could not understand. Had Mat—was it really Mat, who had given him up? There must be some mistake.

The big, strong man finally began to realize it all. He lay down on the bunk and cried himself to sleep, like a child.

It must have been about one o'clock in the morning when some one silently entered the house of old Bill Bunn, constable. This some one entered by the back door, went stealthily into the room where Bill and his wife slept, rummaged about a few minutes, and then emerged from the house. It was a woman, and she had something in her hand.

Sam Toms was awakened, a little after this, by a rattling, jarring sound. He sprang up, just as the big oaken doors swung back and revealed the figures of a woman and two saddle-horses.

"I come f'r ye, Sam," said the woman, with a sob. "I done brung both ponies an' ou' clo'es. Le's go, Sam; we c'n git 'crost th' rivah befo' mawnin'. Come!"

He clasped her in his arms, and they clung to each other a little while. Then Mat said, more steadily:

"Come, Sam. Le's go ovah t' Mexico—an' mebbe we c'n try 'n' do better ovah thar."

And they rode forth in the bright, free moonlight, down towards the Rio Grande—into a new and better life.—R. L. Ketchum, in San Francisco Argonaut.

Two Facts About a Ring.

An impressionable young gentleman in a certain country town recently met a charming girl whose grace and beauty took his heart by storm. While conversing with her he made a discovery which he fondly hoped would enable him to make at one brilliant stroke an elegant proof of his ready wit and his boundless affection. Glancing at a modest band of gold that encircled her fair finger, he remarked: "Sweet damsel, I pray you present me with the ring you wear, for I assure you it exactly resembles my love for you—it has no end."

"Indeed, sir," promptly replied the maiden, "you must excuse me if I keep the ring, for it exactly resembles also my love for you—it has no beginning."—Jewelers' Circular.

—Young Man—"So Miss Ella is your oldest sister. Who comes after her?" Small Brother—"Nobody ain't come as yet, but pa says the first fellow that comes can have her."

PERSONAL AND LITERARY.

—Mr. Morley Roberts, the British story-writer, is working as a laborer of the London docks to get his "local-color." He is said to be an unrecognizable figure in his overalls, with paint smeared on his hands and arms and other marks of the rough and dirty work that falls to the lot of the long-shoreman.

—The crown prince of Italy, accompanied by four friends and guides, ascended the Matterhorn from Zermatt recently. The trip was made in sixteen hours, the party descending to Breil. On the top of the mountain the prince's party met two other caravans, so that twenty-three persons were on the summit at the same time.

—Thomas Lincoln, who lives in Fountain Green township in Illinois, is a cousin of the lamented president. He is more than eighty years old. One of the things that make him notable is that he possesses one of the finest portraits of Lincoln extant. It is of life size, in oil, and was painted in Springfield, Ill., in 1860, by an artist of local celebrity.

—Lord Tennyson is the eighth poet laureate buried in Westminster abbey. The other seven are Chaucer, Skelton, Spenser, Jonson, Davenant, Dryden and Rowe. There are monuments to several of the other laureates in the abbey, including Thomas Shadwell, who was buried at Chelsea; Southey, whose remains were interred at Keswick, and Wordsworth, whose dust lies in Grasmere churchyard.

—When Thackeray was about five years of age his aunt discovered the child one morning parading about in his uncle's hat, which exactly fitted him. Fearing some abnormal and dangerous development of the brain, she carried him at once to a famous physician of the day, who is reported to have said: "Don't be afraid, madam; he has a large head, but there's a good deal in it!" His brain, when he died, fifty-three years later, weighed fifty-eight and a half ounces.

—Louis Philippe and Queen Victoria were once walking in the garden at Eu, when he offered her a peach. The queen seemed rather embarrassed how to skin it, when Louis Philippe took a large clasp-knife from his pocket. "When a man has been a poor devil like myself," he said, "obliged to live on forty sous a day, he always carries a knife. I might have dispensed with it for the last two years. Still, I do not wish to lose the habit—one does not know what may happen."

—The clay model of the statue of Gen. George B. McClellan, which is to be erected in Philadelphia, has been scrutinized by Vice-President Morton and Maj. McClellan, brother of "Little Mac," and they regard the likeness excellent. Bids for casting the statue in bronze will soon be invited, and it is hoped that the unveiling ceremonies may occur next May. Gen. Franklin, one of McClellan's favorite corps commanders during the war, will deliver the oration at the ceremonies, and it is expected that many of the officers who followed the general in those days will be present. The full amount necessary for the work is already or can be readily secured by the board. The total cost will be a trifle less than $25,000.

—"Too Verdant.—"The summer is over," he said sentimentally to his best girl, "now come the long dreary days of winter. I never feel at my best in winter." "Never mind, dear," she answered, "you will come out in the spring like the leaves." "I-aw-don't understand," he stammered. "Fresh and green," she explained sweetly, and then a chunk of silence seemed to fall upon them.—Detroit Free Press.

—Thoughtful Indeed.—Hooper (at the circus)—"Never too old for the circus, eh, Woods?" Woods (nonchalently)—"I don't care anything about it myself; but somebody had to come with the boy." Hooper—"Is that your boy?" Woods—"Well—er—no; my boy is out in the country just now, and so I brought a neighbor's. We were all young once, Hooper; and I knew he'd enjoy it."

Do You Wish the Finest Bread and Cake?

It is conceded that the Royal Baking Powder is the purest and strongest of all the baking powders.

The purest baking powder makes the finest, sweetest, most delicious food. The strongest baking powder makes the lightest food.

That baking powder which is both purest and strongest makes the most digestible and wholesome food.

Why should not every housekeeper avail herself of the baking powder which will give her the best food with the least trouble?

Avoid all baking powders sold with a gift or prize, or at a lower price than the Royal, as they invariably contain alum, lime or sulphuric acid, and render the food unwholesome.

Certain protection from alum baking powders can be had by declining to accept any substitute for the Royal, which is absolutely pure.

ORIGINAL COMPOSITIONS.

Bright Young Minds and How They Wrestle With Given Subjects.

As a general thing the girl or boy of tender years dislikes writing compositions, and the subjects furnished in many large schools are far from alluring. What, for instance, could very youthful minds make of "Education?" A small girl who conscientiously applied herself to the task finally produced the valuable idea that "Education is a very good thing, and one which every child should be taught."

"Whale ships," wrote a boy, who had a more congenial subject, "are large, and have an hold in which a lubber is stored." If a landlubber, this is scarcely to be wondered at; but the composition-maker was evidently writing of blubber under a wrong name. Another youth said that "Julius Cæsar invented Great Britain, 55 B. C.," while an equally accomplished historian explained that "Ethelred the Unready was called that because he was never ready for the Danes. He used to entice them away from England by bribing them, but they used to come again and demand a larger bribe."

Wm. Rufus would certainly deny, if he had the power, that "he was gored to death by a stag in the forest his father had made to hunt the deer;" and Joan of Arc would hardly have liked to hear that "she was the daughter of a rustic French peasant which lived in the forest." Prince William was drowned in a butt of Malmsey wine; he never laughed again"—a result which no reasonable person would find fault with.

A boy whose subject was plum pudding, and who was evidently acquainted with it before it appeared on the table, undertook to describe how it was made, and after mentioning a variety of queer ingredients, he added: "When they have put all these in they make it into a batter, and mix it up; and when they have finished battering it they put it on the fire for about an hour and a half to get it done enough, so that it will be better to eat, and softer to chew."

A thoughtful little personage declares that "a stonemason's work is injurious, because when he is chipping he breathes in all the little chips and they are taken into the lungs." We are also informed that "there are five ways of cooking potatoes, and we should die if we eat our food roar." A practical girl advises: "When roasting a piece of meat, put it in front of a brisk fire so as to congratulate it."

Another thinks "we should not eat so much bone-making food as flesh-making and warmth-giving foods, for if we did we should have too many bones, and that would make us look funny."—Harper's Young People.

THE dog who chases his tail is like many debaters—he never reaches his conclusion.

—Quite a laughable incident is said to have taken place in our neighboring town of Maple Plain, on Thursday evening, last, when, at the still hour of midnight, the plodding pedagogue, the sturdy sons of Vulcan, the landlord and his family, and the boarders were all abed, there broke forth, all at once, a terrible noise, all around the place The sleepy inmates rubbed their eyes and wondered what was up Had Biela's comet appeared? Had a cyclone, or an earthquake come? After reconnoitering, the jolly innkeeper learned that it was a regular old fashioned "chivarie" composed of the elite and others of the burg, and as their had not, to his knowledge, been a wedding among his family and friends for lo! these many moons, he was at a loss to know what it meant, and, finally dispersed the crowd by informing them that his wife was sick, and requesting them to cease the terrible din. Quite warm disputes have been going on since as to whether the tooting of horns, etc., etc., was intended for the stargazer or for the "Spark makers" who insist that they still have Hardt's. All agree that the commander-in chief of the besiegers was a captain and understood his business.

—Read the programme, of the Ziebarth school literary society.

—John Czock, Sr., has been laid up with rheumatic affection for several weeks.

—Mrs. Marion Willis, to-night at the city hall. Don't fail to enjoy the rare treat.

—Miss Amelia Anderson was bitten quite severely one day, this week, by somebody's yellow dog.

—We see by the Companion that John Martin and Ed. Bentz, formerly of this place, shot three deer at Staples.

—Watertown had a fire on Tuesday evening. Mr. G. Schlifke lost his store and dwelling, and the family had a narrow escape from being burned.

—No. 1, Vol. XVIII, of the Sherburne County Star-News came to our exchange table this morning. "It is little but it is ould."

—The Delano monthly fair passed off about as usual. A number of buyers were present. Young pigs seem to be in better demand than nearly any other product of the farm.

—Rev. Davis, of Buffalo, preached a fine sermon, on Sunday evening to a good sized and appreciation audience we understand that Rev. D's. people were pleased with our Rev Davies as well.

—At the last meeting of A. F. and A. M., at Rockford, the following officers were elected for the ensuing term: D. R. Thompson, W. M.; D. D. Ames, Senior Warden; W. H. Guptil, Junior Warden; Harry Purdy, Treasurer; William Jacobs, Secretary; George Irving, S. D.; Charles Bugbee, J. D.; C. D Frederick, S. S.; John Sleight, J. S.; E. Miller, Tyler; Ike Harvey, Chaplain.

County Cullings.

Average Cokatoian,—Mr. Bull, I like you much. I vote for you.

Mr. Bull,—I am tired, I don't want to hear any more about it.

Levi Cochran, of Smith Lake, is expecting his brother, Dave, back into Wright county soon.

The County Attorny, it is said, "fixed it" with the Judge and the man was fined $5 and plead guilty.—Eagle.

This is one of the Eagle's usual digs at people. We don't think Judge Canty is in the habit of "fixing" things wrong, and the Eagle's insinuation that the County Attorney is, don't make it so.

Special to the Globe

BUFFALO, Minn., Dec. 14.—Fire destroyed the granary and contents belonging to Fred Pohl, last night. Loss, $600; about $200 insurance.

The Eagle complains that the district court cost too much, and cites the case of "A man from Albion who was indicted for spitting on a church floor," and says: "This performance cost the county in the neighborhood of $50." If the Eagle could have managed to apply her Delano school law to the case the man would now be proprietor of the church or "suspended."

Monday at the County Seat.

Judge Canty, with all his natural degnity held court. He makes friends every term he holds. The Riggs case was being tried to-day.

Judge Alley, at the request of Mrs. Hellen Bain appointed as guardian of her brother David Robinson, George P. Schaffer.

Mr. and Mrs. Thadeus S. Kerr, of Minneapolis, returned home from a visit with their daughter, Mrs. Inez Wright.

George Walker, of Minneapolis, was in attendance on Probate court.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Oakley went to Minneapolis this evening.

J. D. Crandall, who knows the "nigh cuts" through the county seat took passage over the Soo as far as Dickinson.

Nathan Warner and Senator Eaton express a desire to have the Democrats carry out their promises.

R. M. Bohn and Albert Johnson, of Delano, interviewed Clerk of court O'Leary, for a few minutes and now claim to be citizens of the United States.

Auditor-elect Lamson as taking lessons of A. C. Heath in the mysteries of county book keeping. When he becomes as expert as his teacher, he will be a slick one.

O. M. Loyd, of Victor, visited the county seat today.

Sheriff Nugent says he has got the criminals all scared so that business is mighty light now. He thinks of retiring from the sheriffality after January.

Dr. E. Shannon is nicely located in his new office and has office hours from 11 to 12 and from 2 to 3; regular city style

Attorney O'Hair, Justice Billings, Frank Sutton, Malcomb Anderson, and Dr. Catlin, of Delano, were among Court House visitors today.

John Shatter has repaired his hostlery the American House and now has as fine a place as the village affords.

BORN.

Bronchitis.

Bronchitis is a term expressive of what is usually termed a bad cold in the throat, considerable fever is attendant upon its progress, cough and an abundant expectoration, of a purulant nature, are almost always present. A typical case of bronchitis usually ushers in a case of measles, and is sometimes occasioned by irritation of the bronchial tubes, by particles of dust or irritating gasses as in rooms heated by hot air. A few days usually suffices to get rid of the first symptoms, though the cough may last for a long time. The pulse is frequently slower than normal while convelescing from an acute attack. It sometimes, if neglected, becomes chronic and the patient is troubled by every slight change of weather

PLEASANTRIES.

MR. PETERS AND HIS CITY RELATIONS.

I don't know how it is but I don't seem to get on well
With them o' my relations that down in the city dwell—
Except when summer's comin', or when summer's really here:
Them times they sort o' treat me like as though they held me dear,
'Nd through July 'nd August I most generally sees
A half a dozen of 'em here beneath my ellum trees.

But when it comes to winter, when there's nothin' much to do,
'Nd I go down to see them in the town a week or two,
You'd think the way they look at me, they'd never heard my name,
Or that I'd brought upon them all some everlastin' shame.
Why, 'long about last New Year's time I happened in one night
When they was havin' dinner, and you'd thought I was blight.

My cousin's wife she got as red as any healthy beet
When I declined some oyster cakes 'nd ast for solid meat.—
She turned her back on roast corn' beef 'nd made a meal on pie.
'Nd just because I ast a dude they had at that there meal,
If he was Mary Annie's young man, "Maree" began to squeal.

It ain't their hearts that's wantin'—they're affectionate enough—
They show that when they come to me when city heat gets tough.
I's in the brain,—and, after all, I ain't a bit surprised
By just one week of city life I'm nearly paralyzed.
Nd all their little queernesses had ought to be set down,
I think.. to that unnat'ral life they lead down there in town.

—Carlyle Smith.

Christmas.

Sunday, next December 25th, will be observed, throughout the Christian world, as the birthday of our Saviour, Jesus Christ. In different lands, and by different peoples various methods of observation are in vogue. The institution is attributed to Pope Telesphorus, who died A. D. 138. In the 4th century at an investigation held by order of Pope Julius I, it was agreed that Dec. 25 was the day of Christ's birth. Since the 6th century Roman Catholics have observed the custom of holding three masses, one at midnight one at dawn, and one in the morning. Formerly it was, and in some places still, is the custom to dress in grotesque attire and travel about from house to house to the amusement of the children and larger people. In the Protestant districts of Germany Christmas evening is devoted to hanging presents on Christmas trees for friends. "Knecht Rupert" is a conspicuous figure among the gatherings at Christmas time in the Fatherland. In England a religious, and merry making time is always had on each recurrence of the day. The decorating of churches and other buildings with evergreens appears to have descended through the Druidic order from ancient times and is a beautiful feature of the occasion. In the United States whose inhabitants originally came from almost every country on the face of the globe, of course can be seen, with some modifications perhaps, almost any custom looked for. And Christmas morning the happy children rise early, and before leaving their warm beds begin to cry out in merry laughter to their associates, "Merry Christmas," "Christmas Gift," etc., etc. And we hear of "Christ Kinkle, "Santa Claus," St. Nicholas," "Knecht Rupert" and many other names by which the jolly little old man, who is supposed to come down the chimney, with his big load of presents, for every good little boy or girl is known in this country. Some hang up stockings to be filled with presents, some have Christmas trees, at home or at the church. Most people attend church services. And every body is supposed to have a big dinner and a jolly time on Christmas, the birthday of Him who died on the cross that sinners might be saved.

THE C. K. Davis men are said to be favoring an election of Senator without the usual method of holding a caucus of the Republicans. They must be getting scared a little bit after all their bluster. Why not allow the people to elect a senator without the use of a legislature.

THE Valley Herald copies our article on "No Free Text Books in Ours," and says: "We copy the above item from the BUFFALO GAZETTE, and as they embody our views exactly. We publish the same, and hope our members of the legislature will oppose all such measures as not being in the interests of the tax-payers.

SENATOR A. Y. Eaton in writing of the Delano Board of Education's arbitrary laws in last week's Journal has the following to say, which is very much to the point, and will, doubtless, aid some of our board in seeing their duty:

Now it is fair to suppose that the School Board of Delano know that there is no free text book law in this state and that going into this free text book business they have stepped outside the law and that their appropriations of public money for this purpose are illegal and their attempt to hold teachers responsible for the books, and to require parents to pay for damaged books at full retail prices are all unwarrented. Their expulsion of children from school in order to compel payment for damaged books is illegal and subjects every member of the board to be sued for damages. We have no interest in it except to call attention to it as an example of petty tyrany that goes ahead of anything we have ever heard of before. There is a law in this state for compulsory education and the purpose and object of that law is to get the children into the public schools, but the Delano school board have put themselves outside the law and devised schemes and enacted laws to drive children away from the public schools.

Duties of Independent Board of Education.

Below we print the laws governing Boards of Education of Independent Districts. We would respectfully ask that our board carefully read the Ninth section, and see if they can find anything there to uphold them in expelling or suspending pupils from school for damage done property:

150. Duties of Board.—The board of education shall have power and it shall be their duty:

FIRST.—To establish and organize such grades of schools, alter and discontinue the same in said district as they may deem expedient.

SECOND—To provide necessary rooms or buildings for school houses, and grounds about the same.

THIRD—When authorized by a vote of the district to purchase or erect one or more school houses and purchase sites for the same.

FOURTH—To purchase, sell and exchange school apparatus, furniture, stoves and other appendages for school houses, and to furnish fuel for the same.

FIFTH—To take care of the property of the district, and procure insurance, and make ordinary repairs upon the same, or any part thereof, when deemed expedient.

SIXTH—To contract with, employ and pay teachers who have received certificates, as provided herein, and to discharge the same.

SEVENTH—To defray the necessary expenses of the board, pay the compensation of the clerk, treasurer and superintendent, and for such printing, record books, stationery and other incidental matters as may be deemed proper.

EIGHTH—To superintend and manage in all respects the schools of said district, and from time to time to adopt, alter, modify and repeal rules for their organization, government and instruction, for the keeping of registers, for the reception of pupils, resident and non-resident within the district, their suspension, expulsion and transfer from one school to another, to prescribe text-books and a course of study for the schools, and to visit each school in the district not less than once in three months.

NINTH—To make rules and regulations respecting the protection, care and safe keeping of the property of the district, and to prescribe penalties for the breach thereof, to be recovered as penalties in other cases before a justice of the peace, and to change and repeal the same.

TENTH—To make, change and repeal rules relating to the organization, government and business of said board, and the duties of its officers.

ELEVENTH—To provide for the prompt payment, at maturity, of the principal and interest of any indebtedness of the district, by voting from time to time, taxes upon the taxable property of said district, sufficient to meet the same, making allowances for delinquency in paying any part of such taxes.

TWELFTH—To furnish to the board of examiners the necessary blanks for all such grades of such certificates as the board of education may at any time order, which certificates shall severally contain the branches fixed for the several grades of certificates.

THIRTEENTH—When authorized by a vote of the district to make, execute and deliver, for and in behalf of said district, deeds, mortgages, releases and all other instruments relating to the real property thereof.

William Kennedy Talks About the Delano Public Schools and Pays His Compliments to The Board of Education.

I visited the Delano public school today, and observed the work of each of the teachers, with much pleasure and profit. I was especially pleased with the work in the primary department, and though I found everything done in the other departments, both by pupils and teachers, interesting and instructive in the highest degree, I must say that my observations in the primary department will have benefited me the most, as it devolves on me this year to do some of that kind of work, in which I have had little experience and less success. Miss Irene Cheeley is indeed an excellent primary teacher, and I think the superiority of the work, now being done by the pupils of the high school, is largely due to the excellent training they received while under her charge nearly a dozen years ago. There is no teacher in the much-lauded Webster school, Minneapolis, who can hold a candle, so to speak, for Miss Irene Cheeley, in primary work. I do not pretend to be very much of a judge myself but I dare say this would be the verdict of our best teachers, if they could observe Miss Cheeley's work, as I have done to-day.

The school board here, however, seem not to have sense enough to last them over night. They have made a rule that if any text book, furnished by the board of education, be found to be damaged in the least, while in the possession of a pupil, that pupil must pay the full price of the book, or be deprived of all of the privileges of the school. Boys, whose fathers are taxed to maintain the school, are now compelled to roam the streets, and for no greater offense than getting an ink spot on their books. There is a compulsory school law in Minnesota, and every member of the Delano school board ought to be prosecuted, at once, for misappropriation of public money, and for trying to defeat the purposes of that law. WILLIAM KENNEDY.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Dec. 15, 1892

Speaker Crisp's mail has been unusually large this week, owing to the unfortunate occurrence at the banquet of the New York Reform Club, but he still maintains the dignified position he has occupied from the first. He has no complaint and will make none; and neither he nor his friends have ever even for a moment entertained the belief that President-elect Cleveland had any other connection with the banquet than that of the chief guest of honor. As usual, the republicans have tried to make mountains out of mole-hills, and to make it appear that the democratic party was already divided into two great factions, with the President-elect at the head of one and the Speaker of the House at the head of the other. It is the wish to see the democratic party divided that is father to the false statement.

Almost a sensation was created in the House, when the army appropriation bill, which was passed this week, was taken up for consideration, by an amendment proposed by Representative Anthony, of Texas, providing that no payment of salary should be made from the appropriation to any person receiving a pension or allowance from the Government.

There is a bare possibility that the silver question may be taken up in the House this session, but it is not very probable. The subject was discussed at a meeting of the House coinage committee this week, and in response to a proposition that the House be given an opportunity to vote on the bill proposing the repeal of the Sherman silver law, Mr. Bland said he was perfectly willing, provided that it be offered as an amendment to his free coinage bill, now on the calendar, and that afterwards the House be given an opportunity to vote on that measure. The committee will consider this proposition further at its next meeting.

Senator Vest's resolution providing for a commission to negotiate an agreement with the five civilized tribes of Indians for them to take up land in severalty and sell the remainder to the Government so that it might be opened for settlement has been the basis of some interesting talk in the Senate, showing that while there are differences of opinion as to just how they shall be abolished there is practical unanimity in the belief that the present separate and independent government maintained by those Indians must give way to a territorial government. The Senators express themselves as wishing that the logic of the situation will so impress itself upon the Indians that they will themselves see the wisdom of a change, and there are some who are ready to support a movement towards forcing a change, without regard to the wishes of the Indians.

The investigation of the present condition of the Treasury and the probable future revenues of the Government under existing laws, which the House has authorized the committee on Way and Means to make, will not begin until after the first of the year, as the committee has decided that it will save time and give a better basis to compute from to take their figures at the close of business on December 31, which ends the first half of the fiscal year. Meanwhile, members of the committee are hard at work to get themselves thoroughly posted in the matters with which the investigation will deal. Secretary Foster has informed the House committee on Appropriations that there will surely be an available balance of as much as $20,000,000 in the Treasury at the close of the current fiscal year.

Senator Daniel has offered a resolution instruction the Civil Service Commission to publish a pamphlet giving in detail the offices in each department that are in the classified service and those outside of it; also a statement showing which States already have their full quota of federal office-holders, and the number required to make up the quota of those which haven't their share. It is not probable that the republican Senators will allow the resolution to go through, but if the information asked for was in print it would be a mighty useful document to those democrats who have a hankering to get on Uncle Sam's payroll.

Notwithstanding the nearness of the end of this administration, Mr. Harrison finds no difficulty in getting republicans to accept appointment to office. Perhaps it is because they think that republicans in prominent offices are to be very scarce for a generation to come that they are willing to accept office now, even when they know that they can only retain them for a few months.

The anti option bill is slowly dragging along in the Senate. There are daily speeches on it, but it has been so much discussed that it is hard to say anything new about it.

A bill to increase the tax on whiskey from 90 to 1.25 a gallon has been introduced in the House.

CORRESPONDENCE

MAPLE PLAIN MUSINGS.

The Relief Corps sociable, at the Vanderwalker Hall, last Tuesday evening, was largely attended, and all report a good time.

George McCormick has purchased the fine residence of Mrs. Green here and has alaeady moved his family into it.

Mrs. Sophrona Cleveland died, at 9 a. m., Friday, Dec. 16, at the home of her granddaughter, Mrs. Elma Dunn, Minneapolis. The funeral services were held at the Maple Plain Presbyterian church, Sunday afternoon, and the remains interred in the Armstrong cemetry. Mrs. Cleveland, at the time of her death, was in her sixty-eight year. She leaves a husband and two sons to mourn her loss.

Elaborate preparations are being made for a Christmas tree at the Presbyterian church Christmas evening.

Miss Maud McCormick has returned from Minneapolis, where she has been taking music lessons for some time past.

A number of the Maple Plain school children attended the cyphering match at Armstrong, Friday evening. They report a good time.

There is talk of building a dance hall, in Maple Plain, in the near future, forty by fifty and one hundred feet long.

Charley Haney is making a good record in school this winter.

The Relief Corps met in the I. O. O. F's. hall, Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Fannie Drysdale and daughter, Maud, have decided not to go west, this fall.

Mrs. De Camp has moved into the Stinson house, lately vacated by the family of Mr. Geo. McCormick.

Madam Rumor says that a big boy in one of the schools in the town of Independence is giving it out cold that he proposes to "have fun" with the teacher this winter by continuing to misbehave in defiance of the pedagogue's rule. The teacher should do that young man up at once, and do him up fine, too, or he will do the teacher. It is folly to moralize with a smart alick like him. The sooner the conceit is taken out of him the better for him, the teacher, the school, and the community. The other pupils in the school, the neighbors, and everybody else, for miles around, are watching and wondering what the teacher will do about it, and the sooner that teacher gives a practical illustration of what he would do in such an emergency the greater will be his influence for good in that school. It is well to be patient with pupils, but there is a limit where patience ceases to be a virtue; then the teacher should have, and we believe he has, the good judgment and moral courage to demonstrate to that pupil that "the way of the transgressor is hard." There are times when it is not in the power of mortal man to do a big boy a greater kindness than to give him a downright good thrashing. The boy here referred to is spoiling for it, and he should have it at once.

On their way to Maple Plain, last Sunday, to attend the funeral of Mrs. Cleveland, the family of Earl Hosington met with an accident which, but for the timely assistance of a tramp whom they had kindly picked up on the road, might have resulted fatally to Mrs. Hoisington and her daughter Rilla, who occupied the rear seat of the carriage. The carriage had just crossed the high turnpike leading to the steap place on the Armstrong and Independence road, known as Fisher's hill." On either side of the turnpike there is a deep gorge. The carriage had ascended the hill but a few feet when the horse slipped. The tramp, antisipating the danger, quickly alighted, but none too quickly, for the next moment the obstinate horse, in spite of the efforts of Mr. Hoisington to keep him square in the road, suddenly wheeled around, making a turn so short that the wheels on one side of the carriage were lifted from the ground and in another moment the vehicle, together with the two ladies, would have been hurled headlong into the yawning abyss. But the tramp, who happened to be a very muscular fellow, seized the carriage, and by main force prevented its capsizing and saved the lives of the two ladies, or at any rate saved them from great bodily injury.

The public school building here, long the pride of the town, was burned to the ground, last Monday afternoon. The origin of the fire is unknown, but it is supposed that the heavy flue, built upon light wooden stilts, settled some as the frail supports gradually weakened by age, and cracked in the middle, the upper end being fast in the roof, and the sparks passed through the opening thus made and ignited the combustible matter in the garret, such as cobwebs etc., etc., which had accumulated there in great profusion. The school was in session at the time; but as the high ceiling was heavily plastered, and contained no manhole, no one in the building was aware that the school house was on fire until the teacher, a few minutes before the roof fell in, happened to see a great volume of smoke coming down onto a field near by, when he immediately gave the alarm. The garret happened to be open at the end of the old part of the building. This supplied a draft through the garret, and the flames rushed through with such terrible rapidity and consumed the whole upper portion of the building so quickly that the escape of the school was almost miraculous.

The school board are trying to make arrangements to have the school continued for the remainder of the present year in the Presbyterian church.

The school house and furniture were insured for $1400.00, in the Hartford Co.

Mr. William Kennedy, at the last moment, and at the risk of his life, rushed into the burning building and rescued a valued picture, the gift of a former teacher, Miss Ida Woodworth, to the school. The children have a very happy remembrance of Miss Woodworth, who was greatly loved by all who knew her for her many good qualities of mind and heart, and everybody rejoiced when the picture was rescued. The picture is now in the custody of Mr. Kennedy, in whose family Miss Woodworth boarded when she was here. JULIUS HARDT.

BUFFALO BUSINESS.

Buffalo needs a good mill.

A Christmas concert at the Presbyterian church, next Sunday evening.

Mr. M. F. Jennings, one of the most prosperous farmers of Woodland, and formerly proprietor of the Watertown, hotel, was doing business at the court house, on Tuesday.

Rev. C. F. Davis delivered a lecture at Norwood, in Carver Co., one day, this week. Norwood is supplied by Mr. Higgins, formerly of Annandale, this county.

The shares, of the farmers elevator, are nearly all taken up; so that it is now pretty sure that before a great while the farmers will have a place of their own to market their wheat and get a good price for it.

Buffalo has one of the best wood markets west of the cities. One of our enterprising wood firms recently contracted for 1000 cords of wood to be delivered at the railroad track during the winter.

We notice several herds of cattle and sheep coming into town lately for the Minneapolis market and we are led to infer that our butchers have been out hustling from all appearances.

W. H. Cady has commenced closing out his stock of merchandise and will soon retire from that business.

Marriage licenses were issued since the first of December to the following named persons:

Mr. A. E. Knight to Miss Josie M. Cook, Mr. A. Wade to Miss Lena Goetz, Mr. Stephen C. Kemp to Mrs. Amanda C. Stratton, Mr. Ole Nygren to Miss Mary Granquist, Mr. Fred Howard to Miss Lydia Travis, Mr. John Fushburg to Miss Mary Knutson, Mr. C. C. Perry to Miss Myrte Cronnell, Mr. Fred Vogle to Miss Bertha Ferckman. All the parties are residents of Wright county except Mr. Knight who resides in Meeker Co.

THE inheritance of Miss Helen Gould, the eldest daughter of the late Jay Gould, makes her, probably with one exception, the richest unmarried woman in America. The fortune of Miss Garrett, daughter of the late president of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, is larger than Miss Gould's, but a part of Miss Garrett's fortune has been made by her own business sagacity. Miss Gould inherits some of her father's business quality, although in disposition she suggests her mother. She is now richer than any of the daughters of W. H. POSTMASTER GENERAL WANAMAKER has a new idea for cheapening the cost of the national mail service. Partially, at least, the innovation will be put into active operation before he retires from office next March, and in almost any event the old-fashioned leather mail-pouch has seen its day. It will be superseded by a cotton canvas pouch with leather bottom, and, considering that the service has about 1,000,000 leather pouches in use now, this should effect a saving ultimately of about $2,500,000. A cotton canvas pouch will cost barely $2.50, where the leather sack is worth $5.00 at contract figures.

TWENTY-SEVEN of the men who made the heroic charge at Balaklava in October, 1854, are still alive, or were when they gathered to celebrate around the social board the thirty-eighth anniversary of the struggle, in which three-fourths of their number perished. Perhaps the percentage would have been nearer 20 had it been possible to fetch in from other lands one or two who migrated in the hope of bettering their fortunes. The grim monarch has dealt sparingly with those who escaped his frightful levy in the Crimea.

FOUR VICTIMS.

Arrest in West Superior, Wis., of a Man Accused of Killing Four Women in Texas.

WEST SUPERIOR, Wis., Dec. 17.—Behind the bars of Douglas county jail in this city is a man charged with the most cold-blooded series of crimes ever committed in Texas. His name is Richard Edwards, alias "Texas Jack." He is charged with the murder of four women at Denison on the night of May 17 last. One after another the women were stealthily approached and shot, without provocation. Rewards aggegating $5,000 were offered for the arrest of the assassin, and for seven months the authorities of Denison and half the cities in the southwest have searched for the criminal.

Edwards came here some days ago and was taken in custody on information received from St. Louis. The arrest was made three days ago, the fact being suppressed. Friday the sheriff of Grayson county and the chief of police of Denison arrived in Superior to take the prisoner to Texas. Application was at once made for requisition papers and as soon as they arrive the officers will start for Denison with their man.

The crime of which Edwards is charged is a strangely shocking one. The evening of May 17 Mrs. Haynes, the wife of Dr. Haynes, one of the most prominent residents of Denison, with her mother, Mrs. Garner, who lived in an adjoining mansion on Woodlawn boulevard, returned home from a church entertainment shortly after 10 o'clock. Noticing a light in her room Mrs. Haynes, remarking to her mother that her husband was home before her, entered her house. A number of the Garner family heard Mrs. Haynes say: "It's me," "It's me," "It's me." She supposed that Mrs. Haynes was calling to her husband. Mrs. Garner passed into her home.

Perhaps two minutes passed by before a loud scream startled the whole Garner family. They heard more cries and pistol shots. Hurrying over to the Haynes residence the Garners looked in vain for Mrs. Haynes. The neighbors were aroused and a searching party was formed. In an adjoining lot, at the foot of the hill, among overturned rocks, showing there had been a struggle, Mrs. Haynes' body was found. A pistol ball had gone in at the forehead and out at the back of the head and had buried itself in the ground. Another ball had passed through the shoulder. Her watch and chain were gone. A finger had been pounded until the bones were broken and a diamond ring was forced off. Death had followed quickly on the second shot.

Half an hour after the Haynes tragedy and about the time it would take a man to reach what is known as "the half-acre," where are grouped the latticed and high-fenced abodes of the half-world, two shots were heard at one of these resorts. The assassin stood on the porch. His mark was Maud Kramer. The girl sat in a low chair in the center of the room. About her were four other women and several men. None of them were hurt. The shots were well aimed. One ball struck in the left breast of the Kramer girl and the other a little lower. The girl lingered a few days and then died.

Forty minutes after the shooting a woman named Rose Stewart in another resort not far distant went to her room to change her dress for the purpose of going to the bedside of Maud Kramer. Between the two there had been a close friendship. As she threw her dress over her head a shot was fired from the outside of the house. A ball struck the woman in the breast. She fell and the assassin left without another attempt, apparently thinking he had done his work.

It was now considerably past midnight. A few minutes after 3 o'clock, perhaps a couple of hours after the second shooting in "the half acre," a man raised a kitchen window and crept into the house of Mrs. Dr. Hawley. Opening the rear door of the kitchen to have easy exit, the man passed into the sleeping-room of the sisters, Misses Florestine and Alice Hawley. The latter awoke. She is a cool-headed young lady. Knowing that her sister was exceedingly nervous and would become hysterical if aroused, Miss Alice tried to parley with the intruder. "Don't hurt us," she pleaded. "You can have all our jewelry and all of the money we have, but please don't hurt us."

"No," said the man, "I don't want that. "I'm going to kill your sister." Aroused by the conversation, Miss Florestine sprang up and with a scream ran out of the room and to her mother's bed. The mother awoke and put her arms around the girl. The other sister called for help. A young man who had a room in the house came to see what was the matter. The assassin ran out through the kitchen. Passing around the house he found a window opening into the room of Mrs. Hawley. There was no light, but the window had been raised for air. The mother and daughter could be seen sitting on the bed. He fired. The bullet passed behind the mother and entered the back of the daughter. Miss Florestine fell forward in the doorway between the rooms.

DEFEATED.

The Proposition for a Labor Congress During the World's Fair Receives Unfavorable Action in the American Federation Convention.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 17.—At the morning session of the American Federation of Labor Friday discussion of the proposition to hold a labor congress during the world's fair was resumed. A vote was taken, and the convention decided by an overwhelming majority against taking any action toward assisting in the project.

Here a resolution was recommended that stirred up a lively debate. It related to the action of the president and executive council requesting conferences with the Knights of Labor unions. The many attacks of the Knights of Labor against the trades union, and especially on local shoemakers, were deplored. It was said that all efforts to heal the breach while they were on the attack and the federation on the defensive would only be a waste of time. The committee recommended that the highest duty of the federation was to defend the unions selected by the Knights of Labor for attack, and that the executive committee take such action as will enforce this idea. The recommendation of the committee was finally adopted.

A resolution was adopted favoring the support of labor representation in the administrative and legislative departments of the national and state governments and advising members to see that friends of labor command the militia rather than the friends of capital.

BLINDED HER BABY.

An Insane Mother Thrusts a Knife Into the Eyes of Her Year-Old Infant.

ROGERS CITY, Mich., Dec. 17.—In a frenzy of insanity Mrs. Henry Baxter destroyed the sight of her year-old babe by thrusting a knife into each eye. For several weeks the mother has shown signs of insanity, but she was not regarded as dangerous. Friday morning she arose, and, securing a penknife, went to her babe's crib. Forcing open the baby's eyelids, she thrust the point of the knife square into the pupils of the eyes. When discovered by her husband she was trying to choke the infant to death.

Cattleman Smith Found Frozen.

GREAT FALLS, Mont., Dec. 17.—W. Gould Smith, a prominent cattleman of Choteau county, was found dead on the prairie, 7 miles from Fort Benton. The body was without wounds and frozen stiff, lying on its back with arms crossed. He left his ranch on Teton last Saturday for Fort Benton. Monday his horse, saddled and bridled, was discovered wandering about. Smith is thought to have become numbed, fallen from his horse and frozen to death. He was prominent in politics and was well known in this and adjoining states.

EIGHT KILLED.

Terrible Result of a Railway Disaster in Minnesota.

ALEXANDRIA, Minn., Dec. 19.—A frightful accident occurred on the Great Northern railroad Sunday morning at Nelson station, 5 miles east of here, in which eight men were killed and five were seriously injured. There had been a collision Friday morning at Nelson and a number of cars were wrecked. The wreck train has been there two days clearing up and was making up preparatory for pulling out for the east. At 1 o'clock Sunday morning the wreck train caboose was left standing on the main track with a number of cars. An eastbound freight was due about 1 o'clock and had orders to side-track for the passenger train due here at 1:20.

The fireman of the freight tells the story as follows: There is a heavy grade west of the station, and as the freight, with thirty-six loaded cars, under charge of Conductor William Nickey and Engineer James Maloney, approached the switch the engine was shut off and brakes called for. There was no perceptible decrease of speed and Conductor Nickey climbed out of the caboose where he was and began setting brakes, but the speed was too great to stop. When within a train length of the caboose they saw the track was full ahead and both engineer and fireman jumped.

The engine struck the wreck train, threw the caboose on top of the next car, setting both on fire. There were fourteen men in the caboose. One jumped off, five were hurt, three were burned beyond recognition and four were crushed to death. One was totally burned up, not a sign of his remains being found.

The names of the killed are:

The injured are:

A. M. Broscu, of St. Paul, back and head, serious; Thomas Welch, of Boston, Mass., bad scalp cuts, ribs broken; Pat Hannon, of Boston, Mass., shoulder dislocated; David Reed, of Nelson, slight injury to head; Henry Ross, fireman on east-bound freight, shoulder dislocated.

This was the worst accident which has ever occurred on this division of the road, and was due to the heavy grade having a curve, and perhaps carelessness in leaving the caboose on the main track or slowness in applying the brakes.

It is reported that the train was running about 12 miles an hour when it collided with the wreck train. The men killed were wreck-train hands and were asleep in the caboose when the engine struck it. O. Bergland, foreman, was the only one awake, and he had barely time to call to his men and jump, thus saving himself, but the warning cry came too late for the others, who were all killed or badly injured.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 19.—A telegram from Danville, Ky., states that there was a wreck on the Cincinnati, New Orleans & Texas Pacific (Cincinnati Southern) railroad Saturday night, 4 miles from that place, and that several persons were killed. The railway mail service here has news that one of the railway clerks has been killed in the wreck and others seriously wounded. Charles Fagin, baggage master, and United States Express Messenger Kinney were killed. Several passengers were injured.

MONETARY TALK OVER.

Adjournment of the Conference, to Meet in May.

BRUSSELS, Dec. 19.—The monetary conference adjourned Saturday until May 30. The American delegates are quite pleased. Sir Montefiore Levi made a speech. Baron Derenzis, the Italian minister at Brussels, offered a resolution. Nearly every delegate spoke, but few delegates said anything of importance. The resolution offered expressed gratitude to the United States for giving an opportunity for the new study of actual conditions. While the metal conference suspended labors until May 30 under reservation of the approval of the various governments the conference reserves the ultimate judgment of the matter proposed and expressed a desire that the interval from now till the end of May be occupied by profound study and trusts such study may result in the recognition of an equitable basis for an understanding in no way affecting the monetary policy of the various countries.

Father and Son Sentenced to Death.

VIENNA, Dec. 19.—The peasant Tanzer and his son have been sentenced to death by the presiding judge of the criminal court in Wiener Neustadt. During the trial, which began on Wednesday morning, it was shown that the father, with the assistance of his son, murdered the mother of the family, because they considered her a useless charge on the property; also, that Theresa, the daughter, was privy to the plot. She was sentenced to six years imprisonment.

Passed Away.

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 19.—Col. Henry W. Hilliard died here Saturday. He was prominent in southern politics before the war. He was a brigadier general in the confederate provisional army. In 1877 he was appointed by President Hayes United States minister to Brazil. There he played an important part in the emancipation of slaves, and is generally credited with having been chiefly instrumental in bringing about that event.

Europe Will Protest.

VIENNA, Dec. 19.—The cabinets of Europe are arranging for a united protest against the threatened restrictions upon immigration in America. The organ of the Austrian foreign office recently urged that the application of the methods used in America against the Chinese coolies to the case of Europeans was unworthy of a civilized country like the United States, and that the insult involved in shutting the door in the face of European immigrants was the more gross because it was coupled with an invitation to visit the world's fair.

The Chicago Ball Club Sold.

CHICAGO, Dec. 19.—The business of baseball in Chicago has passed out of the hands of A. G. Spalding and his associate owners of the Chicago ball club. The control of the business has been purchased by a new company called the Chicago Baseball club, articles of incorporation for which have been filed in the office of the state secretary at Springfield. The incorporators of the new company are James A. Hart, the present president of the old club, Charles M. Sherman and Thomas E. Barrett. The corporation has a capital stock of $100,000.

A SICK STATESMAN.

Indications Point to an Early Close of Ex-Secretary Blaine's Career—Fears That He Will Never Recover—Something About His Disease.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—There is no material change in Mr. Blaine's condition. Friday he showed a temporary improvement and during the afternoon and evening he was perhaps a little better. But there were no signs of a permanent gain in strength. Those near and dear to him had a faint gleam of hope that his strength might yet come back enough for him to be removed to a more kindly climate, yet they did not deceive themselves into believing that this was anything more than a remote probability, Mr. Blaine's family realizing that his present sickness is unlike any attacks he has had in the past.

Mrs. Blaine is constantly at his bedside. James G. Blaine, Jr., Miss Hattie Blaine, Mrs. Damrosch and Mr. Blaine's cousin, Miss Dodge, are all at the family residence. Outside of his family and physicians, and possibly his religious advisers, nobody has been able to see Mr. Blaine. Until the last day or two his family have been hopeful that his present attack was only a temporary one, but the signs of lost vitality are such that they no longer seek to comfort themselves with this hope. They do not give up entirely, but they realize that Mr. Blaine is in a much more dangerous condition than at any previous time.

The distinguished patient's present illness dates back only ten days. He went out driving then and caught cold, which was followed by a fever. For a few days this did not seem likely to prove more serious than the previous attacks. Mr. Blaine apparently was rallying from it, but the improvement did not continue. He has been growing worse since last Saturday, though he has had one or two temporary rallies and has been bright and cheerful.

Mr. Blaine is said to be suffering from no special malady beyond the general giving way of his physical powers. It is possible that he may really be a victim of Bright's disease, and the spells of nervous prostration to which he has been subjected are due to this cause, yet there is nothing that can be learned definitely.

Mr. Blaine's spells of illness have been so frequent that his family have naturally been averse to giving publicity to them. The widespread interest in the foremost private citizen of the republic justifies the statements which are made regarding his condition now. He has practically been an invalid for three years past, and whether chronic disease has been making ravages on his system or whether a succession of attacks of mild illness has weakened him there is no longer any question that his vitality is impaired so that his recovery is despaired of by those who know the facts. The sympathetic interest is as widespread as it is deep. From every corner of the land and from almost every part of Europe inquiries come daily to know how Mr. Blaine is. The answer cannot longer be made cheering.

FRENCHMEN ARRESTED.

They Were Connected with Panama Canal Frauds—Criminating Documents Found in Their Homes.

PARIS, Dec. 17.—M. Charles Aime, Marie de Lesseps and M. Marius Etienne Fontaine and M. San-Leroy have been arrested by the direction of the minister of justice, M. Bourgeois, for their alleged connection with the Panama canal frauds. M. Henri Louis Felix Cottu, for whose arrest an order was also issued, has fled to Vienna. San-Leroy is charged with having accepted a bribe as a member of the chamber of deputies. The charges against the officers of the company, on which summonses were previously served, and on which they have now been arrested, are that they have jointly made use of fraudulent imaginary credit; that they have dissipated capital intrusted to them for a specific purpose; and that they have swindled others out of part or all of their means of living on their fortunes. The Teutonic was starting when he reached Queenstown. He chased it in a special steamer, telegraphed far ahead, caught the liner and got aboard with bag and baggage while all the passengers cheered.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

ONLY about one prayer in a thousand offered in church has any real meaning in it.

THE right kind of a good man is all the time telling somebody something about God.

THE love that men have for little sins is the same kind of love that devils have for big ones.

IF men were not different in character God would not be able to manifest much of His grace.

IF the whole truth were known, the world would be full of people with hanging heads.

Help! Help!

How often has the cry been uttered in vain! But there is help for sufferers from liver complaint and constipation, those exceedingly prevalent disorders. A course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will completely remove them. The malarious, the rheumatic, the dyspeptic and the nervous also derive unspeakable benefit from the great remedy.

CELERY is reported weak in the market. The stalks we commonly see are absolutely unable to stand alone, at least out of the ground.

SIX POINTS, out of many, where Doctor Pierce's Pellets are better than other pills:

1. They're the smallest, and easiest to take—little, sugar-coated granules that every child takes readily.

2. They're perfectly easy in their action—no griping, no disturbance.

3. Their effects last. There's no reaction afterwards. They regulate or cleanse the system, according to size of dose.

5. Put up in glass—are always fresh.

6. They cure Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, Sick or Bilious Headaches, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels.

JAY GOULD.

After all Jay Gould died of consumption. The doctors said he had neuralgia and Jay offered a million of dollars to any one who would cure him of his trouble. It turned out that he did not have neuralgia at all, but simply consumption. Don't you make this same mistake. If you feel that your lungs are weak or that you are subject to colds and coughs, or if your throat be sore and tender, get a bottle of Reid's German Cough and Kidney Cure and take it freely. It contains no poison and it is the only cough remedy on the market that ministers to all of the excretory organs. The small bottles cost twenty-five cents, large size fifty cents. Every druggist has it.

CHRISTMAS-PARTY, and, no doubt,
A loaded Christmas-tree;
And girls and boys and toys—and noise;
What do they want with me?
And yet her little friendly note
Declares—thrice underlined—
I must not fail. Well, well, I won't!
She's always sweet and kind.

Now, let me see. I had not thought
Upon my wardrobe's state;
I must look up my evening vest—
By Jove! it's rather late
To rummage for a satin tie
And fish out gloves to match.
Great Scott! my best shirt's at the wash,
And this one needs a patch.

I'll thread a needle—if I can—
(I am the man who brags
Of single blessedness!) and see
If I can't mend these rags.
This thread's too coarse; or else, perhaps,
My needle is too slim.
The light is poor or it may be
My sight is getting dim.

Why were men's fingers only made
To drag and thump and jerk?
I'm thinking how her little hand
Would get around this work!
And how she'd smile and bite her thread,
And look so wise and calm,
And—there! I've stabbed my finger through!
Oh, what an ass I am!

The clock ticks to... I must make haste,
Since she desires—Ah!
For those lost opportunities
Our thoughtless youth let pass!
But, as she's single still, who knows,
Some joys we may retrieve.
Perhaps she'll mend up life for me
Before next Christmas eve.

—Madeline S. Bridges, in Judge.

ARTHUR seated himself upon the floor, in a corner of the room farthest from his mother; he wrinkled his eyebrows, puckered his mouth and cramping his little fingers around a stubby lead pencil began to write; and this is what he wrote:

"DEAR SANTY CLAWS: Plese dont for Get to Fill my stockin. An Id like A Sled an a par of skaTes. An plese giv MOThEr the vEry nicEst thinG you goT. We Live on French street, First ChimBly dowN 2 FLIghTs.

"ARTHUR HILL."

He stretched out his little numb fingers, with a sigh of relief; for printing was hard work for Arthur's chubby fist. Then he glanced furtively over his shoulder, to make sure his mother was not looking—but no; stitch, stitch, stitch her needle went through the heavy coat, and she did not once look up. So he folded the precious letter in a painstaking manner, and sealed it in the envelope addressed:

"MR. SANTY CLAWS,"

and stuffing it into his little pocket—regardless of opposition on the part of letter or pocket—went softly out of the room; but his quiet movements ended on the landing just outside, and he tore down the stairs and through the streets to the post office.

Perhaps the thought that there were but two days before Christmas, and the consequent fear that the gentle reminder might not reach Santa Claus in time, gave the deer-like fleetness to his sturdy little feet.

There was no one in the office, so he walked boldly up and dropped the letter through the slot, and watched it sliding down the inclined plane into the receiving box. Then, with a fear of being detected, he ran out of the office, and, with his hands in his pockets, scampered home.

Arthur's letter lay among the others for a half hour or so, and then a clerk began assorting them for the mails.

"Here's a good one!" and he laughed heartily as he held up the crumpled envelope.

"Mr. Santa Claus!" and he laughed again, in company with two or three clerks who had gathered around him.

Just then the door opened and the postmaster came in.

The clerk held up the letter: "Mr. Santa Claus—address not given! Are you acquainted with the gentleman's residence?"

Mr. Morris took the envelope and laughed, also, as he glanced at it, and was about to throw it down, when a sudden vision of four little maids, with an unquestioning faith in Santa Claus, rose before him.

"Perhaps I can find the gentleman," he said, with a twinkle in his kind blue eyes; and putting the envelope into his pocket he walked away.

It was Christmas eve. There had been a heavy snowstorm the day before, and it had cleared off very cold. The people were muffled in furs to their eyes—if they had the furs—and hurried along over the crisp snow, which sang sharp little songs under their feet. The rude wind wrestled with them at the street corners, making the gentlemen catch wildly at their hats, and fluttering ribbons and veils in the faces of the ladies.

Jack Frost played coarse practical jokes upon everybody and everything within his reach, so that the market boys felt obliged to run with the turkeys and turnips, blowing the while upon their aching fingers or rubbing their smarting ears.

The newsboys, with mufflers and caps pulled closely down, held their papers under their arms and their hands in their pockets, and thrashed one foot against the other, while they called in cold voices to the passer-by: "Paper, sir, paper!"

The heavens were studded with gleaming stars which blinked merrily down on the hurrying throng; and through uncurtained windows were glimpses of gay Christmas trees with happy children dancing around them, and smiling fathers and mothers looking on.

Holly wreaths hung in profusion and festoons of evergreen and mistletoe adorned the walls; and over these happy scenes played the flickering light of the "yule" log's glow.

The church bells rang merrily, and the organ's deep note peeled forth upon the night winds; lights streamed from the windows and through the doors as they swung to and fro, while softly on the listening ear stole the sound of voices singing of "Peace on earth, good will toward men."

But the peace and warmth and glow had not reached "French street, first chimney, two flights down."

There was a little fire—just enough to give it the name—but it seemed an empty title.

The curtain was not drawn—what need of that? since the frost had worked so thick a screen that not even a loving star could peep in with a happy Christmas greeting. Mrs. Hill, with an old shawl over her shoulders, sat close to the table, with a dim kerosene lamp beside her.

She was blue with the cold, and her fingers were so stiff that the needle went laboriously through the heavy seam. Her tired eyes filled with tears now and again, but she dashed them away—every minute was precious; for if the coat was not finished to-night, and taken back—there was a sorry out look for to-morrow. And the thought of the empty larder and coalhod nerved her to frantic efforts at faster working; and when the clock outside told the hour of eight, it sent a colder thrill through her frame.

Arthur, in spite of the cold, had pulled off one of his stockings, and was looking ruefully at a large hole in the toe.

"Look!" he said, holding it up before his mother, with a comical expression on his little mottled face.

"O, Arthur, how you do wear your stockings out! I mended them all up last Saturday night."

"But it comed right through again!" and Arthur glanced from the yawning stocking toe to his mother's tired face, then back again to the stocking.

"Do you s'pose the presents will come through?"

"No, I am afraid they won't," she said, half bitterly.

"But I don't want 'em to!" and he looked up with a perplexed expression at his mother, who was afraid his presents wouldn't come through.

He examined the hole again, taking its dimensions by thrusting three fingers through it and stretching them apart.

Yes, there was no doubt a good sized toy could squeeze through that hole.

"Can you mend it, mother?"

"O, Arthur, don't ask me to do anything!" she answered, fretfully, and Arthur moved away a little; for never in his life before had he heard his mother speak like that.

But the next instant she reached out her arm, and snatched him passionately to her heart.

"Arthur, dear, mother is sorry that she spoke like that to you," and she kissed the little cold face, while her tears—so near the surface—rained over her own face and his. "I am tired, but that is no reason for my speaking crossly to you; and mother will mend the stocking before she goes to bed."

Arthur put his arms around her neck. "You'll have a happy Christmas," he said, looking up into her face with beaming eyes; and her tears started afresh as she looked at his hopeful face and thought of the gloomy prospect.

"I wish I could make a fire and warm you before you go to bed," she said, rubbing his blue cheeks with her cold fingers, "and give you something to eat."

"I ain't much hungry," he answered, with a brave smile.

"If I finish this coat in time I shall get something to eat, and I will wake you up and give you some," and kissing him, she turned back to her work and began that weary stitch, stitch.

Arthur hung up his stocking, and going back to his mother pulled the shawl away a little and kissed her on the neck—a form of caress which did not interfere with the needle—and with a bright face opened the bedroom door and shut himself in. How cold it was! for the door had been shut all day, that what heat there was might be kept in the kitchen. He would like to have opened it, for a ray of light from his mother's dim lamp, but it would make her colder; so he kicked off his shoes, not parting with very much else, for it was too cold to undress, and jumped into bed and in a few minutes was fast asleep, dreaming, perhaps, of Christmas feastings and Santa Claus.

Arthur had not been dreaming long when a low knock startled Mrs. Hill.

What could it mean? And she trembled a little as she walked to the door and opened it.

A kind-faced man with merry blue eyes was standing there; he had very fat pockets, and a sled in one hand and a parcel in the other; and Mrs. Hill trembled more than ever, but from quite another emotion than fear.

Mr. Morris explained his errand; and as he stepped into the room there was a sound of other footsteps in the little entry, but he shut the door and unloaded his pockets and laid his parcels down.

"My children sent these things to Arthur," he said, laughing, as bags of candy, nuts and raisins came out in company with "jumping-jacks" and picture books. "I hope Arthur won't be offended," and he drew a little doll from the depths of one pocket.

"My children are all girls, and the youngest one looked so disappointed when I suggested that a doll was not just the thing for a boy that I concluded to bring it along."

Mrs. Hill had hardly spoken; her eyes required a great deal of attention, and her lips had an overmastering tendency to tremble; Mr. Morris, to relieve her, looked as little as possible in her direction.

But finally there was an end to apples and oranges, toys, strings of popcorn and candy, and the rest of his errand must be accomplished; so clearing his throat, and looking hard at the ceiling, he said:

"My wife thought the nicest thing for the mother would be a ton of coal and a barrel of flour."

Poor Mrs. Hill—poor Mr. Morris! for it was almost as trying for one as the other; he walked to the window and examined the frost-work; it was so thick and fine that he glanced at the stove next, and then at the empty wood-box and scuttle. The table, with its dim light, row of spools and scissors, with the unfinished coat in the chair, told the story plainly.

Mrs. Hill looked up at last, and tried to thank him; and Mr. Morris said how happy they had all been in answering Arthur's letter; and he looked so happy as he said it, that no one could have doubted him. Then he opened the door and a man set a large basket inside and went away directly.

"I shall see you again, Mrs. Hill, and I hope you and Arthur will both have a very merry Christmas. Good night," and he had gone before Mrs. Hill could speak. He went directly to a coal dealer and ordered a bag of coal and a basket of wood sent at once, and did not leave the place until he had seen them on their way.

Mrs. Hill was still sitting in the chair where Mr. Morris had left her when the heavy step of the men with the coal and wood, and their loud knock at the door, roused her from her reverie.

The first thing she did after they had gone was to make a rousing fire. How it crackled and snapped! and she bent over the stove and rubbed her stiff fingers in the genial warmth. Then she took Arthur's stocking, with the yawning toe, and quickly mended the big toe and put the toys in. The candy bags and strings of popcorn she hung around it, and piled the apples and oranges in a plate on the shelf above and stood the shining new sled beneath with the skates, mittens and woolen scarf hanging over it.

What a fine show it made! and how she longed to catch Arthur out of bed to see it! but she wanted the room to get warmer first; and then there was the basket to be unpacked.

She folded away the coat—not finished, but that did not matter now—and smiled brightly as she picked up her spools and scissors and thought of the day of rest before her.

There was everything in that basket—at least so thought Mrs. Hill. Two pies; a loaf of cake; another of bread, little heart-shaped cakes, sugared in pink and white; a plum pudding; butter; tea; coffee; sugar; cranberries; a bag of sweet potatoes; a squash; a turnip; two glasses of jelly, and a turkey. The little table was loaded; it had never groaned beneath such a weight before.

Mrs. Hill hung the holly wreath which had lain on the top of the basket in the window; then opened the bedroom door.

"Arthur," she said, softly, bending over him; but Arthur did not move. She kissed him on the lips; he puckered up his mouth, opened it, and closed it again, with a deep breath, and was as fast asleep as ever.

"Arthur, do you want to hear about Santa Claus?" The sleepy eyes opened and he rubbed them with his little fists.

"W-h-a-t?"

"I thought you would like to hear about Santa Claus; your presents have come."

Arthur was wide awake—as what boy would not have been—and sprang out of bed.

"Didn't he come quick?" and he stood in the bedroom door, his eyes still blinking, looking from the chimney to the table, and from the table back to the chimney, and then up to his mother's face.

She drew him to the stove, and sitting down took him on her lap.

"I didn't 'spect so much!" he exclaimed, finding his tongue at last. "but ain't it jolly—jolly!" and clapping his hands together he threw his arms so tightly around his mother's neck that he nearly stopped her breath and gave her a sounding kiss.

"The stockin's full—an' you mended the hole!" and he got down on the floor and peered up under it. "It's all sewed tight!" Then he pulled down the sled and skates, tried on the mittens, wound the scarf around his neck, scraped acquaintance with the candy, and took a bite out of a shining apple.

Words! words were weak for the expression of his satisfaction; so he danced up and down the room, and clapped his hands, and laughed and whistled, and finally turned a somersault, in the intensity of his joy.

Then he and his mother had their Christmas supper in the warm room with the fire-light shining through the cracks of the usually grim old stove. And they talked of this glad evening—for somehow the bitterness of its beginning had passed from the mother's mind and the old carol which sings that "night is passed," most fitly expressed the thought of her thankful heart.

"I can see a star!" Arthur cried, and sure enough, the frost had melted a little, and a star was peeping in; oh, more than one! two, three—yes, several shining down on the poor little home as they had shone, long years before on lonely Juda, and telling again the old yet ever new story of the Christ child's birth, and of love and peace on earth.—Annie J. Holland, in Household Monthly.

DELANO DIARY

Merry Merry

CHRISTMAS!

—Fresh Oysters at C. H. Green & Co's Grocery.

—M. E. sociable at the home of L. M. Maxfield, Wednesday evening, Dec. 28. All invited.

—Miss Marion Willis' entertainment under the auspices of the Public school was good, and was enjoyed by a large audience on both Friday and Saturday evenings. "Money musk" and "Come here" appeared to show the artist off to the best advantage.

—The prospects are good to have the iron bridge replanked. As we now have two lumber yards and the system of letting out to the lowest bidder has been established of course bids will be taken for doing the work and furnishing the lumber. This is not always the best way but then the board should be consistent.

—We understand that a movement is on foot to have several spelling down contests in the near future between Rockford school and our own. This is a move in the right direction and will tend greatly to stimulate a much neglected but highly essential branch of the education of English speaking people. Hurrah for the Spelling School!

—On Thursday evening, Dec. 29, at the city hall, the Delano Dramatic club will give one of their entertainments entitled "M'Liss" a four act Border Drama. The club has taken in several new members and now claims to be a very strong club. "Cox and Box" will be given before the regular Drama. Prof. James A. Wharton, of Buffalo, taking the part of Sergeant Bouncer.

—Some of the audience including the jelly wheat buyer, had about as much fun at the expense of our newly fledged sewing machine agent and his wife, on Saturday evening, at the entertainment, as they had with the regular pregramme. After Miss Willis had related in her best style, the experience of Josiah Allen's wife with the dispensor of "fellers" someone asked our agent "Is that the way you do" when he immediately gave as fine an exhibition of the uncomfortableness of the situation as his predecessor in the business could have done in the original act.

—The Eagle finding her grounds on the question of charging school children list price for books soiled or damaged begins to crawfish in fine style. She tries to blame everybody else but the right individual for the egregious error. She pitches into Brother Eaton, because he interfers with our town, at the same time she soars over to Watertown, out of our county even, to interfere with other's business. She does not deny but we have free text books, for which the treasurer might have to refund the money expended without law. She admits the ink wells cost $1.10 per dozen, 9 1-6 cts apeice for the entire outfit and that scholars paid 10 cts for the glass part a small portion of the concern and insists that, that is cheap. She indulges in her usual abusive epithets, which is no argument, nor germain to the question at issue. She must be enterely beside herself if she thinks people can't see for themselves that section nine of the Duties of the officers, given in this paper, don't prohibit the passage of any such rules, by school boards, as that made at the last meeting of the Delano Board of Education that "If any pupil damage or destroy any book belonging to the district he or she shall pay the actual cost or value thereof and such book shall then be the property of such pupil." Even before this amendment to rule 4 was concocted, children were asked to pay list price or leave school. The old bird with the noble name is in a bad place and squirms and flutters and fumes and sputters but its no use the law must be obeyed in these matters: they have too long been trampled underfoot in our community and the time has come when our school board should begin to pay out money according to instructions, and not squander the sinking fund for free text books against the law, and leave those living in the district to pay about $7.00 out of $10.00 tax for school purposes and continue to pay interest on $10,000, debt on a building that could be built for less money, although first cost was much more.

—The Eagle is so befuddled now-a-days as to mix her locals up in such manner as to be useless. As a sample last week she informed her readers that "a new daughter arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nick Frank, Thursday forenoon." When as a fact she arrived TUESDAY morning, very early. And this week the bird tells in mentioning Joe Cronk's accident "His right hand got caught in the machine and was town off almost up to the wrist." It happened to be the LEFT. But that is about as near as lots more of the Eagle's stories.

—On the statemsnt in the "Eagle" that if the publisher had a boy or girl of his own to send to school they would be taught to obey the school rules, if that is the case Mr. Gutzwiller would change the 4th rule of the school, if the furnace leaked (like it did befor it was fixed. Or if it was he boy that was knocked down by gas) he would have the thing fixed or probley take them out of school he would not pay $1.08 for a book that had a dob of ink on the coyer if he could buy one at St Paul for $.92. A little lower down he says that "if the 'chip' did not know this before let him take the hint now and there will be no need of appling the shingle so hard on him in the barn next time. If the "toper" had the shingle applied on him he would have na use for the black bottle under his quilts, nor would be around playing "tipsy tar" on the streets. It is stated that he used the expression on election (as near as I can give it) "I wish there was a saloon open I'd get a drink LAW OR NO LAW" this was several years ago when he run for councilman he no doubt gets his usual Sunday morning drink. County Cullings.

Nugent for U. S. Marshal.

A well known democrat, who should be posted in the matter, informed The Times yesterday that the next United States marshal for Minnesota would be John Nugent, ex-sheriff of Wright county. It is known that Nugent, who has been fortunate enough to capture several elections in the republican county of Wright, wants the place and is supposed to have a good chance of getting it. He tried for it eight years ago, when Marshal Campbell was chosen by President Cleveland, and now the tip comes from Wright county that Nugent has received assurance that he will be more fortunate this time.—Minneapolis Times.

Among Jurors summoned as "Jurors" for the United States court to convene, at St. Paul, on Jan. 19, are A. H. Willits, Annandale; Geo. M. Wright, Montrose; A. C. Bailey, Long Lake.

Special Dispatch to the Times.

ALEXANDRIA, Minn., Dec. 19.—Great excitment was caused here today by a mad dog which bit several persons. It was a dog that came in from the country, and created quite a scare B. VanNimar was bit on the back, Joe Arnold bit in the hand. Mr. Frick who is on the staff of the Minneapolis Journal, also got a bite in hand. A number of citizens with guns gave chase to the dog, but could not catch the animal as he ran up the road toward Garifield. where he bit three more persons before being shot.

The doctors pronounced it a genuine case of the rabies. and the people of the city are badly worked up as several other dogs were bitten. This makes the fourth mad dogs in two weeks, and every dog is ordered muzzled or shot. It is thought that those bitten will go to Washington at once and get the Pasteur treatment there.

INDEPENDENCE INCIDENTS.

Merry Christmas to ye, editor and staff may you feast on turkey all the day long and have happy dreams during the night.

Died, in Minneapolis, last Friday, Mrs. Enoch Cleveland. Funeral sermon at Maple Plain, Sunday, preached by Rev. Sherwin, of Watertown. She was buried at Armstrong cemetry. She leaves a husband and several grown up children.

There will be an entertainment at the A. church, Armstrong, next Saturday evening.

Read and text book meeting at Armstrong to-night by the citizens of Independence.

Many in this community are having very bad colds, caused mostly, we suppose by the changable weather.

The article in last week's GAZETTE headed "voting" and signed G. Uppum made some very good hits, but when he says: "Laws should be enacted requiring a certain intelligence requisite before one can vote." Who could draw the dividing line? It would take more than a Moses or all the Leyitical priesthood. Should such a law be enacted your correspondent would not want to be one to enforce it For when you would tackel an ignoramus and tell him you had the necessary papers to show that the Lord did not do enough for him in way of intelligence to allow him to cast a ballot for his country and the cause he loved ten chances to one if he did not punch a hole in you. As a rule ignorant people in their own imagination are the smartest people we have.

The incoming Democratic administration will have hard taskmasters during the next four years for the Republicans say we expect great things of you now and will ask blessings from us thicker and faster than fell the manna in the wilderness.

A mass meeting was held at the town hall, on Tuesday evening, and R. M. Mills was elected as delegate and O. Styner alternate to the Good Roads Convention. The meeting expressed itself opposed to the Legislature voting to refund the amount raised over and above the appropration by the World's Fair commission. Committees were appointed on Free Text books and the Australian system of voting. Another meeting will be held on the second Tuesday in January.

Yesterday the school house burned down during school hours. It was fully insured. JOHN MCGARY.

THE SONG OF THE "No. 9."

My dress is of fine polished oak,
As rich as the finest fur cloak,
And for handsome design
You just should see mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I'm beloved by the poor and the rich,
For both I impartially stitch;
In the cabin I shine,
In the mansion I'm fine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I never get surly nor tired,
With zeal I always am fired;
To hard work I incline,
For rest I ne'er pine—
No. 9, No. 9.

I am easily purchased by all,
With instalments that monthly do fall;
And when I am thine,
Then life is benign—
No. 9, No. 9.

To the Paris Exposition I went,
Upon getting the Grand Prize intent:
I left all behind,
The Grand Prize was mine—
No. 9, No. 9.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889, at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered—the GRAND PRIZE—giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor—the most prized honor of France.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best it will be your own fault. Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine. If he doesn't keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue and terms. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO. Chicago, Ill

CHRISTMAS IN SWEDEN.

They tell a lovely story, in lands beyond the sea,
How, when the King of Glory lay on His mother's knee,
Before the Prophet-prince came, bringing gifts in hand,
The dumb beasts felt the miracle men could not understand!
The gentle, patient donkey and the ox that trod the corn
Knelt down beside the manger, and knew that Christ was born.
And so they say in Sweden, at twelve, each Christmas night,
The dumb beasts kneel to worship and see the Christmas light!
This fancy makes men kinder to creatures needing care,
They give them Christmas greeting, and dainty Christmas fare;
The cat and dog sup gaily, and a sheaf of golden corn
Is raised above the roof-tree for the birds on Christmas morn!
We do not live in Sweden, but we can feed the birds.
And make dumb creatures happy by kindly deeds and words.
No animal so humble, no creeping worm so small,
But that the God who made us has made and loves them all!
If we to them are cruel, like Christ we cannot be!
And this shall be our lesson from our dear Christmas tree!

—Our Dumb Animals.

Hydrophobia, Rabies.

As several towns in this state have recently been afflicted with mad dogs and a number of people have been bitten it is well to acquaint ourselves with the disease before it makes its appearance in our midst.

Rabies, Hundswuth, Hundsjuka or the disease spread among dogs and other animals, and from them communicated to man, by a bite, is propagated only by infection. An animal already having the disease must be in the country to convey it to others. Many people, if bitten, are supposed to die of fright, rather than of the acutal disease. Statistics vary as to what percent bitten, have the disease. Some claim that one in five bitten, among the human family, only, have the disease. Where the teeth of the animal have recently been cleansed by biting something before it bites the person, or where the teeth pass through clothing they may be sufficiently cleaned to prevent the inoculation. And the late treatment by Pasteur of France, whose method of treatment can be had in Chicago, and, doubtless, in a few days, can be had at Red Wing, of Prof. C. N. Hewitt, our very efficient Secretary of the State Board of Health, make it unnecessary for people to get quite so badly frightened as they would a few years ago, when it was supposed to be certain death to be bitten. We would not, however, advise people to get bitten for the purpose of experimenting. Shun all animals that act in the least strangely. There are several forms of Rabies among dogs. Some are excited and frisk about more than usual. Others become more quiet and are inclined to snap at their surroundings.

The length of time from the biting to the taking of the disease is placed, by good authority, at from, in 60 per cent of cases in the human race, from 18 to 61 days. In some cases the symptoms manifest themselves sooner or later. The wounds are said to heal even more quickly than if no rabies were present. If anything is wrong with the dog be careful that he cannot bite any one, or another dog, or any other animal. If the dog supposed to be mad is kept for a few days he may prove to be all right when any one who has been bitten by him would, of course, have their mind much relieved any be sayed much suffering. Be careful of your dogs. One dog may bite your horses, cattle, sheep, hogs to say nothing of your friends and relations or yourself. In case any person is bitten by a dog the least suspicious let them take steps to receive the best treatment possible.

Tariff Pictures.

In Troy employees made $301 a year on the average in the manufacturing industries in 1880. Ten years later they were making $379 a year, an increase of 24.91 per cent. Yet Troy is a Democratic city which votes regularly for free trade.—New York Press.

Troy people evidently don't attribute their increase in wages to any benefits derived from the McKinley bill. They live right there and are working for a living and probably know about as much about their business as any one can tell them.

ALEXANDRIA recently had a mad dog scare several people were bitten. Now comes news that St. Cloud has had two dogs that showed symptoms of the dreadful disease rabies or hydrophobia, that they were shot by the police. People should be careful as the disease may show itself at any place where dogs are kept.

THE Legislature will proceed to elect a successor to our senior senator, on Tuesday, January 17. The constitution of the State provides that: "Members of the senate of the United States from this state shall be elected by the two houses of the legislature in joint convention, at such time and in such manner as may be provided by law."

When C. K. Davis gets through with the senatorial fight he will run his hands through his hair and wonder where he was at.—St. Peter Herald.

Judge Speer, of the United States court in Georgia, decides that the fact that a man belongs to a labor union is not a sufficient reason for his discharge from employment.—Pioneer Press.

We are entirely unable to re-call a single act that Davis has ever done for the state that any man of ordinary intelligence could not have done equally as well; and we do not understand that he is expected to accomplish muoh in the future. He is not even popular in his own state, and his seeming popularity is a laughable humbug. —Journal Brainerd.

The cry has been raised throughout the state for free text books in the public schools, and, like everything else in the line of taxation, when the bars have been laid down there appears to be no limit to the in-pouring stream. One thing is made to logically follow another. Logic is always easy to find, and is made to cover a mulitude of sins of taxation.—Hutchinson Democrat.

World's Fair Notes.

Since July 15, many applications for space have been received and they are still coming in, and doubtless will continue to do so until the Fair opens. Some are under the impression that with the Exposition, as with an omnibus, "there's always room for one more." These applications are duly filed, but there is very little chance of any of them receiving any space, for the reason that all of the space has been given away. Even at that almost every applicant had to be content with less space than he asked for. It is possible that a few, who have been awarded space, for one reason or another, will not occupy it, or will be made to surrender it for not complying with the requirements which the Exposition has laid down. In such cases the space will be offered to those whose applications are on file, regard being had both for priority of application and the desirability of the exhibit. Thus it will be seen that persons making application at this late day stand almost no chance of getting any space. If, however, any desire to take that small chance they can get application blanks and full directions by applying to Director-General Davis, or to the World's Fair commissioners, of their own state.

The section from one of the big California redwood trees, which the government will exhibit in its building at the World's Fair, has arrived at the Fair grounds. Eleven freight cars were required to convey it across the continent. It measures thirty feet long by twenty-three feet in diameter. The section is hollowed out and when placed on end, divided into two stories and lighted, as it will be, it will form a rustic house large enough for a family to live in.

ST. CLOUD NORMAL SCHOOL.

By a Wright County Teacher.

EDITOR GAZETTE:—In response to your request I write a few notes concerning the State Normal school at St. Cloud.

Normal schools have passed that experimental stage during which their claim to support was questioned and now, beyond controversy, they are recognized as an essential part of our public school system, and the great demands made upon them by the best of our schools for teachers indicate that they are thoroughly established in their relation to the system at large, and, the fact that graduates from the advanced course have life certificates is certainly indicative of a confidence in the system, and a cordial support of it by the state.

It is not my purpose in this letter, however, to discuss an already decided subject, but to give a few hints as to the answer to the query: "What are we doing here?"

A subject may be studied from several points of view. In a high school or college the point of view is very broad, for from such a school go lawyers, doctors, mechanics etc., etc., and since the particular calling of the pupil is not known, the subjects must be taught in such a way that they may be useful to a lawyer, doctor, etc., etc.

A professional school has a definite point of view in teaching a subject, for in such a school the future calling of the pupil is known and a subject is taught from this definite point of view; viz., that it may be known in its relation to the future work of the pupil.

To illustrate, when in a law school the subject of contracts is taught. It is presented in relation to the use the future lawyer will make of it. So the Normal school, whose special function is to fit teachers for teaching, presents the subjects constructively and in their relations to mental growth and that the facts in the subject may be known in their relation to all other facts in the subject and to its central principle as determined by the purpose of the study.

But the Normal school does not merely teach subject matter, since possession of knowledge does not necessarily imply ability to teach. Edward Everett said; "The second part of instruction in a Normal school is the art of teaching. To know the matter to be taught and to know it thoroughly, are of themselves, though essential not all that is required."

A teacher should know the nature of mind and its laws of growth, just as the horticulturist must know the nature of the plant he is to grow that he may apply the proper conditions for its development.

A teacher should know how to use the subject matter as a means toward solving the problem of education [which is not to add knowledge to or put facts into the mind (impossibilities), but to attain a perfect development of man, rational freedom.]

A teacher should also know how to govern and manage a school.

These ideas, so briefly and roughly outlined, seem to permeate every phase of work done here and to be the "central principle" of the school.

This school is peculiarly fortunate in its location. St. Cloud is not far from the center of the state and about one hundred miles from Mankato which has the Normal school nearest this one.

A circle with St. Cloud as a center and with a radius of fifty miles will embrace almost the "heart" of Minnesota; including the major part of the following counties which are perhaps the best farming counties in the state and whose resources are being fast developed: Stearns, Wright, Meeker, McLeod, Hennepin, Carver, Kandiyohi, Anoka, Morrison, Benton, Sherburne, Todd, Isanti, Mille Lacs and Kanabec, and these are not more than one-half the territory which this Normal drains by virtue of its location. It may be interesting to Wright Co. readers to know that Wright Co. stands perhaps first (excepting, of course, Stearns,) among the counties sending teachers to this Normal, about forty-five from Wright county having graduated and many more having received more or less training here. At present there are, I believe, thirteen in attendance from Wright Co. I am afraid I am occupying more space with this letter than I am welcome to, or mention might be made of the new twenty thousand dollar addition to the main building which was erected last summer, and the superior advantages which we will have in consequence. The graduating class this year, will number about fifty, the largest in the history of the school.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. Dec. 23, 1892

"What will the democrats in next Congress do?" said Hon. Don M. Dickinson, echoing the question that had been asked him. "Why, they will do just what is right; that's what they were elected for. The democratic party more nearly represents the whole people than any other party, and for that reason it is better qualified to legislate for the whole people than is any other party. And in the next Congress it is going to be prepared for the first time in many years to legislate; for, not withstanding the present apparent doubt as to the Senate of the Fifty-first Congress, I have the best of reasons for positivly stating that the Senate after the 4th, of next March will be controlled by the democratic party." While in Washington Mr. Dickinson stated that he had no idea of again going into the cabinet, and expressed the opinion that no member of Mr. Cleveland's old cabinet would be a member of the new one.

Senator Carlisle declines to discuss the matter but there seems to be a general belief among democrats in Congress that he can be Secretary of Treasury if he wishes to.

The House so far as accomplishing anything is concerned might just as well have begun its Christmas holiday on Tuesday as on Thursday, as it did not have a quorum during the last two days.

Representatives Holman, and Rayner of Maryland, are leading the opposition to the Nicaragua Canal bill in the House, and present indications are that it will be formidable enough to defeat the bill, by fillibustering, if not by votes. The bill has been favorably reported to the Senate and there is little doubt of its being past by the Senate sometime in January. There has never been any opposition to speak of to the bill in the Senate.

There is weeping and wailing among those who have been scheming to fasten the republican employes of the Government Printing Office upon the incomming administration by having Mr. Harrison order the Civil Service rules extended to cover that establishment. The scheme is a failure, if my information is correct, and it comes from a trustworthy source, as Mr. Harrison has positivly declined to issue the necessary order, although he has partially promised, as a sort of compensation to the weepers and wailers, that he would try to save the official heads of the republican division chiefs in the department service by putting them under the protction of the Civil Service.

Senator Vest's resolution providing for an investigation of partisan acts by certain Census enumerators was adopted by the Senate before it adjourned. The investigation is to be made by the Census committee.

Senator Call introduced a just resolution providing for a suspension of the approval of lists of public lands to States of corporations. It was laid on the table to be called up latter; likewise a resolution authorizing an investigation of the subject.

The investigation of the condition of the Treasury, recently authorized by a House resolution, was formally begun this week when Chairman Springer wrote a letter to Secretary Foster specifying in detail the information wanted. As the figures are to include December 31, Mr. Springer does not expect the information before the middle of January. The information obtained by this committee will necessarily be the basis of all the tariff and financial legislation to be enacted by the next Congress. It will also show whether Secretary Foster has maintained a small ayaliable balance by improperly manipulating figures and by an extensive system of withholding payment of accounts against the Government long after they should have been payed, both of which he has repeatedly been charged with doing.

Prominent republicans have been taking especial pains lately to let democrats in Congress know that Mr. Harrison would gladly sign a bill repealing the present silver law if given an opportunity to do so, and it is said that if some steps are not taken soon after the reassembling of Congress looking to that end he will send a special message to Congress on the subject There has been some talk of merely amending the bill so as to make the monthly purchase of silver bullion discretionary with the President, instead of mandatory as at present, but no conclusion has been reached.

The brainiest man in the republican party---Mr. Blaine---is believed to be on his death-bed, and deep and loud are the expressions of sympathy on all sides. The exact nature of Mr. Blain's disease is kept a profound secret by his physicians, but there is little doubt in my mind that grief and disappointment have as much to do with his illness as disease.

THE name of the queen of the Sandwich Islands, Liliuokalani, is pronounced Lil-lee-woke-a-lamy. All you have to do to pronounce that name is to think of Lilly waking Mary's lamy, or some other little girl's lamy.

ACCORDING to the statistics of the interstate commerce commission a railway passenger stands one chance in 10,823,153 to be killed while traveling. A great many persons are willing to take the chance and even accept a free pass agreeing not to hold the railroad company liable for damages in case of injury.

GARZA is a small man personally, but he is a revolutionist with a large R. He has cost the United States government over $200,000 in military and judicial operations, has killed any number of Mexican soldiers, and is still doing business at the old stand despite the regular troops on either side of the Rio Grande.

WHEN the bewildering news comes from Calcutta that the Nizam-Ul-Mulk, brother of Afzul-Ul-Mulk, reigning sovereign of Chitral, has defeated the forces of Sher Afzul Kahn, the usurper, who murdered Afzul-Ul-Mulk last November and took possession of the throne of Chitral, we get some idea of the exceeding toughnesss of the Atlantic cable.

DAVID A. WELLS says that $10,000,000,000 have been wasted during the last forty years in whisky and other intoxicants. An old toper doubts the correctness of Mr. Wells' statement. He thinks that money spent for an article, three drinks of which will make a man feel as if he owned all of the United States and part of Canada, cannot be said to have been wasted.

THE will of Wilson G. Hunt, with assets of $5,000,000, has just been put on file in New York and calls out the fact of Mr. Hunt's failure many years ago. After a hard fight he again got on his financial feet, called all of his creditors to a banquet, and under each plate was a check for principal and interest of the indebtedness of Mr. Hunt to the person named. The affair created a profound impression at the time.

THERE is a loud call for servant girls in South Dakota, but they don't materialize. The girls are generally clerking, typewriting, dressmaking, tending machines, stenographing, and getting farther away every day from the kitchen toil. So elsewhere. If a family happens to coax a good cook into service by high wages she is apt to strike for higher pay just about dinner time. Sociologists can't solve the problem and housekeepers will simply have to solve it themselves by doing their own work or else adopt the cooperative cooking plan.

AN agent of the Anchor line steamers in New York says that fully 50 per cent. of the Italian immigrants go home every fall to spend the winter upon the money earned here during the summer. More than 17,000 went this fall, and they carried with them an average of $250, or a total of $4,250,000 taken out of the country. Some 70,000 immigrants from other parts of Europe returned during the year, carrying on the average $300 each, or a total of $21,000,000. That is taking an unfair advantage of Uncle Sam. If this is a good enough place to earn money in it is good enough to live in.

DIVORCES are becoming more easily obtainable as the years come and go. In Denver Judge Miller granted a divorce to J. M. Williams and then adjourned court to marry him to Ethel West, who was with Williams in the court room when his divorce was granted. Williams testified that his wife left him because he would not allow her to carry the family purse. Then Judge Miller performed the marriage ceremony, and handed Williams a marriage certificate along with the decree of divorce. The new wife was thus given legal evidence that her husband intends to carry the "family purse."

IT is said that a determined effort will be made this winter to have the New York legislature abolish capital punishment and substitute life imprisonment. Some of the strongest advocates of this action have been returned to the legislature. The bill to be proposed this year will also take from the chief executive the power of pardon, and in its place allow pardons to be granted by the court alone upon the presentation of new extenuating evidence. There are eleven murderers in the state prisons awaiting death. Maguire, executed recently at Sing Sing, was the eleventh to sit in the electrical chair.

GIVEN HIS POWERS.

Mgr. Satolli, the Papal Legate, Restores Rev. Dr. McGlynn to the Priesthood.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—The famous case of Father McGlynn, of St. Stephen's church, has finally been decided by the restoration to him of authority to perform his priestly functions. The settlement of the case came within the scope of the general power vested in Mgr. Satolli, the papal legate, and the decision was promulgated by him Friday night at the Catholic university where he is stopping.

The case was first formally presented to Mgr. Satolli on Wednesday last by Father Burtsell, McGlynn's friend and adviser throughout his controversy with the archbishop, which resulted in the suspension of the priest and his practical excommunication.

He presented the plea of the deposed priest, at the close of which Mgr. Satolli told him to return to New York and communicate to Dr. McGlynn a message from him (the monsignor). The purport of this message can only be surmised, but it is believed to have contained a statement of the concessions required to be made by him in order that his plea might receive favorable consideration.

Dr. McGlynn's reply was brought to Washington Friday morning by Father Burtsell, and he and Mgr. Satolli were in consultation over the matter. The presence of Dr. McGlynn's friend in the city became known, and as a result reports were circulated as to the action of Mgr. Satolli in the matter.

At a late hour Friday night the following statement was furnished by a representative of Mgr. Satolli:

"To end the many contradictory telegrams sent out it is thought expedient to state that at 9 o'clock p. m. Dr. McGlynn was declared free from ecclesiastical censures and restored to the exercise of his priestly functions, after having satisfied the pope's legate on all the points in his case."

The effect of this decision by Mgr. Satolli is limited. It enables Father McGlynn to serve as priest in any parish to which he may be assigned. A return to his old fold at St. Stephen's is a subject for further consideration, and must be settled, the authorities here say, by Archbishop Corrigan, of New York.

[The course taken by Rev. Dr. Edward McGlynn, pastor of St. Stephen's church, in advocating the principles of Henry George and in actively supporting that radical social philosopher as candidate for mayor in 1886, was a striking departure from the precepts of the vatican by which the Catholic clergy are supposed to be governed. It naturally brought the independent priest under the surveillance of the ecclesiastical authorities, and when, after the election, Dr. McGlynn's political views continued to find a wide circulation through the medium of newspapers, Archbishop Corrigan rebuked him in a pastoral letter. This reprimand was followed by the suspension of Dr. McGlynn from his pastorate, and a peremptory summons to Rome to answer for his conduct before the tribunal of the propaganda.]

MANY WERE HURT.

Wreck of a Santa Fe Express Train Near Colorado Springs—Twenty-One Passengers Injured, Two of Whom Will Die.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Dec. 24.—The Chicago express on the Santa Fe road was derailed about 2 miles east of Halstead, Col., while running at a high rate of speed. The passenger coaches and Pullman sleeping cars were hurled down an embankment 50 feet high to the bottom, landing in a heap. The overturned cars immediately caught fire, and it was with the greatest difficulty the imprisoned passengers were rescued from a frightful death. A number of passengers and several of the train crew are reported injured, but no one was killed. A relief train with physicians and surgeons was sent from here and rendered assistance and relief to the injured. The accident is attributed to spreading rails. The following is a list of the injured:

TO LEAVE THE CABINET.

Secretary of State Foster Will Resign and Go to Paris to Take Part in the Behring Sea Negotiations.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—President Harrison may, if he be so minded, have the privilege of appointing another secretary of state before the close of his official term. Hon. John W. Foster will lay down the portfolio of state on February 1 and leave for Europe. His objective point will be Paris, where the court of arbitration in the Behring sea controversy will hold their sessions. Some months ago, before Gen. Foster was appointed to succeed Mr. Blaine, the president had selected him to represent the United States as special counsel before the court of arbitration. It was expected after Gen. Foster became secretary of state that another gentleman would be chosen as special counsel. The president, however, feels that Gen. Foster's experience fits him especially to discharge the dutics of the place, and that at his suggestion Gen. Foster will leave the state department in time to attend the first meeting of the board. From the time of his departure until the 4th of March next Mr. Wharton will discharge the duties of secretary a work for which his long connection with the department has admirably fitted him.

NEW NORTHERN STATE.

Movement for the Purpose Started in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 24.—The press of the upper peninsula has started a movement in favor of making that part of Michigan a separate state. For years the agitation has been going on, but never reached its present extent. The northern parts of Wisconsin and Minnesota are to be included in the new state. The Escanaba Mirror says: "From a social, business or manufacturing standpoint, the upper peninsula has not the remotest connection with that part of the state lying south and east of the straits of Mackinac."

TO OPEN THE FAIR.

Programme of Exercises Arranged for the Inauguration of the World's Columbian Exposition in May Next.

CHICAGO, Dec. 23.—The programme for opening the exposition next May has been completed by the committee having the matter in charge. Grover Cleveland, who will be president of the United States when the fair is opened, is to deliver the only address and start the machinery. No other orator will be heard. A poem, perhaps, by Oliver Wendell Holmes, and some music will precede Mr. Cleveland's address. After the wheels are buzzing and the crowds are rushing through the buildings it is proposed that President Cleveland and his party shall drive through the grounds and pay their respects to foreign commissioners to the fair, who will be waiting in the official headquarters to receive the presidential party. Later in the evening Mr. Cleveland's carriage will stop in front of festival hall, and there the president will hold a public reception for two hours, from 4 to 6 o'clock.

The public will not have an opportunity to attend the exercises of formally inaugurating the great exposition. Festival hall seats but 5,000 persons. One thousand tickets will be reserved for officials of the fair, members of congress and others. The remaining 4,000 seats will be sold at five dollars each, tickets being issued on invitation. This is the programme decided upon:

Music—Arranged by Theodore Thomas.
Prayer.
Music.
Presentation of chiefs of departments by the director general.
Poem.
Music.
Address and opening of the World's Columbian exposition by the president of the United States.
Benediction

It is recommended that the exercises begin at exactly 10 o'clock on May 1 and close at noon or earlier. From noon to 1:30 o'clock lunch will be served President Cleveland and the 1,000 special guests.

Those who have been chosen to attend the inaugural exercises are: The president, vice president and cabinet, the supreme court, the diplomatic corps, the United States senators, members of congress, world's fair directors, national commissioners, lady managers, foreign commissioners, world's fair officials and the Chicago aldermen. A number of distinguished American citizens will be added to the list.

Prof. Tomlins and Mr. Wilson, of the bureau of music at the world's fair, have decided upon the dates for the appearance of the festival choir, composed of representatives of the eastern and middle states, in festival hall, at the exposition. The programme is as follows:

June 7, Cantata, "Festo Ascensionis Christi," Bach: "Israel in Egypt," selections, Handel. June 8, "Elijah," Mendelssohn. June 9, "Hallelujah," cantata, opus fifty, A. Becker; selections, "Moses," Rubinstein; Vorspiel, quintette and chorus from third act "Die Meistersinger," Wagner.

SERIOUS FOR DIAZ.

Mexican Revolutionists Rapidly Gaining Ground—Following the Battle at Guerrero, in Which Ten Men Were Killed, Another Federal Garrison Is Attacked and Five Slain—No Quarter Given by Either Side.

NEUVA LAREDO, Mexico, Dec. 23.—Reports, although conflicting, come from every part of the northern side of the republic indicating the growth of the revolutionary movement. Dispatches are rushing to and fro from the Mexican officials to the United States officers on the frontier, and in the near future there will be a genuine revolution in Mexico.

Information was received here Thursday that Gen. Estrada, stationed at Mier, about 75 miles down the Rio Grande, was missing from his post of duty, and it is thought he has joined the revolutionists, who are marching toward the interior of Mexico. This is another indication that the outlook is serious for President Diaz. A courier says that the reported desertion of Gen. Estrada is confirmed and that he is now at the head of a thousand men who are in every way familiar with the fastnesses of the interior.

It is impossible to gain any information from those high in authority, as everyone is under the strictest orders not to make public the telegrams, but this much is positively known, that there was a battle the 17th on Mexican soil, near Guerrero, about 30 miles from the river, between the Mexican troops and revolutionists, with a victory for the latter.

There were five soldiers killed in the skirmish, the revolutionists completely routing the federal troops, and in a body 400 strong continued on their march toward the interior. When last heard from they were within a few hours' march of the town of Coralvo, which is situated 50 miles from the river, near the Candolia mountains, and 30 miles from the Mexican National railroad.

Another battle took place on the 19th, when ten men were killed at Coralvo, where there is a garrison. At this place five of the Mexican soldiers were burned half alive. A courier with official information gave it out that the revolutionists gave and asked no quarters.

Seven Men Killed in Street Brawls.

CITY OF MEXICO, Dec. 23.—The following has been received from a correspondent in the city of Guatemala: "The municipal elections held on December 11 were extremely exciting. The occasion was marked by a number of street brawls, in which seven persons altogether were killed. The liberals triumphed."

Mexican Government Troops Unable to Suppress Yaqui and Mayo Indians.

CHIHUAHUA, Mexico, Dec. 23.—The Mexican government troops sent from here to the Sierra Madre mountains to suppress the Yaqui and Mayo Indian uprising are unable to put down the rebellion. The Indians, to the number of about 5,000 have their rendezvous in almost inaccessible canyons of the Yaqui river, and bands of them continue to make frequent raids upon the settlers. Dozens of families have been massacred during the past few weeks, and the troops have been powerless to prevent the depredations.

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—Ginger Bread: Mix together one cup of molasses, one tablespoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of ginger and two cups of flour. Add one teaspoonful of soda dissolved in one cup of boiling water. Mix well and bake in rather a quick oven.—Boston Budget.

—Sauce.—Braid together half a cupful of butter, two-thirds cupful of white sugar, two spoonfuls of flour, pour over it half a pint of boiling water, set over the fire and stir until it boils; add juice of canned berries to flavor and color.—N. Y. Observer.

—Waffles: One pint flour, one teaspoon baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, four eggs, one and one-fourth cups milk, one tablespoon butter, melted. Mix in the order given, add the beaten yolks with the milk, then the melted butter and the whites last. Bake on hot, well-greased waffle-irons.—Household Monthly.

—Hollandaise Sauce: A cup of butter, yolks of three eggs, a dust of cayenne pepper, juice of half a lemon, half a cup of boiling water and half a teaspoonful of salt. Beat the butter to a cream, add the eggs one by one, beating well; add the lemon juice with salt and pepper. Cook it in a double kettle and beat with an egg-beater until it thickens; add the boiling water and beat until smooth.—Housekeeper.

—The old-fashioned custom of removing the cloth before the dessert, leaving the bare mahogony, is being revived by those who are fortunate enough to possess a valuable heirloom in the way of an old table which has been kept polished with much rubbing through several generations. There is something mysteriously beautiful in the dark depths of such a piece of wood which is impossible to imitate in laquers and modern veneer.—N. Y. Tribune.

—Boiled Ham: Wash a ten-pound ham well in cold water. Put in a boiler, fill with cold water, add a dozen whole cloves, a blade of mace, six peppercorns and a bay leaf. Set over a slow fire and bring very gradually to a boil. Skim, and let simmer gently to every pound. When done, allow the ham to cool in the liquor, then remove the skin, and brush over with a beaten egg; sprinkle with grated bread-crumbs and brown sugar. Set in the oven to brown. Garnish with parsley; serve with horseradish sauce.—Harper's Bazar.

—Burnt-Match Holder: A broken fan may be spread, fastened together and hung in a convenient place to receive burnt matches, thus making a useful as well as ornamental article. It does not take much time or thought to provide many handy little articles for the home; nevertheless, there is a noticeable scarcity of conveniences in some homes. Many ladies put broken fans in the rag bag or give them to the children to destroy, without thinking that they might be fashioned into hair-receivers, burnt-match holders, letter-racks or small scrap-holders.—Prairie Farmer.

NEW GOWNS ARE COSTLY.

But It Is a Favorable Season for Making Over Old Ones.

If this is an expensive year for buying new gowns, it is a most encouraging time for fixing over old ones. Cut off the train of a last year's dress so that not more than two inches rest on the ground. Cut off the waist and hook the skirt up over it. Put in full mutton-leg sleeves of velvet to the wrist if the dress is for day wear; make empire puffs of velvet if it is for evening use. Take a strip of bias velvet six or seven inches wide, wrinkle it to a fitted belt, leaving ends of the velvet four inches longer than the belt in the back. Fold back two inches and shirr these double ends at the edge of the belt, leaving the ruffle thus formed to stand out a little bit in a sort of a rosette. Make the collar in the same way, wrinkling it to a band and shirring the ends to have them too to stand out a little bit at the back where the collar should hook. In selecting the velvet choose some striking color contrast and you will not be so very passe after all. One of the prettiest dinner dresses seen this season is one which has already done duty as a calling gown during the summer. The gown is a changeable brown and gold affair with a fine line of bronze in the stripe. It was short work to replace the long sleeves with immense puffs of the new violet velvet, to cut away the neck and surround it with a violet velvet collar over one of dead gold satin, and to finish the edge of the train with a twist of velvet lined with and so arranged as to show both colors. Violet gloves and a black gauze fan with golden sticks finish the costume which a quick-witted woman devised in an emergency and fixed herself with the aid of a seamstress.—N. Y. Sun.

Velvet Wraps.

For handsome wraps black velvet is no doubt the first choice. It may be trimmed with rich furs or with jet. It is always made up in some loose, flowing shape, like the Watteau coat, which has a full pleat, back and front, and thus avoids the use of seams. Pingat sends over loose coats of black satin black velvet in which the black satin forms a sort of under-garment, while the black velvet falls from the shoulders at the back in the shape of a mantle and appears again in front and in the huge puffed sleeve. The satin portion of such a garment is usually elaborately embroidered with gold or jet. There are also many garments of black Bengaline silk with large velvet sleeves. —N. Y. Tribune.

—A rural farming district in Michigan has provided itself with a telegraph line eight miles in length, connecting a large number of scattered farms with the village store, the proprietor of which officiates as telegraph operator, express agent, postmaster and so on. The total cash expenditure for the outfit is said to have been only some $200, while the expense of maintenance, which is but a trifling sum, is assessed equally upon the owners. The small cost and enormous convenience of such a system as this in country districts ought to lead to a more general adoption of the plan. Especially, after the expiration of the telephone patents in 1894, such a system of intercommunication by wire would be possible in every township throughout the country.

—"We are going to have pie for dinner," said Bobby to the minister. "Indeed," laughed the clergyman, amused at the little boy's artlessness; "and what kind of pie, Bobby?" "It's a new kind. Ma was talking this morning about pa bringing you to dinner so often, and pa said he didn't care what she thought, and ma said she'd make him eat humble pie before the day was over; and I suppose we're goin' to have it for dinner."—San Francisco Wasp.

IT SAVED HIS BABY.

God bless the children. Anything that alleviates their sufferings and that restores them to health when they are afflicted is deserving of great praise. When we consider that half the population of the world die before they reach the age of five years, we can see what a boon any remedy is that banishes the chief danger of childhood, for eighty per cent. of deaths in these infants come from croup. Mothers will read the following epistle with interest.

ANOTHER year of life is spent,
To mingle with the past—
Another year, of whose intent
We nothing know, to us is sent,
And holds our dreaming fast.

To thee, New Year, with questioning gaze
Our vision oft is turned;
But all within the mystic maze
Is wrapped in hope's alluring haze,
And we are still unlearned—

Unlearned of all that lies within
Thy future's secret hold,
Uncertain what we may begin,
So swift the whirl, so loud the din
Of life, on seconds rolled.

And yet I hope in thee, New Year,
With upward leaning trust:
The promise that in thee I rear
Is builded firm—apart from fear
And doubting's cankered rust.

And every month shall add a share
Unto a gentler mood,
And pride that in the past lay bare
Shall walk in vestment meek as fair,
In paths of highest good.

Then shall the heart that hath its mate
To loveliest themes aspire;
Not angels pure from Heaven's own gate
On sunless care in love may wait
With tenderer desire.

In thee, New Year, these trusts of mine
Shall end as seemeth best;
My faith in hope's reflecting shrine,
Beholds the light of joy in thine,
And all beyond is rest.

Welcome, new Herald—blithely blow
Our vainer thoughts away!
Welcome, with heaving breast of snow—
Hail to the sweets of thy bounty's flow—
New Year, all hail to-day!

—Paul Michel, in Once a Week.

New Year's Day.

A pause amid the busy whirl,
A milestone on the way,
A place to rest and think and hope—
Another New Year's day.

How straight the path, how clear the sky
With not a cloud to mar,
And in the golden light we see
The dazzling New Year's star.

Look where it leads, and find the clew
To joy so often sought;
What other years have failed to give,
This one has surely brought!

So many eager wishes crowd,
Of love and power and wealth—
Of dainty ease and luxury,
And of all blessings, health.

Freedom from hate and envious greed,
With charity for all;
'Tis those most need a cheering word
Who 'neath the burden fall.

So many ways to lend a hand,
So many ways to turn,
So many upward steps to take,
So many things to spurn.

So pray we eyes to see the grace
Of higher duties still,
And grateful hearts, unmurmuring,
To do a Father's will.

—Golden Days.

A "PROMISED LAND" New Year.

[Original.]

"YOU'RE goin' to have some good neighbors," remarked the storekeeper and postmaster of the little Oklahoma settlement to the stranger who had alighted from the evening stage.

"That you will, Mister Sweet, an' they ain't all men neither," put in the storekeeper's assistant.

"I don't know much about women's company," answered the newcomer. He had purchased a claim near by and was on his way to take up his residence on it.

"Th' pluckiest of 'em all," remarked a settler called "Sunflower Jones," a formerly of Kansas man, "is th' woman next you. When th' territory was opened she got in line with th' rest an' made th' best time of any. Her horse was all lather when she got to the claim an' almost died, but she's holdin' down a quarter section that's a little fortune in itself and she's lived eight months on it now."

"I'll be glad to meet her," said Sweet, and he asked for a sleeping place for the night.

The late December days were not severely cold. The sun rides high over the "Promised Land," as Oklahoma is called by its admirers, and Japhet Sweet, settling down from a five years' wandering through the west, found that the little summer cabin, with its two tiny rooms—precisely like the dozen other cabins on neighboring claims—would be warm enough for the winter's use.

But the place needed some repairing, and during the next week he was busily at work and saw scarcely anybody. Then one day an incident occurred that changed the whole tenor of his life.

It was the afternoon of a dull, gray Saturday, and he was sitting by his crackling fire thinking, if the truth must be told, of his lonesome bachelorhood existence and of some happenings of the days of youth "back east" which he wished might have resulted differently. It would be so cozy, he mused, to have a wife over on the other side of the fire and to—a noise outside startled him from his revery.

Creeping to the window, he pulled aside the cheap curtain and saw two rough-looking men on horseback, watering their horses at the pump. They wore wide-brimmed hats and big spurs glistened on their heels.

They were quite near, and though there was a crisp breeze he could hear their conversation.

"It's th' biggest snap I ever struck," one was saying.

"Certain of it?" sneered the other.

"I know it. Th' gal filed on th' quarter section all right, but in th' rush that everybody made at th' openin' she got the lines mixed somehow and put her shack over on some Indian land, eight rods from her quarter."

"Well, what of it?"

"Why there's got ter be a buildin' on th' land before the first of th' year—an' the' time's up at midnight."

"Do you expect to get it?"

"If you'll help. I've got a little cabin loaded on a cart over in the ravine by the river, an' if you'll hitch up with me we'll jerk it on the land sharp at daylight an' it'll be ours. There's money in it. Th' railroad's sure goin' ter run through—hold up there!" this last to one of the horses which had tangled its bridle rein.

The animals lifted their heads and at the touch of the big spurs were off.

Sweet watched them until they were only moving specs against the grayish brown of the prairie, and then, as if he had solved a problem, danced around the room.

"Women's rights have got ter be respected," he mattered, as he saddled his best horse and started for the settlement.

The storekeeper laughed when he heard Japhet's plan, though he had been serious enough when the situation regarding the land was shown him.

"Mistakes in boundaries often catches people in this country," he remarked, "but we'll fix it. We'll 'whitecap' her—that's what it'll be," and he haw-hawed in his bluff, hearty manner until his wife came running in to ask what had happened.

Two messengers were sent out to request the settlers to gather at the store that night.

At ten o'clock all were there—twenty of them, mounted on wiry ponies with big Texas saddles having lariats swinging at the bows. They made a ferocious appearing company there in the moonlight.

A number of conferences were had among the leaders and now and then a smothered laugh could be heard from beneath some broad white hat.

"ALL READY, BOYS; GET UP!"

"She was mighty plucky, but it seems it didn't count," philosophized Sunflower Jones.

"Yes, it did, for if she wasn't plucky she'd have to fight her own way," paradoxically retorted the storekeeper.

"Sure it's her land, are you?"

"Course we are—ain't another woman got a claim for twenty miles around. I know 'em all," replied the storekeeper, emphatically. "Besides we can tell by the government corner stones when we get there."

After a little more conferring the score of sturdy settlers cantered away like a squad of cavalry over the rolling prairie, the long-looped lariats flapping at the saddle bows keeping time with the swish of the ponies' hoofs through the grass.

Grace Warner had grown used to living alone. When at first she had undertaken the task of winning for herself a competence in the new prairie land, she had spent many an hour mourning over the comforts and friendships of her old New England home. She had grown used to her strange life, however, and was already looking forward to the period when, with a rich return for her effort and time, she could go back to the old life.

To-night in the last hours of the year she sat long by the fire musing on time's disappointments and changes. She was not young, but, as she sat in the firelight, a comelier picture it would have been hard to find. Content in her work on the claim and satisfied that she had a competence ahead, she still wore a smiling countenance in spite of the somewhat somber character of her cogitations.

And when she slept it was with the gloom all swept away and happy dreams making life ideal and existence an unalloyed pleasure.

Suddenly she was awakened by a grating, grinding noise and a feeling of motion.

"What is it?" she gasped, half doubting whether it were a part of her dream or not.

Then as consciousness came to her more fully she exclaimed: "It's—an—earthquake!"

It really seemed the most plausible explanation.

But the motion did not stop. All the time she could feel that she was moving, moving, moving.

Then she heard voices outside and in an instant she had thrown on a dress and was peeping through a rent in the curtain. She gazed on a remarkable sight.

Twenty horses stood in an irregular mass before the house. On each horse was a man, and from the immense pommel of every saddle reached a rope which seemed to be attached to the building. They were resting now and she hurried to the door.

"Keep in, there; you'll get hurt!" called the hearty voice of the storekeeper. She recognized him and was confident that she was in the hands of friends, though she did not understand their action.

"We're givin' you a ride," half laughed Japhet. "All ready, boys. Get up!"

With considerable see-sawing the horses strained on the ropes and the little cabin, which had been quietly wound round and round with the strong rawhide lariats, followed the party with a jolting, bumping, rasping sound over the level sod. They stopped and Grace went out.

"We're going to get you on your own land for sure to begin the New Year with," remarked Sweet, and an idea of what it all meant broke on her mind.

But she was more intent on studying the stranger's face half revealed in the moonlight. She thanked them, and then it was Japhet's turn to be mystified. He came closer, holding out his hand.

"Grace," he ejaculated, doubtfully, "is it really you?"

"Japhet!" she answered, taking the hard brown hand in both her slender white ones.

"Come, you folks, don't spoon there when there's work to do," called out Sunflower Jones. "We ain't got to the line yet."

But the leader's work was done for that night. He withdrew with his companion to one side and let the settlers go on.

Another pull and yet another was necessary before the boundary line was passed beyond all question. Then the lariats were hung in coils on the saddles and the visitors prepared to leave.

Grace and Japhet had been talking eagerly. He had told her of a rumor of her marriage which had come to him among the hills of Colorado and she had whispered something about "waiting so long—discouraged—home broken up—trying the west—my claim." Then he had shyly replied: "We will carry out the old contract!" and she answered with a blush.

"I am sorry, gentlemen, that I cannot return your kindness even by a cup of coffee," said she, aloud, "but you see that the ride you have given my house has shaken down the stovepipe."

"But I'll tell you what we'll do," put in Japhet; "come back here at noon today (for it's nearly morning) and you cannot only have some coffee, but you can see us two married. We're going to begin the year together."

Then, while Grace fled to the house he briefly explained the situation, and later rode away with his comrades.

It was a merry wedding party that gathered eight hours later in the little cabin, and when the guests departed this time leaving Japhet and Grace together, they unanimously agreed that their new neighbor had secured decidedly the best and happiest return on the settlement's New Year.

WHAT SHE WOULD LIKE.

"Now, then, the new year is almost here and I want you to tell me frankly what you would like for a present. Let me know just what to get for you, there's a dear, good girl."

"How kind and thoughtful of you to remember poor little me! Well, let me see. If I only dared to tell you! If you'll promise not to think me bold I don't mind telling you that I'm just dying for a watch—one of those beautiful little gold ones, you know, with my monogram set in diamonds on the case. And a pair of diamond earrings! Oh, how I would like such a present as that Cr—"

Jeweler—You say you want some name engraved on this ring?

Young Man—Yes, I want the words "George to his dearest Alice" engraved on the inside of the ring. It is a New Year's gift to a young lady.

"Is the young lady your sister?"

"No, she's the young lady to whom I am engaged."

"Well, if I were you I would not have 'George to his dearest Alice' engraved on the ring. If Alice goes back on you, you cannot use the ring again."

"What would you suggest?"

"I would suggest that the words be 'George to his first and only love.' You see with that inscription you can use the ring half a dozen times."—Siftings.

EXERCISES FOR CHILDREN.

The Body as Well as the Mind Should Receive Especial Training.

Growing girls of twelve to sixteen are apt to be very awkward both in their movements and gestures. Sometimes they outgrow these shuffling, ugly habits of carriage and deportment without any especial effort on the part of their instructors; but it is a dangerous experiment to trust to time as the only cure for these evils. Besides, it is not only grace that is of chief importance, but the much more vital question of health. How is it possible for a body to grow and develop without the necessary amount of pure air to feed the lungs; and how can a cramped up, flat chest and narrow shoulders give the requisite supply? In arranging, therefore, for a child's winter curriculum, do not forget the body while providing for the mind; and besides the daily walks, see that the children have some form of regular exercise particularly adapted to expand the chest and improve the carriage. There are so many excellent methods now that one can hardly go astray, but perhaps a combination of the Delsartean movements with simple dumb-bell exercise would be the best. The former certainly gives grace and suppleness, and there is no better medium than the latter for developing muscle and inflating the chest. There is no need to give much time to these exercises, and in no case should gynasium work take the place of long walks in the open air; fifteen or twenty minutes' regular and daily practice is all that is necessary, and it will be found in every case to be of incalculable advantage. A breathing exercise should always accompany the manual performance. Physicians tell us that the lower part of the lungs are seldom brought into play, and that diseases both of the lungs and the stomach would be less frequent if each function of the body received continually its full share of oxygen. After the fifteen minutes' bodily exercise is over, therefore give ten minutes to a breathing exercise by inflating the lungs slowly for fifteen seconds, and then expelling the air for another fifteen seconds. During this exercise there should be no corsets or stays to confine the figure, and the teacher should see that the air enters properly the lower part of the lungs.—N. Y. Tribune.

WOODEN LEGS.

First Worn by Vulcan of Old, and His Satanic Majesty of the Dark Ages.

Who first invented wooden legs? Vulcan was a cripple, and in consequence of his difficulty in walking he is said to have made himself an artificial support of gold; but, as Mr. Thoms pointed out long ago, gold is not for every cripple, and every myth is backed by a reality. Again, the devil, as represented in the drawings and engravings of the middle ages, is a compound of Pluto and Vulcan. The latter was ejected from Olympus, the devil was cast out of Heaven. Vulcan was frequently figured with a beard and pointed cap. In the edition of Tyndale's New Testament printed by Jugge in 1552, there is a woodcut representing the devil sowing tares, and wearing not only the Vulcanian beard and pointed cap, but also a wooden leg. Another mediæval representation of the devil with a wooden leg may be found in one of the paintings on the panels of the pulpit in the ancient little church of Helgoland. It is only fair, however, to point out that the artificial support in the Tyndale woodcut resembles more a clumsy, one-legged stool, upon which the lame leg appears to be doubled up at the knee, than a substituted wooded limb. After all, this identification, so far as regards costume and lameness, of the mediæval devil and the ancient Vulcan, although it opens up a curious field of speculation to those who are learned in the matters of comparative mythology, yet throws no certain light on the question as to when the wooden leg as we know it—a complete artificial substitute for a lost limb—was first invented.—All the Year Round.

In the January Wide Awake,

Margaret Sidney's paper on "Whittier with the Children" naturally leads all others in timeliness and interest. It is sympathetic, personal and delightful, and shows the good Quaker poet as the child-lover and with that child-nature his poems have led us to ascribe to him. The article is profusely illustrated. Another leader is Frederick A. Ober's "The Bridge that Spanned the World." It deals with the localities made famous by Columbus in Spain. Kirk Munroe, the founder of the League of American Wheelmen, contributes a pithy article "About Bicycles" to the Wide Awake Athletics, and makes some sharp criticisms on the present method of "jackknifing" in the saddle. The short stories in this number are especially bright. Annie Howells Frechette's "Bill" is the study of a small boy that shows the Howells' realism in a new vein; Mary Kyle Dallas' "The Little Turk" is a tale of pluck and endeavor; Mary P. W. Smith in "Behind the Wardrobe" delights all those who love or hate aritimetic. The serial stories by W. O. Stoddard, Molly Elliot Seawell and Theodora R. Jenness are increasingly absorbing. Kate Putnam Osgood's "Ballad of the Bonny Page" is full of strength and fire; M. E. B's dog poem, "A Morning Call," Mrs. M. F. Butt's "So the Snow Comes Down," and Richard Burton's "Landlord and Tenant" are charming. The Men and Things department is full of bright paragraphs. The illustrations are beautiful. Meynelle's exquisite frontispiece of Whittier with the children, has almost the softness and strength of an oil painting, and is well worth framing.

SCIENTIFIC EXPERIMENTS.

THE imperial cholera commission in Germany announces its discovery that wine—claret or hock—will kill the bacilli of cholera in a few minutes. Tea will kill them in an hour.

PROF. A. D. HOPKINS, of the West Virginia experiment station, has arrived from Europe with a bug which he thinks will destroy the pine-tree beetle that has so seriously damaged the West Virginia pine forests.

EXPERIMENT has shown that, contrary to the general belief, water is not purified by freezing. The average amount of impurities retained after conversion into ice is 34.3 per cent. of organic matter and 21.2 per cent. of inorganic.

FROM experiments made by English scientists it appears that camphor and oxygenated water are the most energetic excitants of growth, not only as regards the acceleration of germination, but as affecting the vigor of plants.

These are Facts

Housekeepers Should Seriously Consider.

If you want the best food, you will be interested in the following facts, which show why "Royal" is the best baking powder, why it makes the best and most wholesome food, and why its use has become almost universal—its sale greater in this country than the sale of all other cream of tartar baking powders combined.

The Royal Baking Powder NEVER fails.

It is absolutely pure and wholesome.

It is combined from the most approved and healthful ingredients.

It makes the finest flavored, most tender, delicious and wholesome food.

It has greater leavening strength than any other baking powder, and is therefore the cheapest.

It never loses its strength, but will keep fresh and of full leavening power until used.

It acts slowly in the dough, so that none of its strength is lost before the baking is completed.

It makes food that will keep sweet, moist and fresh longer, or that may be eaten hot and fresh with impunity.

The reasons why the Royal Baking Powder is superior to all others in these respects are easily stated. One is because it is made from chemically pure materials; another is because it is made with greater care and accuracy than any other. It is always uniform in composition and leavening power. It has been the standard baking powder since its introduction. The founder and conductor of its business ever since is still at the head of its management. Thus all the knowledge and skill attained by over a quarter of a century's experience is available in its present preparation. The consumer is not experimented upon by changes of formula that are constantly being made in other powders in an effort to get a mixture that will not "cake" or lose its strength, or that follow changes of proprietorship or manufacturers. The Royal Baking Powder is always certain and equal in its work; a teaspoonful does the same perfect work to-day that it did yesterday, or last week or month, or last year.

While the last teaspoonful in a can of Royal is as good as the first, other powders lose their strength after being made a short time, and particularly after the can is opened.

The exactness with which the active principle of each ingredient prior to mixing is ascertained by expert chemists; the actual prohibition enforced against the receipt into the works of an impure ingredient; the care with which the materials are dried, coated and prepared before their combination, and the precision in packing the powder so that it shall be delivered to the consumer in the perfect condition in which it leaves the factory, are some of the details which go to make the perfect "Royal."

The same means are not employed by other manufacturers. There have been a great many imitations of the Royal, but no equals. Pure materials are not employed, care is not taken in their preparation and combination, while in the great majority of baking powders alum is added to give them strength, while cheapening their cost.

The great popularity and general use of the Royal Baking Powder attest its superiority.

TWO PATENTS for bottle stoppers have been issued. A patent for a mouth stopper, operating effectively when certain bottles approach, would also serve a useful purpose.

DELANO DIARY

—Our doctors have been over worked this week.

—Farmers are getting their wood sawed by steam power, and the "chopping bees" are about out of fashion.

—The M. E. Sociable was held on Wednesday evening at the residence of L. M. Maxfield, where a pleasant time was had.

—Moses Williams is assisting Brandon & Jacobs in the livery business. A real soft snap these cold frosty mornings.

—Watch meeting and sociable at the M. E. manse, on Saturday evening. Come and watch the old year out and the new one in.

—Several of Delano's F. A. and F. M's. drove over to Rockford to be present at the Installation of officers last Wednesday evening.

—Christmas and several days after were the coldest so far, of the season. The thermometer indicating from 10 to 16 below zero most of the time.

—The City Hall now contains among other attractions a nice piano. The Delano Dramatic company helped to the extent of $100. on the purchase.

—A fire at Little Falls, during the week consumed the residence of Lewis Rader, formerly of this neighborhood. His family had a narrow escape, and lost everything. No insurance.

—M. A. O'Hair has moved his office again this time down stairs. He now occupies the ground flour of the Lohmiller building. "Three removes are as bad as a fire" as Poor Richard says.

—The Christmas exercises were carried out at the various churches, in good shape and those present enjoyed the occasion very much. Especially the little folks for whose pleasure they were held.

—Cronk's corn husker is reported as having "blown up" in some way. The rollers broke and flew up into the air to quite a hight. It was run by horse power and was quite a formidable looking piece of machinery.

—Pork is selling at a good price now. Wheat is cheaper than common. It looks as if farmers would pay more attention to raising what they can best and not put everything into wheat they would do better.

—The ice crop is now being gathered. As fine ice as can be found any where, in square chunks 16 inches thick. It looks as if our citizens believe there will be a time next summer when the weather will be warmer than it is now, —Delano has a good flour mill and it is doing a good business now Mr. Parsons seems to have the confidence of his customers and they are not only sure of getting their sacks back but a good grade of flour. A good mill is an acquisition to any town.

—Henry E. Grafft is attending T. J. Caton's Business college in Minneapolis. He says it is a grand place for a young man to learn the ways of the business world. An examination of the applicants is made and only those sufficiently advanced can enter the higher classes.

—Among Delanoites who went to Rockford, on Monday evening for the purpose of tripping the light fantastic toe were Misses Maud Sherry, Stella Jacobs and Allie Murphy and Messrs. Moses Williams and Guy Murphy.

LATER Guy informs us the dance was postponed and they didn't go.

—Secure your copy of the New York World Almanac. The encyclopoedia of the people, carefully prepared to date. $1.18 secures the BUFFALO GAZETTE one year and the World Almanac. Old subscribers paying arrearages and one year in advance counted in. See advertisement of Almanac in another column.

—Charles C. Ames son of Ex Mayor Ames, of Minneapolis and a nephew of Dr. C. B. Ames, of Rockford, became stiff from cold and fell from a telegraph pole a distance of 40 feet and broke his neck on Saturday last, while repairing a government telegraph line. He leaves a wife and a three year old child.

—Ernest Kurtz is traveling on one foot at present. Yesterday as he was finishing a shoe the horse stamped, striking him on the foot and driving a long cork through just below the instep. Several small bones are fractured and it is a very painful wound.—Howard Lake Herald.

Ernest has the sympathy of many Delano friends in these his hours of affliction.

—Read Prof. Johnson's letter from the St. Cloud Normal school.

—About three inches of snow fell last night and today and sleighing is now very fine.

—A sociable and watch meeting at the M. E. parsonage on Saturday evening. Everybody come.

—The Eagle, true to her nature has pounced down upon another little boy. We presume "Jim" Murphy.

—The Delano Dramatic club played last night. The house was well filled and every body thinks that home talent is as good as any even for a theater.

—We are in receipt of the annual report of the Postmaster General of the United States. It contains quite a little matter of general interest to the public.

—The week of Prayer is to be observed at the M. E. church commencing with Sabbath evening's services. All are invited to be present and participate in the exercises.

—John W. McDonald, late traveling salesman for the Eagle paper house, has moved to Minneapolis, where he expects to engage in the same business for Gass, Todd & Co.

—J. H. Thompson of Minneapolis was installing officer at the 23rd anniversary of the Rockford Masonic Lodge which was held on Wednesday evening. He enjoyed a visit with many old friends.

—On Thursday, Mrs. Metcalf of Minneapolis, Nee Miss Terwal; who formerly resided a couple of miles east of Delano was buried at this place. A number of friends accompanied the remains to this place.

—We have on hand a few sample copies of the "Cosmopolitan" for October and November, which we would be pleased to give to some one who wishes to subscribe for the Magazine and the GAZETTE for one year for $3.40

—Bukoski vs. Bukoski is a suit between John and Edward Bukoski concerning the collection of a note. It appeared before Justice Billings, on Wednesday and a change of venue was granted to Justice Catlin, to be heard, on Wednesday, January. 4, 1893.

—The Eagle, this week, lets herself down some more. She says something about "nonsense" in the GAZETTE and says people "read it," and that they say "That paper just makes me sick." Why! it is enough to make any law abiding citizen feel tired at least, to read the state school law and compare it with the arbitrary rules advocated by the school board. We presume that is the portion off the GAZETTE most objectionable to the Eagle.

—Delano has a superabundance of worthless dogs, and if the mad dog scare should reach this place there would be a big job for some one to dispatch all the canines. It would be well to get rid of what are not needed and keep a look out for the others and kill them on occurrence of the first symptoms of disorder of any kind as a preventive measure against the disease. This is a case where "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

—Whatever the Eagle, or any one else, says to the contrary, the fact remains the same. Children in our public school were asked to pay list price for books or leave school, and although the books were but slightly damaged the children are out of school. Charles Wiese, Jr., has been out for several months for going through a raditor in the flour. This is not a lawful or a proper method of collecting damage. It don't have a tendency to improve the boys either, and must cease.

—Let every boy and girl of schoolable age be on hand promptly at nine oclock when school opens after vacation. Whether you are suspended or not. Be there and get your share of the school district books, and take good care of them, and study them and learn all you can. This is a free country and has laws governing its schools, and our school board, or any other, cannot trample them under foot very long at a time.

C. A. Pidgeon of Buffalo is mentioned as a candidate for the position of Insurance Commissioner. We know of no reason why he would not fill the bill.

Compare this State school law and Delano school rule, and see if they coincide. They simply show that "law or no law" is the motto of one.

RESOLUTION added to rule 4, of the Delano Independent School District:

"If any pupil damage or destroy any book belonging to the District he or she shall pay the actual cost or value thereof and such book shall then be the property of such pupils."

NINTH—To make rules and regulations respecting the protection, care and safe keeping of the property of the district, and to prescribe penalties for the breach thereof, to be recovered as penalties in other cases before a justice of the peace, and to change and repeal the same.

A good story is going the rounds showing the ability of Wright county preachers to depend themselves physically, as well as mentally and spiritually speaking. Rev. Davis, of Buffalo, recently visited the Hamline University and was being shown the institution, including its gymnasium, even to the boxing gloves, which latter he was, after a little coaxing, and showing, induced to don, soon forgetting the world, it is said that with some remarks about Corbett and Sullivan he proceeded to knock out several of the advanced students and considerably lower Hamline's pride.

Our country millers are complaining considerably about the monopoly of the flour trade by Minneapolis millers. It is impossible to sell flour in Flour city except in some round about "blind pig" style, and unless things change it may prove a good thing for the country in teaching them to trade at home all they can. We don't believe in this monopoly business. There may be millions in it for somebody, but to the small mills from the country there is loss of trade while the city poorer people, we understand, are obliged to pay the old rate for flour although wheat is cheap.

H. E. Crandall one of Wright County's teachers, and the man who, two years ago came so near defeating Mr. Lindsley for Superintendant of Schools has something to say in this weeks Eagle concerning the preservation of school books. It is very good. But, in closing he says "I say that it is high time that parents teach their children that school district property is their own to cherish use and preserve." That is just the point. And if that is a fact, it is wrong to expel them from school for damaging what belongs to them. There are other ways of collecting damage.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?

But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?

And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?

And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machines of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.

This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GRAND PRIZE, giving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

That is how the puzzle of the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.

And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory.
